PUBLISHER'S NOTE

The history contained in this volume is the result of many years of faithful and painstaking labor on the part of the author. Spending most of the evenings of an active business life, stealing time also from his limited hours for rest in the summer in collecting and recording most accurately whatever he found to be connected with the history and growth of the Jones family tree since it was planted in the soil of Long Island; and tracing it in all its branches down to the present time. That it did not reach the perfection and finish intended by the author is owing to his sudden illness and death. Knowing that it was his wish that these records should be made useful to the family and appreciating their great value, to them, in the present as well as the future, his friends have assisted in publishing this book, with the desire that it should be a loving tribute to his memory.

HELEN F. JONES.

April, 1907.

PREFACE

“By an exact and scrupulous diligence and observation out of the monuments, names, words, proverbs, traditions, private records, and evidences, fragments of stories, passages of books that concern not story, and the like we do save and recover somewhat from the deluge of Time.”

How well this was understood and made an integral part of the life-work of one of our collateral relatives is plainly shown by the heritage he has left us in the shape of family, and historical records (many of which were unfortunately destroyed by fire just previous to his death), from which the ground work of the one now before us formed but a small part.

Some years before his death a friendship sprung up between us that increased with time, during which interval he gave me not only what was the nucleus of this work, but many hours of historical instruction from a mind well ripened by the observations and investigations of one past three score years and ten, and for whose scholarly learning so generously given, we are most deeply indebted in the person of the late Mr. Charles B. Moore, a charter member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society, and a long and well-known member of the New York Bar.

This record of the Jones family, as we now have it, is the result of investigations made by Mr. Moore and myself after many years of labor.

All of the facts herein recorded pertaining to the family ancestor, Major Thomas Jones (excepting as otherwise specified), have been entirely compiled by me. Those pertaining to the judicial career of David Jones (II. 2), the first Judge; Thomas Jones (III. 3), the second Judge; Samuel Jones (III. 8), the third Judge; Samuel Jones

(IV. 3), the Chancellor; and David R. Floyd-Jones (7), the Lieutenant-Governor, are mostly the work and views entertained by Mr. Moore; to which are added many facts obtained from other sources. (J. H. J., VI. 76).

The history of this family of Long Island has never been written as yet to any great extent. Numerous biographical accounts of individual members have from time to time found their way into print, and local historians have pursued it in a measure. Edward Floyd de Lancey, the editor of "Thomas Jones History of New York during the Revolutionary War," in his introduction to the same, has given us a very fair and satisfactory account of the family embracing the first three generations. William Alfred Jones (V. 49), called the family historian, a writer of some repute, has written a sketch of the family in his "Memorial of the Hon. David S. Jones" (IV. 7), his father; and Mrs. Wm. Sidney Smith, a daughter of Major William Jones (IV., 4), has given us a similar account in her "Golden Wedding Mementoes" of herself and husband.

Thompson in his "History of Long Island" has given us the earliest account we have in printed form, but he as well as more recent historians were prone to record fictitious and hearsay family matters, which when put in form of history are hard to disprove. His biographical sketch of the family was, we are told, in the main written by the Hon. David S. Jones (IV. 7).

Concerning the orthography of the family name we are told by William Alfred Jones that the "primitive orthography, Johnes, retained by the latest translators of Froissart, and to be found in this city, is undoubtedly the correct way of spelling it. It is sometimes written Johns, evidently a contraction of the former, and which again softened appears as one of the standard names of the Welsh."

Long Island, the exclusive home of this family, contains the descendants of several distinct families bearing the name of Jones and Johns whose ancestors are of such an early date, and concerning whom we have such meagre records, that the existing kinship, if there is any, is indefinable.

In the small village of Cold Spring Harbor we find three distinct families of Jones with a similarity of Christian names, that to a later day compiler would cause much confusion. Thus in the Johnes family of Southampton, Suffolk Co., L. I., whose history has been written, we find an evidence of this in the statement on page four, that Rear-Admiral Melancton Smith married Mary Johnes, daughter of Thomas Johnes, from which we would infer that she was of that family, when in reality she was the daughter of Thomas Jones (IV. 6) of this family.

In the matter of Armorial rights pertaining to this family, there seems to be some diversity of opinion. So far as can be learned the earlier generations did not use or claim any coat-of-arms. Judge Thomas Jones (III. 3), grandson of Major Thomas Jones (I. 1) appears to have been the first of the family to use or have in his possession a coat-of-arms. After his death in 1792 in England, his widow became possessed of his seal ring which bore upon its face the following device :

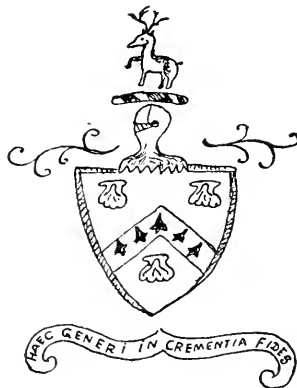

His widow being a daughter of Lieut. Gov. James de Lancey, and leaving no issue, the ring descended to certain members of that family, who at a very recent date exhibited the same with the suggestion, that the coat-of-arms was that of the Jones family.

Another coat-of-arms, and one that has been in general use by the family is shown by the following print:

The original print from which this is taken is now in my possession, and which descended to me from Maj. Walter Jones (III. 13) was formerly in the possession of Samuel Jones (IV. 3), the Chief Justice and Chancellor, and bears his name underneath the inscribed motto.

The Townsend coat-of-arms, to which family the maternal ancestor of the Jones family belonged, is as follows: (See New England Hist. and Gen. Register, XXIX, p. 97.)

CREST—A stag, passant, proper.

ANCESTOR OF THE JONES FAMILY OF LONG ISLAND

There were other and earlier Joneses on Long Island, some of whom for their day and generation gained considerable repute and were in good standing with the early Dutch and English settlers.

There were some bearing the same family Christian names who were contemporaneous with our ancestral immigrant, and who must have been known to him at least; but no clue can be found from any records, either private or public, to show that he was in any way related to a single individual bearing his name in this country.

On this point he was singularly reticent; even history, which generally professes or assumes to know something about such matters, is painfully quiet, and has not a word to say as to who his progenitors were.

He himself sums up his whole life previous to his immigration in these few words: "From distant lands to this wild waste he came," and bequeathed that only information to us in letters of stone, it being a part of the epitaph he caused to be placed upon his headstone. Further in the same epitaph he prays "that no ill fate his offspring e'er annoy." This, generally speaking, has been granted him, for his descendants (barring those who died in infancy) with but few exceptions have lived long and honorable lives; in fact, the longevity of the family is one of its noted characteristics.

This apparent reluctance on his part to give to posterity his earlier history became the entering wedge for local historians to write fictitious stories concerning him. If his children knew of his antecedents, the knowledge lies buried with them, and it is only from very limited sources that any authentic facts or records concerning him, previous to his immigration, can be found.

Mr. Charles B. Moore, of whom we have spoken, and who married a great granddaughter of Maj. Thomas Jones (I. 1), endeavored to trace his ancestors in England, but his efforts were in a measure fruitless.

Knowing the course he pursued here, and of those under the Crown who favored him in this country, he sought to find and connect with him, if possible, those bearing his name in England who might have acted his part. Acting on this assumption he was of the opinion that he was descended from Edward Jones, Bishop of Cloyne in Ireland, who later became Bishop of St. Asaph's in England, a son of Sir Thomas Jones, Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas of Westminster.

The only memoranda we have seen regarding Major Thos. Jones's antecedents are as follows, and were recently found among the papers left by Charles H. Jones (IV. 34), and bear the date of 1833, but no signature:

"The heiress and daughter of an Irish (—) was said to be the mother of Maj. Thos. Jones, and that he was probably born in Ireland, his father having been a William from some part of Wales."

The other, in a different handwriting, recites:

"Thomas Jones came from Strabane, in Ireland, to Rhode Island, where he married Freelove, daughter of Thos. Townsend. He fitted out a privateer and was absent three years, during which time he made several captures. His father-in-law moved to Oyster Bay with his wife (perhaps meaning Mrs. Jones), and on his return he came to Oyster Bay also and from there he went to Fort Neck, on the south side of Long Island." (Dated Aug., 1833.)

There were many persons bearing the name of Thos. Jones who came to this country from England previous to 1700, but no records are extant to show that they were in any way related to Maj. Thos. Jones. (See Hotton's "Original Lists of Persons of Quality, &c., who came from Gt. Britain.")

An early Thos. Jones, who settled in Huntington, L. I., left a will, proved at Southampton, 2 Mch, 1699, naming his wife Katharine as executrix, with legacies to his children, Thomas, John and Martha (Liber 1, folio 72, N. Y. City). His widow was living at Huntington in 1681 and conveyed land there to her children. (Huntington Recds. by C. R. Street, vol. 1, p. 301.) (For other early Joneses of L. I., see appendix.)

It is a matter of family tradition that Maj. Thomas Jones was descended from an Irish family that intermarried with one from Wales, supposed to have originated in Merionetshire or Glamorganshire.

The origin of the family is, beyond a doubt, Welsh; not only is the name indicative of this, but the traits and characteristics of the Welsh race are very pronounced in all its leading members, the transmission of which can be noted in the female lines in many of its allied families.

To quote the words of Edward F. de Lancey, whose great aunt, Anne Charlotte de Lancey, daughter of Gov. James de Lancey, married Judge Thomas Jones (III. 3), "The distinguishing characteristics of the family are penetration, judgment, independence, resolution, clearness of intellect, strength of memory, coolness, determination of action, and high honor, united with a temperament sanguine and choleric, great fearlessness, and a disposition extremely social and hospitable."

Other characteristics of the family, those not based upon the ideas of any one individual, are its longevity, the excellence of its matrimonial alliances, the great eminence which many of its members have obtained in legal jurisprudence, and the continuance of the latter through successive generations. On this point the great novelist, James Fenimore Cooper, in a letter to the Home Journal under date of 6 May, 1848, wrote: "The Jones family has furnished legislators and jurists to the colony and State for more than a century."

To more fully set forth the judicial calling of the family the following resumé will suffice:

Commencing with Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1), we find him shortly after his arrival on Long Island (about 1704) holding the official position of High Sheriff, and in 1710 was Justice of the Peace for Queens Co. (Doc. Hist. of N. Y., Vol. III., p. 215). After his decease his eldest son, David (II. 2), became Judge of Queens Co. in 1734, who in 1763 was 2d Justice of the Supreme Court of N. Y., sitting for ten years, when he was succeeded by his son Thomas (III. 3), who was Recorder of the City of New York and Judge of the Supreme Court, which latter office he held until the close of the Revolutionary War, when for his adherence to the Crown he was forced to leave the country for England, where he wrote his history of "New York During the Revolutionary War."

Following him we have his cousin, Samuel Jones (III. 8), a son of William Jones (II. 7), called the "father of the New York Bar," who in 1789 was Recorder of the City of New York and from 1797 to 1800 was Comptroller of the State of New York. Next in order of succession we have his son, Samuel (IV. 3), who in 1825 was Chancellor of the State of New York, and at the age of 75 years was judge of the Supreme Court of the City of New York, then judge of Court of Appeals, and later, after his retirement from the Bench, practised law until his death in 1853, when he had attained the age of 85 years. Then Samuel W. Jones (V. 13), son of Maj. William and nephew of Samuel (IV. 3), who was County Judge, and Surrogate of Schenectady Co. Then David S. (IV. 7), a brother of Samuel (IV. 3), and lastly Samuel (V. 8), a son of Samuel (IV. 3), the seventh and last judge of the family, who in 1892 was judge of the Supreme Court of N. Y. City.

Thus for a period of nearly 200 years, embracing the time from 1700 to 1892, the Bar and Bench of the City and State of New York have been represented by some member of the family and almost without intermission.

The descendants of Maj. Thos. Jones, now at the close of the 19th century, are very numerous and widespread, and the families of the earlier generations were large and generally attained great age.

Maj. Thos. Jones left seven surviving children, who for the third generation gave us thirty-five children. Beyond this we can give no accurate estimate, as the records through the female lines are somewhat incomplete. Of these thirty-five children, fifteen were of the family of William Jones (II. 7), to whom we are indebted for the preservation of the family name, as his elder brother, Thomas (II. 4), never married, and the children of David Jones (II. 2), his next oldest brother, left no male issue. He, in all justice to his father, we might call the head of the family. He was born in 1708, and died in the 72d year of his age, leaving to posterity a record of fifteen children and ninety-five grandchildren, eighty-five of whom were born previous to his decease. His widow (daughter of the 2d Col. John Jackson), survived him twenty years and died at the age of 86, who previous to her death stood a living testimonial of this large number of grandchildren.

Another characteristic of the family is its longevity. Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1) attained the age of 60 years (this is conjectural); his son, David (II. 2), died at age of 76, and his youngest son, William (II. 7), died in his 72d year.

Of the children of this William (II. 7), David (III. 7), died at the age of 85; Samuel (III. 8), at 85; William (III. 9), at 84; John (III. 12), at 65; Walter (III. 13), at 71; Richard (III. 14), at 84; Jackson (III. 15), at 76; Margaret (III. 20), at 71; Freelove (III. 16), at 79; Phebe (III. 19), at 83; and Sarah (III. 18), at 84.

John (III. 12), son of William (II. 7), left a family of nine children, of whom William H. (IV. 25), died at the age of 83; John H. (IV. 27), at 74; Sarah (IV. 28), at 84; Walter R. (IV. 30), at 62; Phebe (IV. 31), at 77; Elizabeth (IV. 32), at 71; Joshua T. (IV. 33), at 54; and Charles H. (IV. 34), at 78.

Following in the line of John H. Jones (IV. 27), son of John (III. 12), whose children are of the 5th generation, we note Frances, who died at age of 80 years; Townsend, at 70; William E., at 66; John D., at 81; and Samuel A., at 82.

In the matter of religious belief we find a remarkable fact. From Maj. Thos. Jones down to the present time all, with but very few exceptions, have been members of the Episcopal Church, and where these exceptions have occurred their religious calling has been that of the Friends.

In view of the fact that Maj. Thos. Jones's wife was the daughter of a noted Quaker (who was forced to leave Long Island by the Dutch settlers), we consider this quite remarkable. This adherence to the Episcopal Church seems to have been bequeathed to the family as an inheritance (if I may use the expression) from its ancestral immigrant, Maj. Thos. Jones; for we find him very soon after his arrival here strongly supporting the Church of England against all dissenters, and at the same time his wife baptized into the faith by the Rev. Geo. Keith, while she in her turn also watched over the spiritual welfare of her children and had them baptized in that faith also. Curiously enough his earliest identification in an official way on Long Island was his election by the freeholders of the town of Oyster Bay to the office of Church Warden, and later, at the close of his life, we find him naming his "beloved wife, Freelove," and his "loving friend, John Thomas," executors of his will. This John Thomas was the first and noted rector of St. George's Episcopal Church of Hempstead, L. I.

In politics we find much diversity of opinion. The first three generations generally supported the Court or Royal party, but William Jones (II. 7), son of Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1), who to all intents and purposes supported the Royal cause, yet at heart was strongly in favor of the Congressional party, to which the Jackson family (to which his wife belonged) vigorously adhered.

Matrimonial alliances and the prestige that in some cases followed had much to do in shaping the political courses of the earlier members.

Many during the Revolutionary War and after its close were Whigs, but at the period of the Civil War (1861) those who held positions in public life were mainly Democrats. Throughout that war many supported the Republican party.

Some were in active service and took up arms in defence of their country. Among the first were Lient. David Jones (III. 5), who lost his life in the French and English War, and Maj. Thomas Jones (II. 4), a son of the first Major Thomas. Others, though remaining passive throughout the Revolutionary War, received at its close various military commissions. Of these Walter Jones (III. 13), then living at South Oyster Bay, was commissioned First Major of the Oyster Bay Militia in 1786. Of the later ones we note Col. Delancey Floyd-Jones (16), who served with distinction in the war with Mexico and also the Civil War.

As Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1), favored his posterity with no account of himself previous to his immigration, various traditions have descended to us concerning him. One of these represents him to have been a pirate, in which vocation the same tradition assures us "he amassed incredible wealth."

This alleged piracy we must refute, as no facts can be had to sustain it. For this and other accusations of a like nature, we have to thank Thompson, the Long Island historian, who no doubt made up his story from an allusion to the same in William Smith's History of N. Y., or perhaps from Lieut. Gov. Colden's letter to his son written in 1759 (now published in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. Publications for 1869, Vol. 2, p. 206) wherein he says, "While Colonel Fletcher was Governor the inhabitants of New York carried on a trade to Madagascar while that island was frequented by pirates. and that many of the pirates came and dispersed on Long Island and around Delaware Bay. It has often been remarked that none of the pirates made any use of their money to any real advantage excepting one Jones, who settled on the south side of Long Island, and whose son made a remarkable figure as Speaker of Assembly while Mr. Clinton was Governor; excepting this one no remains of the others are to be discovered."

In refutation of this we will say that Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1) was in action at the Battle of the Boyne, 1690, and as compensation for services rendered King James II. granted him a commission to cruise against Spanish property. If this constituted his so-called piratical career it was a short one, for two years later he was located at Portsmouth, Rhode Island, from whence in 1695 he removed to Long Island. Russel in his life of the noted pirate, Dampier, and Esquemeling, in his history of the "Bucaniers of America," printed in 1685, gives us many names of the pirates of those times, but none bearing the name of Jones. Concerning his movements during the period elapsed between his arrival in Rhode Island and his removal to Oyster Bay on Long Island, we know nothing. He then in all probability was engaged in the privateering business, but that was far from being a pirate.

Privateers were private citizens, owners of vessels, whom the government in times of war commissioned to proceed against the enemy, who, if captured, the commission entitled them to be treated as prisoners of war. Todd, in his History of N. Y., states that "these privateers sometimes returned to N. Y. and entered their cargo in the Admiralty Court where it was sold; others would run to the island of Madagascar, where merchant ships were to be found in waiting sent out by some firm in New York."

Privateering in those days was a legitimate business, and all who could enter into it did so. Governor Fletcher openly granted private captains licenses and shared their spoils; for this he was recalled.

From 1692 to 1698 (while Fletcher was Governor) Maj. Thos. Jones was connected with the enterprising trader, Thomas Townsend, of Rhode Island, who later became his father-in-law, and who had interests on Long Island. Wilson, in his Hist. of N. Y., Vol. III., p. 31, states "even Quakers tolerated occasional visits from pirates because they spent their money freely." (Thomas Townsend was a Quaker.)

That Maj. Thos. Jones was charged with being a pirate was nothing strange. Coming as he did to Oyster Bay when it was the chief centre of the privateering business during Gov. Fletcher's administration, and being on friendly terms with him, as he was also with Matthias Nicoll and Thos. Willett, members of Fletcher's Council, who later were suspended by Gov. Bellomont for being involved in piracy, we are not surprised that Maj. Thos. Jones soon gained the ill will of the latter governor. Gov. Bellomont was a strong supporter of William as against James II., and his hostile attitude against Maj. Thos. Jones may have commenced during the struggles between those two monarchs.

To show the extent of his bitterness against Maj. Thos. Jones, we cite a letter written by Gov. Bellomont in 1698 to the Lords of Trade, in which he says "that Col. Wm. Willett concealed pirate money from him, and that one Jones, formerly a pirate, endeavors in his deposition to clear Wm. Willett, besides which his oath is negative, and he is under a very ill character in the country, and I cannot for my part give credit to his evidence." (Doc. Relating to Col. Hist. N. Y., IV., p. 398.)

In another letter written by him to the same under date of 22 Oct., 1698, he states that Nicoll (whom he removed from the Council) stated that "by discountenancing piracy I should impoverish the county," and further in his letter Bellomont adds "that Jones, formerly a pirate, endeavors in his deposition to clear Willett." (Doc. Relating to Coll. Hist. N. Y., IV., p. 398.) "This deposition of Jones is bound up in MSS. No. 8, along with those of Whitehead, Walters and Harrisons." This we have not seen.

In another letter from Bellomont to same, dated 14 Nov., 1698, he inclosed a letter from Jones which he states "will shew what a madness the people are in, in this Province, because I look sharp after pirates, etc." The letter is in Jones' own handwriting and refers to one Smith, a pirate, whose money was seized last summer of £2,300." (Doc. Relating to Coll. Hist. N. Y., IV., p. 432.)

The inhabitants of Long Island, especially in the vicinity of Oyster Bay, were at a very early period engaged in trading, both legal and otherwise. In 1660 Gov. Stuyvesant complained to the Directors of the West India Company that the people near Oyster Bay exchanged their cattle, etc., for beaver skins, the latter of which were exported through New England and on which no duty was paid. (Doc. Rel. Coll. Hist. N. Y., XIV., p. 469.) Gov.

Bellomont, speaking of this in 1699, complains of the private trade carried on by the merchants of Oyster Bay and adds, "To prevent this I have constituted one John Townsend a custom house officer with a salary of £30 per annum." (Doc. Rel. to Coll. Hist. of N. Y., IV., p. 516.)

This John Townsend (who was a brother-in-law of Maj. Thos. Jones) soon resigned, saying "the people of his town were mostly his relations, and had threatened his life."

In a letter from the Boards of Trade to Gov. Cranston, of Rhode Island, dated 9 May, 1696, the Governor was warned that piracy was not to be allowed in His Majesty's colonies, and that complaints had been received charging one Wm. Mayse as a pirate, who had fitted out at Rhode Island, and that Thomas Jones was concerned in the "Old Bark" with Captain Want. The complaint further alleges that Jones lives in Rhode Island, and that Capt. Want gave up about three years ago. In reply to this, under date of 8 May, 1698, the Governor informed the Boards of Trade that "His Majestie had been misinformed in relation to the matter, and that Mayse had his clearance from the custom house here, and as for Capt. Want we neither know the man or ever had sight of his ship." (See J. Carter Brown MSS. cited in Col. Records of Rhode Island, III., p. 322, 337.)

In a letter from Jeremiah Basse, Gov. of New Jersey, dated London, 26 July, 1697, he speaks of one Ive, a pirate, that came to Rhode Island and thence to New York, fitted out again and carried with him one Want in a brigantine. They are said to have since strengthened themselves by taking a vessel belonging to merchants of New York, commanded by one Glover, and it is reported they have made some remittances to the owners to make some satisfaction for that depredation. (New Jersey Archives, Vol. II., p. 158.)

From all this we can readily see that many false charges were made, and all by persons who were directly connected with the Crown, and in all probability personally interested themselves.

That some of the enterprising 17th century seafaring traders occasionally picked up some Spanish trade we do not doubt, but we must not confound such acts with the lawful captures of the day and place them in the same category with Kidd and others.

When we consider that during the last quarter of the 17th century there were more seafaring men, shipbuilding and the putting up of sea stores in New Amsterdam than any other part of the country we can but claim that such men as Maj. Thos. Jones, pirates or otherwise, had, and did play no little part in the making of the New World. Their enterprises were widespread and legitimate, but they were followed by a lawless set of sea robbers, and early in 1700, when piracy reached its height, our ancestor and his contemporaries were in their graves.

To further prove that Maj. Thos. Jones was a regularly commissioned privateer under King James II., we have the following remarkable record of the trial of a Thomas Jones and others in England, for being pirates. The facts in this trial so tally with the various family traditions, dates, and historical accounts handed down to us concerning Maj. Thos. Jones there can be but little doubt that it is one and the same person. The trial, which can be read at length, is printed in the old English law reports entitled "State Trials," Vol. XII., paragraph 1269.

"Trial of Thomas Jones and others as pirates, though acting under King James II. commission, 5 William and Mary, A. D. 1693—

". etc., since the commencement of King William's war several privateers were taken and detained in prison acting by King James II. commission."

On July, 1692, it was resolved by the Lords of the Privy Council that they be tried as pirates having no commission from Kings, and during that year Dr. Oldish was ordered to proceed against them as pirates, but he declined and gave his opinion that they were no pirates, etc., etc. He gave his reasons before the Council that these men, viz., John Golding, Thomas Jones, John Ryan, Darby Collins, Richard Shivers, Patrick Quidley, John Slaughter and Constantine de Hartley showed a commission signed J. R., dated at the Court of St. Germain, with articles of instruction, etc., in the same form as privateers have, giving caution and security to bring prizes into the Court of Admiralty, etc. Dr. Oldish was removed as King's Advocate, and Dr. Littleton, who succeeded him, tried the case and condemned them. All claimed that they were natives of Ireland and in actual service of King James II., and had acted under his commission from the time the Prince of Orange invaded England to the surrender of Limerick, etc., etc. After condemnation they petitioned the House of Peers that they might be tried by juries and have counsel assigned them.

Thomas Jones in his testimony stated "we accepted the King's commission and acted under it, and for which we were condemned as traitors, and we never received any protection from King William, but served all along as subjects to King James II., etc., etc., and that after the surrender of Limerick we (and thousands more) were conveyed as enemies into France with our arms, brass guns and ammunition, and that being thus conveyed to France continued to act under King James II. as our King, and he all along, while we were in Ireland and after, commissioned us as his subjects, and that the ship and goods we took by virtue of a commission as privateers, etc., etc., and that therefore we ought to be treated as only enemies and prisoners of war, etc. Some of these men were executed, not all."

In the life of King James II., Vol II., p. 527, by the Rev. J. S. Clarke, L.L.B., it is stated that "these men were prosecuted by order of the Prince of Orange as pirates, and although Mr. Oldish declared it to be against all law and justice to repute those persons as robbers in time of war who acted by commission from crowned head, one Golding was judged as having no commission and was hanged."

Prior to 1690 no trace of Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1) has been discovered that can be fully relied upon. His family were early in England, but undoubtedly were of Welsh extraction, and had long lived in the north part of Ireland. He was born about 1665 in Strabane, Tyrone County, Ireland, and was actively engaged in the civil war of his time.

"There were persons of his name born in Ireland who might act his part, and one Thomas Jones, with others, including the Clarendon family, who generally took the other side, followed King James II. from England over to France and Ireland. This one probably received a commission to serve in Ireland in his support and was there in 1689. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

King James arrived in Ireland in 1689 and called a Parliament in the following year.

"Many of the Protestant gentry of Ireland thought that the rights of the British Crown should not be forfeited because of the religion or the political errors of the wearer of that crown for the time being, and hence took up arms in defence." (Introduction to Thos. Jones' Hist. of N. Y., by Edward F. de Lancey, Vol. I., p. liv.)

"Living at the time, and in a country widely disturbed by the political actions of James II., Maj. Thos. Jones actively supported this idea, and was engaged in the battle of the Boyne, in 1690. and remained there in service for a short time; this is his earliest identification, and although strongly supporting his royal master, King James II., it is doubtful as to whether he was in action at the battle of Aghrim; but he may have been included in the capitulation of Limerick in 1691." (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

By this defeat the Irish were obliged to sue for peace, and a treaty was signed by which the Romanists were restored to the enjoyment of those liberties in the exercise of their religion which they possessed under Charles II., and the soldiers and others were permitted to leave Ireland for any other country excepting England and Scotland. (Hume's Eng., Vol. VII.). In consequence of this over ten thousand persons who fought under James II. went to France. This revolution of 1688 ended the Stuart power and transferred the crown of England from James II to William and Mary. (Green's English People.)

Maj. Thomas Jones sailed from Strabane in Ireland in 1692, and landed at Port Royal in the island of Jamaica, where he was at the time of the great earthquake in June of that year. Letters of the rector of Port Royal and descriptive accounts appear in the Gentlemen's Mag. for 1750, page 213. An armed vessel was there called the Swan frigate, and another the Siam Merchant. Morse in his Universal Geography (printed in 1796) has much to say concerning the disaster and adds that the Swan frigate, which lay in the dock, afforded a retreat to hundreds of people. (See also Edward's West Indies.)

Tradition tells us one of these vessels was under the command of Maj. Thos. Jones, but there is nothing to verify it.

It is not known whether he possessed any distinguishing title at the time of his arrival in Port Royal, but he was engaged there in the privateering business under letters of marque from James II.

On his arrival in Rhode Island in 1692, it is said he held a commission as captain. Col. Fletcher was Governor of New York from 1692 to 1698, and perhaps allowed him a commission or recognized him as a captain to cruise against Spain while she was at war with England. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

In Rhode Island he became associated with Capt. Thomas Townsend, an active trader, married his daughter Freelove, and took part in his numerous enterprises. Capt. Thomas Townsend was a son of John Townsend and his wife Elizabeth, who were very early on Long Island (N. Y. Gen. and Biog. Rec., Vol. IV., p. 128).

Thompson's Hist. of L. I., Vol. II., p. 343, asserts that John Townsend, with his brothers Henry and Richard, were in Boston in 1637, from whence they removed to Flushing, L. I. He came from Norwich, County of Norfolk, England, before 1645, as in that year he had a patent, with others, from Gov. Kieft for the town of Flushing. (Memorial Townsend Brothers, p. 121.) The Townsends were Quakers and were soon at variance with the Dutch authorities, both in politics and religion. John Townsend was named by Gov. Stuyvesant as among those principal persons who resist the Dutch mode of choosing sheriff, and who refuse to contribute their share to the maintenance of Christian ministers, and on Jan. 23, 1648, he with others were summoned to appear before the Governor and Council at Fort Amsterdam. (Memo. of Townsend Brothers.)

Capt. Townsend was baptized in the Reformed Dutch Church of New York, having his uncle Henry Townsend (as spelled in the record Hendrick Tousen), Rebecca Breton, and Claertje Gerrits as his sponsors, on 16 Dec., 1642. (N. Y. Gen. and Biog. Rec. 5, p. 32.) From this we infer that his wife, Elizabeth, was not of the Quaker faith.

Capt. Thomas Townsend was in Rhode Island after the Dutch and English war, and was engaged in trading at that place, but later returned to Hempstead Harbor and Oyster Bay, L. I. He obtained land at the latter place and built a house there about 1673.

In 1677 he was named as a patentee, thereby securing his title to land in Oyster Bay, and was next in Portsmouth, Rhode Island, in 1686, where he was chosen sheriff in 1696. (Col. Rec. Rhode Island, III., p. 312.)

At a town meeting held at Portsmouth, 4 May, 1698, it was voted "that whereas Thos. Townsend, late sheriff, did by his neglect let Wm. Downs, a pirate, escape from jail, voted that said Townsend be brot to trial for said act." (Col. Rec. R. I., III., p. 333.) Shortly after this he removed to Tiverton, as in a confirmation of a deed dated July, 1702, to his daughter Sarah, now the wife of Abraham Underhill, he calls himself "now living in Tiverton, county of Bristol, Province of Mass." This deed, found among the papers of Maj. Thomas Jones (I. 1), was acknowledged before Joseph Sheffield, assistant, on 6 July, 1702, at Portsmouth, R. I., and witnessed by Christopher Almy, John Hoggeshall (or Coggeshall) and Isaac Lawton.

His first wife, the mother of his children, according to the MSS. of Geo. W. Cox, of Glen Cove, L. I., was Sarah, daughter of Robert Coles, of Rhode Island, and his wife Mary, daughter of Samson Hawxhurst.

If this is correct (which his researches seem to prove), then his father John Townsend's wife Elizabeth must have been other than a daughter of this same Robert Coles, as has been asserted by Savage, and also by Austin in his Gene. Dictionary of Rhode Island, and further it is highly improbable that the father and son should have married sisters.

The three brothers, John, Henry and Richard Townsend, were in Oyster Bay about 1661, and married, according to Savage and Austin, respectively Elizabeth, Ann and Deliverance Coles, daughters of Robert Coles, of Rhode Island. In this the Townsend family records differ, and state that the elder brother, John, married Elizabeth Montgomery. The Hawxhurst family records, recently published in the N. Y. Gen. and Biog. Soc. Recds., Vol. XXXII., p. 173, name her as a daughter of Robert Coles and his wife Mary, daughter of Samson Hawxhurst. This we doubt, as stated before, and hold that Elizabeth Montgomery is possibly more correct.

Robert Coles, the ancestor of the Coles family of L. I., came with Winthrop to Ipswich, Mass., about 1631. He married Mary, daughter of Samson Hawxhurst, of Warwick Co., Eng. (N. Y. Gen. and Biog. Soc. Rec., XXXII., p. 173). Fuller's Hist. of Warwick, Conn., states he had at least three children; a son, John, and two daughters, who married Richard and Henry Townsend, of Oyster Bay. His great grandson, Thomas Coles, of Muskeeta Cove, L. I., married Amelia, daughter of Divine Hewlett, of Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., 15 Nov., 1808.

Capt. Thomas Townsend married as his second wife Mary, widow of Col. Job Almy, and daughter of Christopher and Susannah Unthank, of Warwick, R. I., by whom he had no issue. (Austin Gene. Dict. of R. I.)

The children by his first wife were Temperance, Sylvanus, Freelove, Sarah and John, of whom Freelove, the maternal ancestor of the Jones family, was born 29 Dec., 1674. He was a man of "untiring energy and for many years took an active and leading part in the early matters of Oyster Bay, and in the settlement of the boundary disputes between the towns of Huntington and Oyster Bay, and in the dealings between his townspeople and the Indians the services of our trusty and beloved friend, Thos. Townsend, were indispensable."

His title of captain was of military order, and during his sojourn in Oyster Bay he held the offices of Constable, Recorder and Justice. He appears there in an official way as late as 1712, when he returned to Rhode Island, where he died. His children, as above named, were all born upon Long Island. In his official position as Justice we find him performing the marriage ceremony, and it has been thought he performed that rite between his daughter and Maj. Thos. Jones.

James Townsend (a brother of Capt. Thomas), whose granddaughter married into the Hewlett family of Long Island, and died in 1697, married first Delivered, probably a daughter of Peter Wright, of Oyster Bay, and secondly Jane Ruddick, 16 Oct., 1677. He was town surveyor and laid out the lands upon Unqua and Lattius Neck on Long Island, which later became the property of his brother-in-law, Maj. Thos. Jones.

Ruemourn Townsend, son of James, married Mary, daughter of Capt. John Allen, of Great Neck, L. I. She survived him and married Wm. Moyles, by whom she had no issue. By her first husband, Ruemourn, she had Mary, Sarah and Restore. Mary, the eldest, b. 5 Dec., 1729, married Wm. Willis, and had issue six children, one of whom, Esther, b. 21 Sept., 1762, married Walter Jones (III. 13); another, named Townsend, married Hannah Bowne, whose daughter, Abigail, married Samuel Jones as his second wife. Sarah Townsend, another daughter of Ruemourn, b. 18 March, 1736, d 9 Sept., 1808, married John Hewlett, of East Woods, L. I., son of John and Hannah, his wife, daughter of Col. John Jackson, of Jerusalem, L. I. Hannah Hewlett, daughter of this John Hewlett, b. 4 Feb., 1762, d. 9 Dec., 1850, married John Jones (III. 12), son of William (II. 7).

This Ruemourn Townsend was a posthumous child, and tradition states "that his mother comparing the bitterness of her grief to rue named him Ruemourn."

John Townsend, son of Capt. Thomas, married in Rhode Island 28 April, 1692, Rebecca Almy, and removed to Oyster Bay, where he was Supervisor and Justice, and for his services in settling the new allotments of land in the "New Purchase of Oyster Bay," the owners presented him with a tract of land. His wife d. 24 Feb., 1703, and he married secondly Rose, daughter of Mary Townsend and John Wright, and widow of Nathaniel Coles, Jr. He d. on 6 Nov., 1709 of the smallpox. He is called in the records "Rhode Island John," and by his deeds and his formal family record in the Town Clerk's office of Oyster Bay (Liber C., folio 177) furnishes very substantial data for his brother-in-law, Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1).

The early history of Maj. Thomas Jones (I. 1) and his allied family, the Townsends, is so interwoven with the early settlements of the towns of Oyster Bay and Hempstead that some account of these places seems necessary.

Long Island was originally peopled by several tribes of Indians, of whom the Merrick (or Merikoke) tribe claimed all the lands south of the middle of the island from Rockaway on the west to the west line of the town of Oyster Bay on the east, and were probably a part of the Massapequa tribe, whose principal settlement was at Fort Neck, and north to the middle of the island. The Matinecock tribe claimed all the lands east of Newtown to Smithtown (possibly to Nesaquake River). They were a large tribe and had settlements at Flushing, Glen Cove, Cold Spring, and Huntington.

The island was very much coveted by the Dutch and English, each claiming ownership on the grounds of prior discoveries, the Dutch having settled on the west, and the English on the east end of the island. They had traded largely with the Indians, and found the beaver skins very profitable, the largest beaver dams being in the middle of the island, near Southampton. Difficulties soon arose between them, and some of the English settlements that were within the jurisdiction of the Dutch were forced to swear allegiance to the latter by Gov. Stuyvesant, even after the boundaries had been settled by the commissioners, who met in Hartford, Conn., on 15 Sept., 1650.

In 1640 the English attempted a settlement at Oyster Bay, but the Dutch Gov. Keift drove them away. In 1644, Gov. Keift granted a patent for Hempstead to John Fordham and other Englishmen, which extended from Hempstead Bay west to Matthew Garetson's Bay, and extending southwardly to the South Sea; this included the present towns of Hempstead and North Hempstead. In 1647 a division was made of this Patent between sixty-seven proprietors.

"In the Dutch towns generally the lands were purchased by the Governor, and by him granted out to individuals; purchases from the Indians and actual occupation being necessary to both the Dutch and English for a good title. In the English towns on Dutch territory the lands were bought directly from the Indian chiefs." (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

The war of 1653-4 nearly destroyed the Hempstead settlement, and many of the English went to Oyster Bay and Huntington.

In 1665 the English were in possession of the country, and the first Provincial Assembly under British rule was held in that year. The Dukes Laws "were passed, boundaries settled and Long Island was divided into Ridings—what is now Suffolk Co. constituted the East Riding, Newtown the West Riding, and the remainder of Queens and what is now Nassau Co. the North Riding; also persons who had bought lands from the natives were required to obtain patents of confirmation to establish their titles."

From 1672 to 1674 the Dutch were again in possession of the colony, and orders were issued to the towns of Long Island to send their commissioners to New York with powers to make their submission to the Prince of Orange. Oyster Bay complied, but Huntington refused.

In 1674 the government was again restored, and on 17 Oct., 1683, the first Colonial Legislature (consisting of Gov. Dongan and members chosen by the people) assembled in New York and elected Matthias Nicoll their Speaker. The Ridings were abolished, some of the Dukes Laws were repealed, a Court of Sessions established in each county, and a court in each town on Long Island.

In 1693, by an Act of Assembly, the name of Long Island was changed to Nassau, and although never repealed soon became obsolete.

Acts were passed for settling and maintaining the ministry, subject to the approval of the Governor (who favored Episcopacy), and Queens County was taxed £120 for their maintenance. Much dissatisfaction ensued. Lord Cornbury came over as Governor in 1702. He was a son of Henry Hyde, second Earl of Clarendon, and a brother of Anne, wife of King James II. He was also a cousin of Queen Ann, and was among the first to desert the army of James II. He was a strong supporter of the Church of England, and his zeal caused him to commit acts in Queens Co. that brought out strong opposition from the dissenters, who were mainly Presbyterians, and who were the popular party of the day.

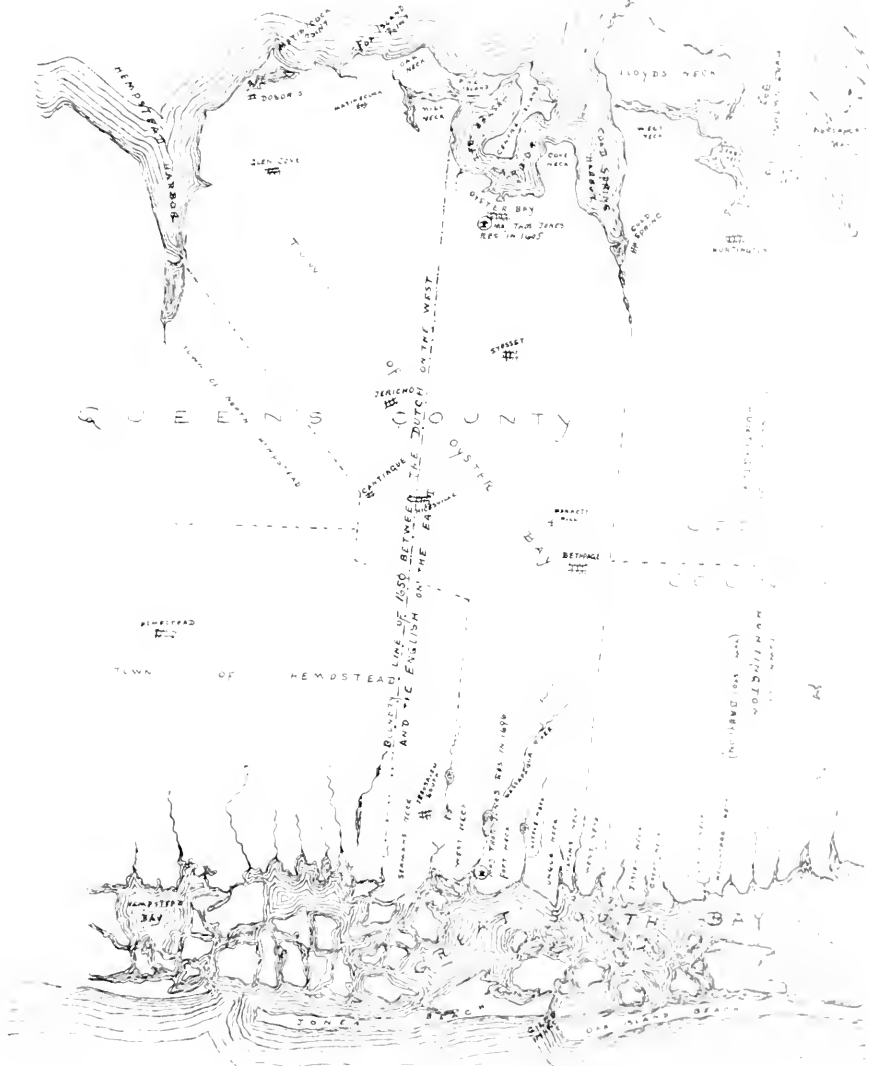

The town of Oyster Bay was, as before stated, long disturbed by dissensions between its early settlers. Its settlement in some respects was peculiar. It was claimed by the Dutch who had early settled there on what is now called the Oyster Bay Cove Road, extending from the village of Oyster Bay to Syosset and the Hempstead Plains. Some Englishmen had also settled there as early as 1640, probably on Hog Island (now Centre Island), but were driven away by the Dutch.

By the boundary line of 1650 the English were to have all the land on Long Island east of a line drawn from the west side of Oyster Bay Harbor, "and so in a straight and direct line to the sea," and the Dutch all the land to the west of this line. This boundary line was never ratified or signed by the Governors, and therefore never became a regular boundary of the town, but for a long time was adhered to as the division line between the two parties. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

In 1654 some English again settled at Oyster Bay, but at a meeting of the Council (Gov. Stuyvesant being absent) orders were given the commissioners to visit the "new settlement at Oyster Bay, and order the withdrawal of all Englishmen who had settled there during 1654." (Doc. Rel. Col. Hist. N. Y., Vol. XIV., p. 311.)

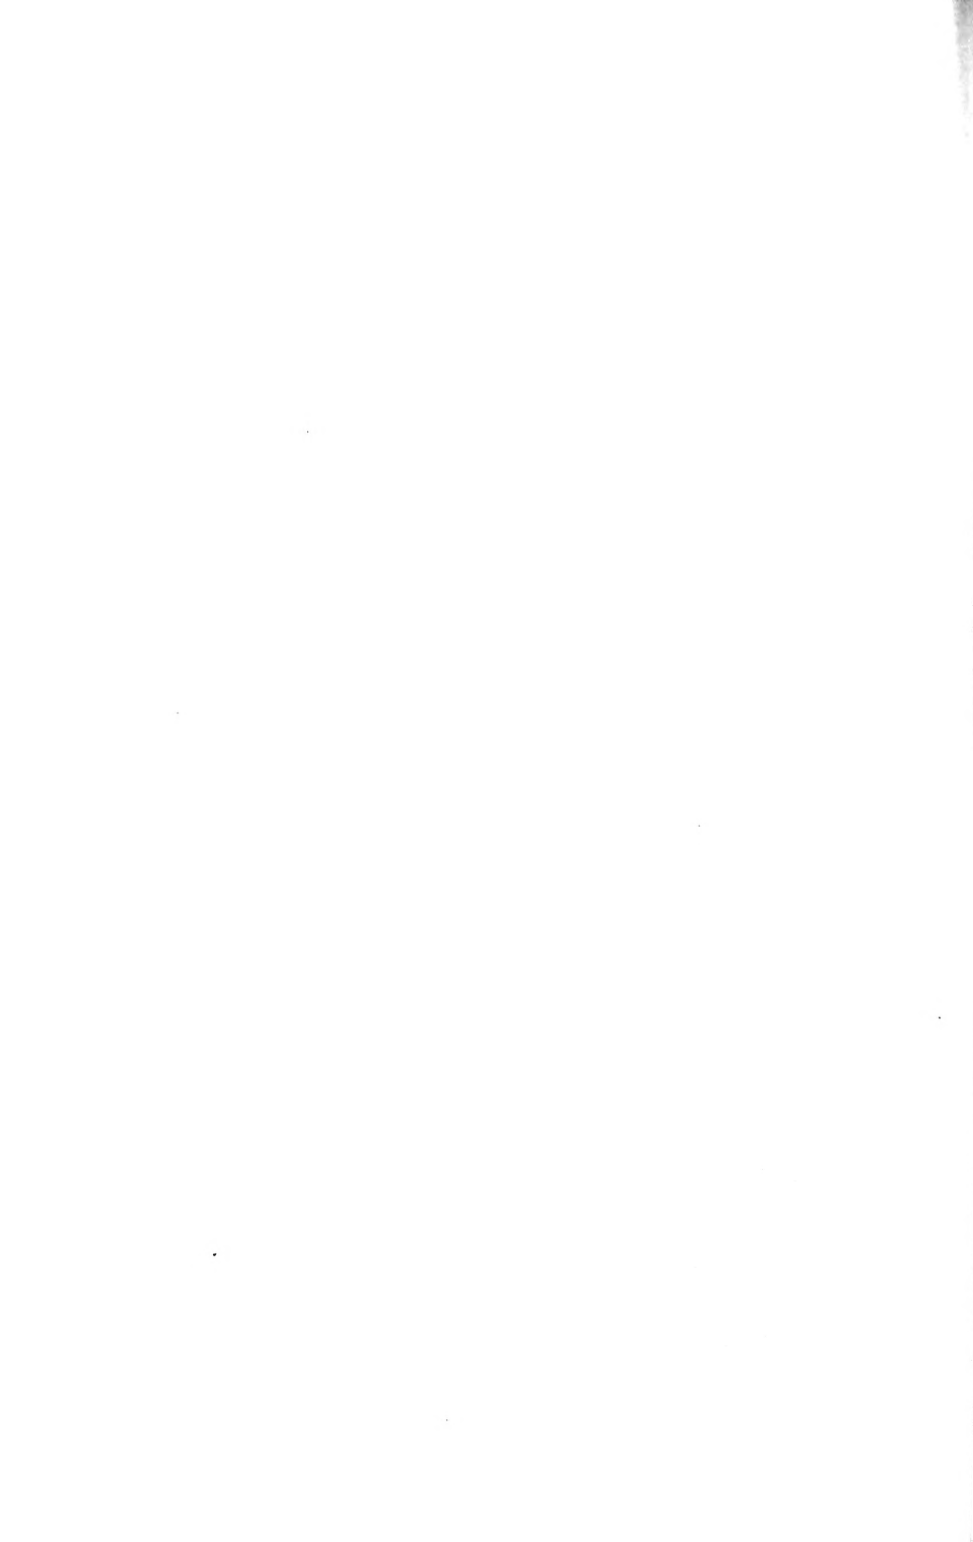

The large trading business carried on at Oyster Bay was a source of much trouble, and customs duties were wholly evaded. To prevent this the Directors in Holland ordered a block house to be built "at our limits advanced to Oyster Bay," but as the boundaries were then in dispute, the house was never built (Doc. Rel. Col. Hist. N. Y., XIV., p. 430.)

Gov. Stuyvesant, alluding to this block house, states in a letter to the Directors under date of 21 April, 1660, "We cannot assure you that it will prevent the invasions of the English, etc.," and "that the English under your jurisdiction here sell their cattle, etc., for beavers, and take the latter overland to their villages, and exchange them for English goods imported there without inspection."

The disputes concerning the boundary line of 1650 can be readily understood by reference to Gov. Stuyvesant's letter to the Directors in 1659, wherein he remarks: "We have had but little intercourse with our neighbors of New England, but we cannot persuade them that they deviate from the boundary agreement of 1650. The only question is about the location of Oyster Bay; the oldest inhabitant of New Netherland places it two and a half leagues farther east than the oldest inhabitant of New England. The land comprised in these two and a half leagues is very poor, but the convenient location of the bay is of greater consequence, for if it remains in possession of and is settled by the English it will be an open door for smugglers."

Speaking of the block house he adds: "If built according to the statements of the Dutch, two and a half leagues further east, the English village of Huntington would come within the limits of New Netherlands, and we would meet with opposition." (Doc. Rel. Col. Hist. N. Y. XIV., p. 440.)

The settlement of Oyster Bay began soon after the agreement of 1650. The earliest conveyance for land there was from the Matinecock sachem in 1653 to Peter Wright, Samuel Mayo, and Wm. Leveridge. On 16 Sept., 1661, Henry Townsend had land granted him there "on the west side thereof," for the purpose of erecting a mill on the stream later called Mill River.

The scene now changed. The Westminster Treaty had been signed in 1673, and by it all the New Netherlands was ceded to the English. The Dutch power in America ended, and all those who had been driven away began to return. Andros was made Governor, and on 16 Sept., 1677, he issued a patent of confirmation for the lands already purchased from the natives in the town of Oyster Bay.

Many purchases of lands were now made from the Indians, and in 1695, when Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1) came upon the scene, the Townsend family and others were firmly located there as freeholders.

Capt. Thomas Townsend, and his son-in-law, Maj. Thos. Jones, made many and large purchases of land from the Indians, and their transactions in these matters show them to have been on friendly terms with them. These purchases on the part of Maj. Thos. Jones became very numerous, and at the time of his death he was possessed of several thousand acres of land in the town of Oyster Bay, a large part whereof is now (1900) in the possession of his descendants.

From all this we can form some idea of the state of affairs existing in Oyster Bay when Maj. Thos. Jones settled there in 1695, with his young wife, then only twenty years of age. On their arrival there her father gave them a house in which he had formerly lived, and a lot of land on the easterly side of what was called South Street. This house, now (1900) standing, is in a good state of preservation, but somewhat changed in appearance by the addition of two dormer windows, and is one of the oldest houses in Oyster Bay.

Late in the year following (1696) they removed to Oyster Bay "at the south," as it was called, where Maj. Thos. Jones had erected a house on Fort Neck, on the easterly bank of Massapequa River, which later became known as the "Old Brick House." This river was sometimes called Brick House Creek, and Jones's Creek. The house and lot of land first mentioned, in the "Town spot of Oyster Bay," was built by Thomas Townsend in 1660. From records left by Maj. Thos. Jones we learn that it was conveyed by John Townsend, of Susum (now Jericho) to John Rogers on 14 Jan., 1686, and contained six acres of land. Rogers conveyed to Ephraim Carpenter, Jr., 30 March, 1695, who on 9 June, 1696, conveyed the same to Capt. Thos. Townsend (Liber B., folio 408, Oyster Bay Recds.) (Liber 4, folio 118, Queens Co.) On 29 June, 1696, Capt. Thos. Townsend assigned his conveyance from Carpenter to "Maj. Thos. Jones, of Rhode Island, my son-in-law, and his wife Freelove, my daughter" (Liber B, folio 408, Oyster Bay Recds.), reserving the right to repurchase the same within five years, for the sum of £71. The deed from Carpenter embraced several other small pieces of land.

We infer that Capt. Thos. Townsend lived there during his stay at Oyster Bay, or until 24 June, 1712, when Maj. Thos. Jones sold the place to George Townsend for £80. (Liber 6, folio 496, Queens Co.)

On 17 July, 1713, the surveyors of the town "laid out to Geo. Townsend on ye right he bought of Thomas Jones" this house lot, and by their report contained $7\frac{1}{2}$ acres of land. (Lib. D, folio 23, O. Bay.) From this time until about 1859 it remained out of the possession of the Jones family, when they again became possessed of some interest in it through Eleanor Burtis, daughter of Elbert H. Jones (IV. 5), and wife of James M. Burtis, of Oyster Bay.

The history of this house is interesting. We quote from an article published in the Oyster Bay Pilot of 1896:

"Thos. Townsend and his wife lived there but a year or two, when Joseph Weeks moved in. Joseph was a son of Francis, owner of the land." (I have seen no such conveyance.) "John Weeks, his son, married Rebecca Coles, and succeeded to the homestead. Jane Summers, his daughter, lived there after her parents, with her husband, Samuel S. Summers. In 1859 the place was sold to Jane Summers' nephew, Townsend W. Burtis, when it later came into possession of his son, James M. Burtis, who with his wife Eleanor Jones lived there some years.

"A house more peculiarly constructed could not be found now. It is bullet proof, although to look at it one might suppose a pin might be thrust through its outer walls. Its exterior is covered with shingles, then comes three inches of solid oak, behind which are two inches of loam and sea weed. Wood covers this, and in turn is covered with plaster, the whole making a wall seven or eight inches in thickness. The house contains thirteen rooms, and in some may be seen the portholes for rifles used in defending the house against attack from the Indians."

Maj. Thos. Jones was now a freeholder, and this "Home Lot" in the "Town Spot of Oyster Bay" gave him certain rights in the common or undivided lands of the town, one of which was the general herding of cattle in one large herd under the mutual protection of the freeholders. This necessitated marks of ownership, called cattle marks, and each freeholder had one allotted to him which was registered in the records of the town. In addition to this, each town had its own mark, the town of Huntington being the letter E, while that of Oyster Bay was F. These marks were branded upon the cattle, and furnished proof of ownership when a public division of them was made at the close of the season.

The original record of Maj. Thos. Jones' cattle mark is lost, but his son William (II. 7), to whom it was assigned after his father's death, caused it put on record in his name on 21 April, 1734. (Liber G, folio 19, Oyster Bay Conveyances.) This record recites "it was his father's, Thomas Jones', mark." The record is accompanied by the following diagram, and describes it as "a swallow fork on ye right ear, and a half penny under ye left ear."

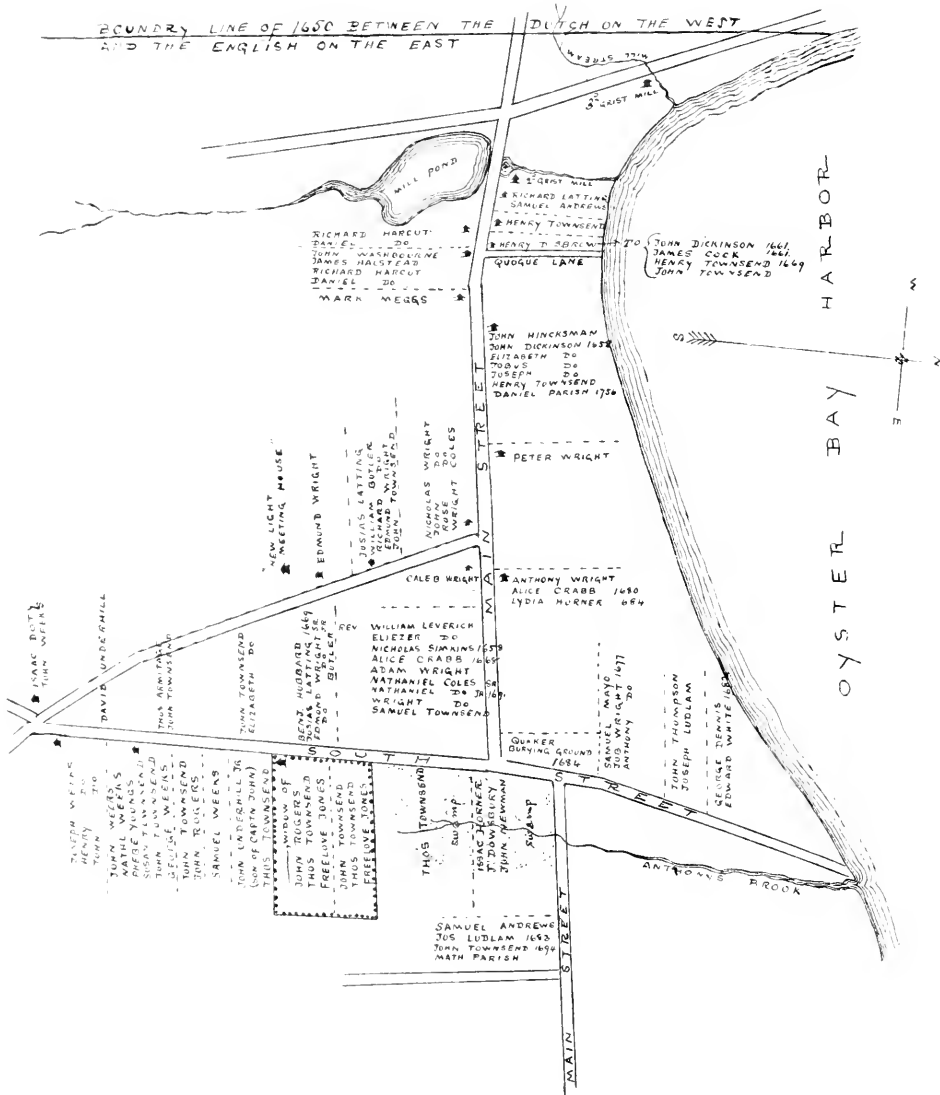

Many of the earliest records of the town have been lost, some of which were never recorded, and others were kept by the owners and put on record several at a time long after the execution of the papers, and even then, in many instances, only such ones as the grantee or owner thought best.

The earliest and original book of records of the town (called Vol. A), has long since disappeared and with it much early history. The present Volume A is a copy in part of the old one, and was transcribed by Samuel Underhill and Samuel Willis in 1742, who were ordered to do so by the freeholders of the town, and who at a town meeting held on 21 Jan., 1743, reported that they "had transcribed 2d record into a new book, etc., etc., or so much thereof as we convened to be any ways essential for the establishment of any title of land, etc., and such part of the old record which we did not apprehend to be needful or worthy of memory, which constitutes chiefly of Justice Courts, marriages, and such like matter of small moment we have left blank." (Liber A, folio 1, Oyster Bay.)

In the following year the freeholders of the town were ordered by David Scaman and Penn Townsend (Justices of the Peace) "to assemble together at ye church or town house in order to view the book of records A, which is now transcribed."

Major Thomas Jones (I. 1), as well as some of the early members of the Townsend family, had much to do in laying out the town lands, and as late as 28 Apl., 1713 (only eight months before his death), he was engaged in laying out land for the Map of "The Town Spot" of Oyster Bay, L. I., showing (approximately) the relative positions of the "Home Lots" of its early settlers, and the succeeding ownerships to each. The roads or streets as indicated being the only ones probably in use at that day. The map is not drawn to any scale, and distances cannot be calculated from it.

proprietors of the "New Purchase" of Oyster Bay, or Matinecock lands, for which service rendered the town he and others were granted eighteen acres of land in that purchase, at a town meeting then held.

At this same meeting there were also granted him individually 37 acres of land lying upon the highway leading from Oyster Bay to Cedar Swamp, "which land was laid out to Thomas Jones in consideration of £21, which he paid for the proprietors of the New Purchase in the law suit against Andrew Gibbs." (Liber 7, folio 45, Queens Co.)

Both families were noted for the active parts taken by them in the development of the town, both politically and otherwise, and at a later period, when some rivalry existed between them as to political prestige, the warcry of the Townsend supporters was, "The Joneses have the money, but the Townsends have the brains."

On March 2, 1699, he was admitted (by deed under seal) as associate freeholder under the original Patent of Oyster Bay, granted by Gov. Andros on 29 Sept., 1677. This deed, executed by Josias Latting and Maj. Thos. Jones' (I. 1) father-in-law, Thos. Townsend, recites "that at its date except themselves none of the other patentees were left alive."

On 30 Dec., 1701, he and many other "Protestant subjects" signed a petition to his Majesty King William III., begging to be relieved of being unjustly accused of infamy, and of being unfaithful subjects, and of being turned out of the government by the late Earl of Bellomont (Doc. Rel. Col. Hist. N.Y., Vol. 4, p. 937), and on 2d of Oct., 1702, he signed, with others, a petition to Lord Cornbury declaring his "sincerity and fervor of affection to his Lordship." (Ibid., Vol. 4, p. 1008.)

Of the early settlers of the "Town Spot of Oyster Bay"—those who were contemporaneous with him—we might say more. The map on the preceding page will give some idea as to who they were, and the relative situations of the "Home Lots," also the boundary line established between the Dutch and English in 1650. The location of each "Home Lot," as indicated by dotted lines, with the name of its owner, and those succeeding him, are mainly taken from the "Memorial of the Townsend Brothers."

Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1) apparently never intended to reside permanently in Oyster Bay, yet he was always more or less identified with it and its immediate vicinity.

On 29 June, 1696, his father-in-law gave him a large tract of land on Fort Neck, on the south side of Long Island, where he built the "Old Brick House," and remained there until his death in 1713. The deed embraces two pieces of land, consisting of 300 acres, and shows in a remarkable way the cordial relations existing between father and son-in-law, and other points of note.

ABSTRACT OF DEED.

Thomas Townsend to Thomas Jones, June 29, 1696. (Liber 4, p. 114, Queens Co.) Etc. "Be it known that I, Captain Thomas Townsend, of Portsmouth, on Rhode Island, for and in consideration of my natural love and affection to Thomas Jones, of Rhode Island, my son-in-law, and to Freelove, his wife, my natural daughter; and for their well demeaning themselves to garde me, and for other good causes and considerations, me, ye sd Thomas Townsend especially moveing, have given, granted and assigned unto this Thomas Jones, and Freelove, his wife, as a free gift, all of a certain parcell of land, lying and being upon Massapequa on Fort Neck at ye south of Oyster Bay in Queens Co., &c., &c., containing in all, more or less, &c., &c., which said tracts is att large to be seen in and by ye Indian deed to me bearing date ye 31st day of May, 1693. and ye other ye first day of June, 1694. Together with all rights, &c., &c., with priveledge to set up mills on said Fort Neck River, &c., reserving to myself the right to improve any of the above granted lands, and to build and plow, and pasture, &c., and what I shall see cause, and ye same to possess, and enjoy during my natural life, and the life of my new wife Mary, and after her decease to return to sd Thomas Jones and his wife."—Signed, sealed and delivered in the presence of

THOMAS TOWNSEND [L. S.].

Before these purchases (as cited in this deed) were made of the Indians, Capt. Thomas Townsend obtained a license from Gov. Andros, on 18 Oct., 1677, "to purchase lands of the Indian proprietors adjoining their meadows on the south, and also on the north, so much of their land called Matinecock." (Doc. Rel. Col. Hist., Vol. 14, p. 731.)

This deed to Maj. Thos. Jones, with several later ones, gave him possession of the whole of Fort Neck, embracing some 680 acres, which at his death he bequeathed to his son David (II. 2). Of these latter mentioned deeds, the principal one was from the Indians under date of 21 Apl., 1707, and conveyed all their lands at Massapequa, bounded on the south by the Salt Meadow, on the north by Thomas Powell's and Thomas Whitson's land or purchase, and on the west to West Neck, and on east to make a north and south line from the east side of Latting's Neck, containing in quantity more or less. Consideration, £5.

This deed embraced a large extent of country, and Maj. Thos. Jones' brother-in-law, John Townsend, was a joint purchaser in it with him, but on 15 Nov., 1707, the latter released all his rights in this deed to Maj. Thos. Jones.

On June 4, 1707 (after this purchase from the Indians), a town meeting was held at Oyster Bay and "there was granted to Thomas Jones and John Townsend, by a free and unanimous vote, all their rights which they have to all the land at the south which the sd Thomas Jones and John Townsend bought or purchased of the Indians, bearing date ye 21 April, 1707, etc., reserving to ourselves all ye land we formerly bought and laid out on Uncoway Neck." (Liber B, No. 2, folio 662, Queens Co.) By referring to map on previous page it will be seen that this deed included Unqua Neck (excepting such as reserved), and also Little Neck.

Thompson's L. I. (publication of 1839, page 338) speaking of the deed of gift to Maj. Thos. Jones in 1695, remarks "He received a valuable tract of land called Fort Neck, and where he erected the first substantial dwelling house made of bricks burned upon the place, in that part of Long Island, and which stood for more than one hundred and fifty years, and familiarly known for the last fifty years as the "Old Brick House." He further states (Vol. I, p. 508) "That of the many traditions of this extraordinary personage very little can be relied upon."

When Maj. Thos. Jones built this house there was not another one standing within several miles of it. It was a wild and desolate region, and the Massapequa meadows (whereon the house stood) were bounded on the north by dense woodland, the abiding place, perhaps, of hostile Indians, and on the south by the "Great South Bay."

Touching this we quote from Denton's Hist. of N. Y.: "Approaching westerly through the island we meet with an ancient dwelling on Fort Neck, which a century ago or more was known as the Haunted House, and had many strange and wonderful stories connected with it, and a lonely grave marked by an old tombstone some little distance from the house, on the banks of a small stream; a most solitary spot surrounded by a low earth wall."

An article in the New York Mirror (copied by Thompson) states: "This venerable edifice is still standing though much dilapidated, and is an object of awe to all the people in the neighborhood. The traveller cannot fail to be struck with its reverend and crumbling ruins as his eye first falls upon it from the turnpike, and if he has heard the story he will experience a chilly sensation and draw a long breath while he looks at the circular, sashless windows in the gable end. Those windows have been left open ever since the old man's death. His sons and grandsons used to try all manner of means in their power to close them up. They put in sashes, and they boarded them up, and they bricked them up, but all would not do; so soon as night came their work would be destroyed, strange sights would be seen and awful voices heard."

Furman, in his Antiquities of L. I., has this to say of it: "Approaching westwardly through the island, we meet Fort Neck, with an old-fashioned brick house which was many years ago owned and occupied by a Captain Jones, who is reputed to have been a pirate, and in it he died. Tradition (he adds) says that at the time of his death a large black crow (which the people supposed to be a demon) hovered over his bed, and when life was extinct the crow made its exit through the west end of the house. The story is still told by the oldest inhabitant as a fact, and further that the hole through which the crow made his departure cannot be stopped, and as often as it is closed it is opened by some unknown means."

Furman tells us he saw the house in 1827, and it was then a venerable looking building, "and was pointed out to me as the Haunted House," and further he adds that Captain Jones was buried not far from the house and his grave is to this day designated as the "Pirate's Grave."

This property of Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1), known as the Fort Neck property, was at the confluence of the Massapequa River with the Great South Bay, and nearly opposite an opening of the latter into the ocean, at a place called Jones' Inlet. The neck of land lying to the west of the Massapequa River was called West Neck, and adjoined land of the Seaman family, while that one to the east of Fort Neck is called Unqua. On the east bank of the Massapequa River, and but a short distance south of where the highway now crosses it, stood the "Old Brick House," which after withstanding the storms of one hundred and forty years was taken down in 1837 by the Hon. David S. Jones (IV. 7).

Edward F. de Lancey in his introduction to Thomas Jones' Hist. of N. Y. (Vol. I, p. 1v), describes it as "A large and heavy building of two stories, with a wing on one side; had a high roof, windows in its gables, and walls of great thickness, which were panelled inside with wood. The beams were moulded and cased in the style of that day in England." (See also Thompson L. I., Vol. I, p. 508.)

The Old Brick House was an object of much interest, and on Feb. 7, 1867, at the first meeting of the Long Island Hist. Soc., John Fowler, Jr., read a paper on the "Ancient Homestead of the Jones Family of Queens Co." but no record of it appears to have been kept by the society.

Respecting the so-called Indian forts on Fort Neck, which were occupied by the Indians, and taken from them in 1653 by Capt. John Underhill, under a commission from the English authorities of Rhode Island "To go against the Dutch or any enemies of the Commonwealth of England," Samuel Jones (III. 8) addressed a letter to John Pintard, secretary of the N. Y. Hist. Soc., enclosing the following memoranda written by him in 1812:

"When this part of Long Island was first settled by the Europeans they found two fortifications in the neighborhood upon a neck of land ever since called Fort Neck; one of which is nearly square, each side of which is about thirty yards in length. The breastwork or parapet is of earth, and there is a ditch on the outside which appears to have been about six feet wide. The other one was on the southernmost point of the salt meadow adjoining the bay, and consisted of palisadoes set in the meadow. The tide has worn away the meadow where the fort stood, and the place is now covered with water, but my father, Wm. Jones (II. 7), has told me that in his memory part of the palisadoes were standing." (N. Y. Hist. Soc. Col., Vol. III.)

See Furman's Antiquities of L. I., p. 95, respecting these forts.

These necks of land were on their southern extremity covered with salt meadows, and were separated from another body of salt meadows (lying to the south of them) by the Great South Bay. These were considered by the early purchasers as part and parcel of the whole, and in general terms were called by the Indians their Massapeage meadows.

As Maj. Thos. Jones and his sons in course of time became possessed of the greater part of all these necks and meadows lying between the town of Hempstead on the west and the town of Huntington on the east, their early history may not be out of place here.

While the Colony was much disturbed by the alternating supremacy of the Dutch and English, the inhabitants of the town of Oyster Bay procured a release of them from the Indians on 17 March, 1658, and were described as "All our meadows at the south side of this island, commonly called by the name of Massapeage meadows; on the west side bounded with the river called Warrasketuck, and on the east with the river called Arrasquaugue."

On 29 Sept., 1677, Gov. Andros issued Letters Patent confirming these purchases (cited Vol. 1, p. 238, Mend. Repts.) to Henry Townsend, Thomas Townsend and others, as patentees (the same who had received the Indian deed).

In the Indian deed no mention is made of the southerly boundary, but in the Patent the south bounds are particularly described as being the "South Sea."

In 1771 this "South Sea" bound became the source of a long lawsuit between the town of Oyster Bay and the Jackson and Jones families. The town claimed that the South Sea meant what we now call the Great South Bay, and not the Atlantic Ocean as claimed by the Jacksons and the Joneses, the former of whom had a patent from Gov. Cornbury, on 12 Sept., 1708, for "Beach and meadow land, bounded on the south by the sea on the south side of the beach to low water mark, and on the north by the Bay," extending from the town of Hempstead on the west to the town of Huntington on the east. This was granted to John Jackson, Sr., and John Jackson, Jr. The meadows in dispute were those lying on the south side of the Great South Bay, and next to the Atlantic Ocean (see map on preceding page).

The Jacksons were defended by Samuel Jones (III. 8), and the suit was decided in their favor by the Supreme Court of the Colony, Judge David Jones (II. 2) sitting.

William Jones (II. 7), a brother-in-law of the Jacksons, held a two-fifths interest in these meadows, and was much interested. See under William Jones (II. 7.)

The beaches and meadows thus granted were held by the Jacksons in joint tenancy, and on the death of John Jackson, Sr., his son John Jackson, Jr., had a lawful right to the whole, and at his death bequeathed the whole equally between his sons John, Samuel and Richard Jackson. These meadows were of but little use in those days except to the Jacksons, who kept large herds of cattle and horses there, and the property remained in their hands until 19 Sept., 1762, when John, Samuel and Richard Jackson sold a one-fourth interest in the whole to their brother-in-law, William Jones (II. 7).

Shortly after this the Hempstead people began to cut grass on the meadows and carry it away, which finally terminated, in 1769, in a lawsuit against Charles Simonson as a trespasser, in the Supreme Court, where judgment was rendered as just stated.

In order to consult what steps were necessary in this matter, a special town meeting was called, and the freeholders of the town of Oyster Bay assembled at the house of George Weeks, "Where the elderly and most wise men of the town took a room upstairs to consult upon proper measures, and in this cabinet it was agreed that the town had no right to the beach and meadows southward of the bay that divides the Massapege meadows from the beach." Notwithstanding this they agreed to assist Simonson in his suit, and appointed Zebulon Seaman, Benjamin Townsend, and George Townsend as his counsel, and the case went to the Supreme Court. From this time until about the close of the Revolutionary War the inhabitants did not attempt to trespass upon the meadows. From its close until 1787 (during which time William Jones (II. 7) had died and the country was much disordered by the war) the inhabitants frequently cut the grass from the meadows without much interruption, and a movement was set on foot to put the meadows under town regulations, and by that means make a good title to the town. A town meeting was held, and it was voted to raise the sum of £200 to go to law with the Jacksons.

After choosing their committee for that purpose, they were informed by James Townsend, of Duck Pond (who had known the Jacksons for a long time, and was well informed about their former suit), "That the town had no right in them premises," and advised the town to purchase some rights under the Jacksons.

The committee acted in accordance with this advice, one of whom, Isaac Smith, went to New York to purchase Thomas Jones' (III. 3) confiscated rights of the commissioners of forfeited estates, and the others went to Cold Spring to see if David Jones (III. 7) would sell his right, which he finally did; and the town thereby became tenants in common with the Jacksons and the Joneses.

Just where the northerly limit of these necks of land was considered to be by the early proprietors is difficult to say. In 1671 the owners professed to divide them into shares, and allotted them in severalty, but this appears only to have applied to that portion then covered by the salt meadows and adjoining the mainland.

The earliest deed from the Indians (17 Mch., 1658) fails to give any northerly boundary, but a later one from them, dated 20 Apl., 1690, to John Townsend, describes their extent "northward to ye Great Plains." This deed was for the whole of West Neck (exclusive of the salt meadows), of which no part came into possession of the Jones family until after the death of Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1), excepting such rights as the latter may have had under the general assignment to him by Thomas Townsend on 11 May, 1711. These indefinite boundaries caused much trouble later on.

On 18 of 8 month, 1695, the Indians executed a deed to Thomas Powell, Sr., for a large tract of land in the central part of the town of Oyster Bay, in which the bounds were fairly well described. Of these the southerly boundary (as shown on the map, opp. p. 31, and designated as Frost's and Jones' line), approximately gives us the northerly limits of these necks of land.

This places it a little south of the present village of Farmingdale, and embraces an area of country extending into the interior about four and one-half miles northerly, and two and one-half miles east and west, or 7,000 acres of land. Deducting $\frac{1}{3}$ from this for the West Neck, we have 4,700 acres which was vested in the children of Maj. Thomas Jones (I. 1), which later became the property of the Floyd-Jones family, and by actual survey contained 4,792 acres. Of this, 1,138 acres is meadow land and lies south of the "Old Indian Path" that formerly led across these necks, and now known as the South Side Turnpike Road.

The deeds of gift to Maj. Thos. Jones (before alluded to) have been claimed by historians as embracing the whole of Fort Neck and much of the surrounding country. I do not so construe them. They embraced but a small part of this neck, possibly 300 acres, but gave him control of that part between the "Old Indian Path" and the "Great South Bay," and had for its western boundary the Massapequa River. Prior small purchases had been made by the freeholders, individual allotments made, and the Indians were gradually forced into the interior. Many of these allotments or rights were given up or forfeited, and were transferred to Capt. Thomas Townsend in consideration of his assuming the rates levied upon them, and by him conveyed to Maj. Thomas Jones (I. 1) in consideration of various sums of money. More than one hundred of these deeds and assignments of rights are now in possession of the family.

On the north of the Powell purchase was an extensive tract of land lying between Bethpage and the high ridge of hills within the limits of Syosset, East Woods, Woodbury and Cold Spring. This was purchased of the Indians by Maj. Thomas Jones, Capt. Thos. Townsend, Edward White, John Williams and Hope Williams, on the 2d June, 1697, for £6 current money and one barrel of good cider. (Liber 4, folio 3, Queens Co.)

This was heavily wooded and valuable, and many controversies arose over its relative boundaries between the Williamses, who owned the Great Plains on the south and west, and the Mayos, who had very early rights on the north, and other inhabitants of the town.

This piece was described as beginning "at ye edge of ye Plains on ye south side ye old cart path that leadeth from Henpstead to Huntington town by ye head of Cold Spring, to ye line of division between ye town of Oyster Bay and ye town of Huntington north bounder, thence from ye sd cart path south by ye line of division to ye land of Thomas Powell, at ye place called Bethpage, from thence westward by ye sd lands of Thos. Powell to ye edge of ye Great Plains, and from thence northward by ye edge of ye sd Great Plains to ye above sd cart way," etc., etc.

Subsequently Maj. Thos. Jones purchased other rights or shares in this, but disposed of the greater part of them before his death, and bequeathed the remainder to his sons David and William.

On the north of this purchase was a large tract of woodland which he also owned in common with other people of the town, mainly the Mayos and Wrights, the boundaries of which also disturbed the people for several years, but was finally settled by arbitrators in 1701, whose decision, signed by Peter Cortilieu, surveyor, on 16 Sept. of that year, fixed its northerly boundary as "Which line doth begin at a hole of water, ye head of Cold Spring, or which is concluded to be ye head of ye sd spring, and from thence west thirty-five degrees southerly to a point of trees called Cantiague."

This was a long, narrow strip of land extending from Cold Spring to Jericho and Hicksville, embracing the high ridge of hills running between those places. Cantiague was within the limits of Hicksville proper, and on line of division between the towns of Oyster Bay and Hempstead. It was probably an Indian settlement.

Maj. Thos. Jones' rights or allotments in this were mostly in its eastern end, and extended westerly to "Round Swamp," now a small pond just west of the village of Syosset. His interests were large, as records show, but how he disposed of them is not shown.

Some papers now extant show that Maj. Timothy Bagley (who married his widow) obtained possession of some and disposed of them later. His sons, Thomas and William Jones, obtained some under his will.

On March 23, 1709, a Patent was issued by Queen Anne for 3,000 acres of land in Orange Co., N. Y., to Rip Van Dam, Adolph Phillipse, David Provoost, Jr., Lancaster Syms and Thomas Jones.

It was situated about six miles west of Cornwall, and was formerly a part of the land included in the Patent granted to Capt. John Evans by Gov. Dongan in 1694. (Ruttenber's Hist. Orange Co., p. 16.)

Evans' patent was annulled by an Act of Assembly in 1699, and repatented at later dates.

On 21 Aug., 1711, Maj. Thos. Jones conveyed one-half of his interest in this to John Thomas, Rector of St. George Parish, Hempstead, L. I. I do not find that he made any disposition of his remaining interest, but on 2d Aug., 1721, his son David, "As heir-at-law of Thomas Jones, late of Fort Neck on L. I., deceased," conveyed his right in it, as did also the four surviving patentees, to Vincent Mathews, of Ulster Co., for £1,000. (Liber B, folio 284, Orange Co.) The considerations named in the Patent were that the patentees should "pay every year from henceforth two shillings and sixpence for every 100 acres, reserving to our heirs, etc., all trees of ye diameter of 24 inches in diameter, as shall be fitt for our Royal Navy, and such other trees as shall be fitt to make plank and knees for our Navy aforesaid, and also all gold and silver mines, etc.

(Liber 7. folio 395 of Patents, Secy. of State office.)

Why Maj. Thos. Jones went to Rhode Island on his arrival in this country is not known. He may have been known to the Townsends before his advent here, and possibly had some business relations with them. His religious convictions certainly did not cause him to seek a home there, for he was a warm supporter of the Church of England and would not have chosen a place that was a refuge for all religious sects and where religious toleration worked little good for the Colony. As a privateersman he may have made use of the Rhode Island ports (as many of his time did), but the records of the Colony contain no records of him.

Shortly after his settling upon L. I. he was actively engaged in Church matters, first at Oyster Bay and then at Hempstead and Jamaica, where religious differences early commenced between the Church of England and the dissenters, who were of the popular party, and who looked upon the Church of England, or Court party, with distrust.

The Colonial Government was desirous that Episcopacy should be established and that ministers of the Gospel be called and settled in each town, to which it gave much the same offices and form of government as the parish churches in England. The inhabitants were compelled to contribute to their support by taxation, even though they differed on points of religion. This to the dissenters was obnoxious and was strongly opposed; to them "the liberty of all was the best guarantee for the liberty of each." This hostile feeling reached its culmination during the Revolutionary War, when the Court party, who were all Episcopalians, were roughly handled.

Had Maj. Thos. Jones lived later he would have suffered much at the hands of his political and religious opponents, but he died long before the struggle for independence began and never knew the extent of the religious controversies in which Queens County became involved.

Lord Cornbury was Governor in 1702, and was a great promoter of the English Church, especially on Long Island, and Maj. Thos. Jones was soon in his favor.

On Jan. 12, 1703, Maj. Thos. Jones (under a colonial law for organizing parishes and church wardens), was elected at Oyster Bay at a general town meeting as church warden, and Edmund Wright, Isaac Doty, Samuel Dickinson, Richard Willis and Nathaniel Coles as vestrymen. (State Recds. D, page 114.) (Queens Co. in Olden Times, Onderdonk.)

June 14, 1707, he was elected, with Thos. Gildersleeve, by a "major vote of the people of Hempstead, as church wardens, to which office he was annually re-elected until 1709." (Hempstead Records, Vol. 1, p. 429, etc.)

The office of church warden had jurisdiction in civil as well as ecclesiastical matters, the authority for its jurisdiction being vested in an Act of Legislature passed Sept., 1693. Under this act ten vestrymen and two church wardens were to be annually elected by the freeholders of each county, and the tax to be raised for the support of the ministers was to be levied by the vestrymen and justices, and to be paid to the church wardens, who were required to give an account to the vestrymen of all receipts and disbursements, and to pay to their respective ministers their salary.

Although Maj. Thos. Jones married into a Quaker family he strongly adhered to the Episcopal Church, and, as we have stated, caused his wife to be baptized into that faith. Further than this he intrusted the early education of his children to his "loving friend John Thomas" (the first Rector of St. George's Epis. Church of Hempstead), who was inducted as its rector by order of Lord Cornbury, 26 Dec., 1704. His return or Certificate of Induction was signed by Wm. Vesey, Wm. Urquhart, Thomas Jones and Thos. Gildersleeve, wardens, on 27 Dec., 1704. It is written in Latin (much abbreviated), and recorded in New York Surrogate's Office, Liber 7, folio 227 of Wills.)

Very little of the parish work of the Rev. John Thomas has been preserved to us. In his letter to the "Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts," he states that his parish register was used by the justices and civil vestry acting as overseers of the poor.

This church was built in 1648, and much can be read concerning it in the Rev. John Keith's Journal, who was then a missionary on Long Island.

(See also Hist. of St. George's Church, by Moore, and Doc. History of New York, Vol. III.)

On 29 Jan., 1702-3, Governor Cornbury issued a commission to "our loyal subjects" Thos. Willet, John Jackson and others, authorizing them to administer the oath appointed by Act of Parliament instead of the oath of allegiance, to all officers, civil and military, that are or shall be commissioned by us, etc., in our county called Queens, and the commissions to continue in force during our will and pleasure. (Liber A, folio 214, Queens Co.)

On 12 March, 1702-3, this oath was administered to all of the officers of the Queens Co. Regiment, and a certificate to that effect was recorded by them. (Liber A, folio 215, Queens Co.) Of the Oyster Bay company there were named: John Dickinson, captn.; Isaac Doty, lieut., and Nathaniel Coles, Jr., ensign, of ye one company, and Thomas Jones, captn.; John Townsend, lieut., and Samuel Dickinson, ensign, of ye other company.

On 14 Oct., 1704, Maj. Thos. Jones was appointed by Gov. Cornbury as High Sheriff of Queens Co. (Commissions, Vol. 3, p. 98, N. Y. State Library.) (Thompson's L. I., Vol. 2, p. 503.) (Thomas Jones' Hist. N. Y., Vol. 1, p. lv.)

Thomas Jones, Commission as High Sheriff of Queens Co.:

"A commission to Thomas Jones to be High Sheriff of Queens Co.—Anne, by the grace of God: of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland; Queen defender of the Faith, to Thomas Jones, Esq. Greeting, we commit unto you our county of Queens County to keep from the date of these presents until the fourteenth day of October now next ensuing, yeilding unto us, and our successors our dues, and other things to us belonging, and we command all our loving subjects in our said county, that to you in the execution of the office of High Sheriff, they be aiding, helping and assisting.

In testimony whereof we have caused the great seal of our Province of New York to be hereunto affixed. Witness our Right Trusty, and well beloved cousin, Edward, Viscount Cornbury, Captain General and Governor in Chief of the Province of New York, New Jersey, and of all the Territories and Tracts of land depending thereon in America, and Vice Admiral of all the same, &c., this fourteenth day of October, in the third year of our Reigne.

On the 3d of April, 1706, he was appointed Major of the Queens Co. Regiment of Militia. (Calendar of N. Y. Historical MSS., page 352.) (N. Y. Colonial MSS., Vol. LII., p. 13.)

On the 4th Sept., 1710, Governor Hunter appointed him as Ranger General of the island of Nassau (now Long Island). (Vol. 10, page 259 of Deeds, Secry. of State Office.)

Ranger General was a sworn officer of the Crown, to whom was granted the royal rights or franchises of waifs, estrays, hunting, royal fish, forfeitures, etc. (Thos. Jones' Hist. N. Y., Vol. I, p. lvii.)

What rights and duties were conferred upon him under this commission we are unable to say, but at a later period, during the Revolutionary War, the duties of a Ranger "were arduous," and no person was permitted to sell a horse or leave the Province without being first viewed by the Ranger.

During Maj. Thos. Jones' time in all probability it had some reference to a military watch against foreign attack. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

His original commission is now in possession of the family. It is well preserved, and bears Gov. Hunter's seal of arms, and is countersigned by George Clark, secretary. It is as follows:

Robert Hunter, Esq., Captain General and Commander in Chief of the Provinces of New York, New Jersey, and Territories depending thereon in America, and Vice Admiral of the same, &c. Major Thomas Jones, greeting, be it known to all whom it may concern, that I, reposing special trust and confidence in your ability, prudence and fidelity, have given and granted, and by these presents do give and grant unto you, the said Thomas Jones, the office of Ranger General of the island commonly called Long Island, in the Province of New York, and I do hereby constitute and appoint you, the said Thomas Jones, to be Ranger General, yourself, your sufficient deputy or deputies in each respective county within the said island, to have, hold, and exercise the said office of Ranger General, together with all fees, salaries, profits, benefits, customs, tolls, perquisites or advantages to ye said office, and place belonging, or which ought or may in any ways belong or appertain, according to ye former usage and custome of any of ye Rangers in her Majestie's Plantations in America; given under my hand and seal att arms, att Fort Ann in New York, this fourth day of September, 1710, in ye ninth year of ye reign of our Sovereign Lady Anne, by ye Grace of God, Queen of Gt. Britain, France, and Ireland, defender of ye faith, &c.

BY HIS EXCELL'YS COMMAND.

As early as 1705 Maj. Thos. Jones was engaged in the whale fishery on Long Island. On the 13th of Dec. of that year he had from Gov. Cornbury a license "to take drift whales on ye gut adjoining Mr. Nicoll's land, and the west end of Gravesend Beach." (Calendar of N. Y. Hist. MSS., p. 340.) (Rev. MSS., Vol. L, p. 183.)

The Great South Beach, on Long Island, had been used as a place to catch whales from, long before his arrival, and the business being lucrative, was sought after by many persons.

Denton in his Hist. of N. Y., written in 1670, says: "Upon the south side of Long Island, in the winter, lie store of whales and crampasses, which the inhabitants begin with small boats to make a trade, catching to their no small benefit also innumerable multitude of seals which make excellent oyle."

While Lovelace was Governor no duty was demanded; but during Gov. Hunter's administration a duty was imposed on whale fishery. Many early laws were passed concerning this industry and several lawsuits resulted concerning individual rights.

In 1672 Gov. Lovelace ordered that the hire for one Indian to go whaling was not above one trucking cloth coat for each whale he and his company shall kill, or half the blubber without the whalebone. In the year following he granted the right to several companies to use the beach for whaling, and to cut wood in the adjacent woodland, and ordered the Indians not to disturb them any more by demanding a barrel of oil out of every whale taken. He also gave the right to persons engaged in the whale fishery "to sell truck, powder and shot, and a moderate amount of strong liquor to the Indians as shall be useful for their whaling designe." (Doc. Rel. Col. Hist. N. Y. XIV., p. 646.)

Maj. Thos. Jones was engaged in this business for several years, and as late as 4 Sept., 1710, he had a license for this purpose granted by Gov. Hunter, and is recorded in Vol. 10 of Deeds, Secy. of State Office, and is as follows:

Robert Hunter, Esq., Captain General and Governor in Chief of the Provinces of New York, &c., &c., to Major Thomas Jones, reposing especial trust and confidence in your care, and dilligence, and integrity, I have thought fit, and I do hereby impower you to sieze, secure, and take into your custody and possession all Driffts, drift whales, and whatsoever other fish or wrecks you shall find floating upon the sea or shall be driven or cast on shore or any part of the sea coast between the gut joining to Mr. Nichols land, and ye west end of Gravesend Beach, and Brookhaven, commonly called Seatawcut, on the north side of Long Island, and saw, cut up, try, and make into oyle, all such driftt whales or other fish as aforesaid within said bounds, yeilding and paying unto me at New York, one half part of the oyl, and whale bone which you shall make or gett thereout aforesaid, and also one half of all other wrecks and driftts, detaining and keeping ye other half thereof to your own proper use and behoofe, giving me an account from time to time what you shall have done herein; and for so doing this shall be your sufficient warrent; given under my hand and seal at Fort Anne in New York, this 4th day of Sept., 1710.

Several of these returns (which this license required) were made by him and can be seen in the N. Y. Coll. MSS., in the N. Y. State Library, and are in his own handwriting, one of which, filed in Vol. LIV., p. 179, is as follows:

This license gave him control of the whale fishery on Long Island, and the returns as made by him show that he probably sub-let the right to various persons. It was a lucrative business and afforded employment to the Indians, whose pay was regulated by laws made for that purpose. Frequently they were paid in "strong liquor," and Maj. Thos. Jones brought much to Long Island, possibly for that purpose. This got him into trouble with the custom house, and on 17 Sept., 1708, he petitioned Lord Cornbury "for some redress in relation to rum seized by the revenue officers." (N. Y. Coll. MSS. LII., p. 167.)

It is as follows:

The petition of Thomas Jones, of Nassau Island, most humbly sheweth that your petr having some effects at Rhode Island, ordered his coorespondent there to send of it in Rum for his winter provision (Rum being very cheap there then) and to consign the same to Mr. Barthd Furt, here in town, for your Pet's acc't, and at the same time ordered sd Barth'd Furt to enter the same, and to pay the duty here at the Custom House, about two months ago a vessel coming from Rhode Island, (the same whereof is yet unknown to your Pet'r) three small barrils containing about eighty gallons in all, where at is seems among many other things put on board said vessel, and for what reasons your Pet'r doth not know said casks were put on shore at Doctor Taylor's at White Stone, unknown to your Pet'r, and were there seized last Saturday by Mr. Byerley and Mr. Chambers among other goods found there at the same time. Where as all these has been transacted and done without your Pet'r's knowledge, and contrary to his orders so farr that had not Mr. Chambers sent him notice thereof your Pet'r should be a stranger to it to this day, and whereas by all the circumstances which yo'r Pet'r offers to prove upon acets if required, it plainly appears that no fraud was intended or designed, yor Pet'r humbly prays that he may have an order for to enter the said Rum and receive the same paying the duty.

And yor Pet'r shall ever pray, &c., &c.

THO: JONES.

Endorsement—

Major Jones petition read in Councill 17th Septr, 1708, and referred to the Gent of the Councill or any 3, and the Pet'r Mr. Byerley or Mr. Chambers to attend.

Reported 17th Septr, 1708.

(See N. Y. Coll. Mss., Vol LII, p. 167.)

On 21 May, 1709, Maj. Thos. Jones, Col. Henry Smith, and Col. Richard Floyd were ordered by Lieut. Gov. Ingoldesby "to engage the Long Island Indians to join the expedition to Canada." (N. Y. Coll. MSS. LIII., p. 74.)

In 1711 he subscribed £2 towards building Trinity Church steeple in N. Y. (Berrian's Hist. Trinity Church.)

As early as 1710 he held the office of Supervisor of the Town of Oyster Bay, and was annually re-elected until his death in 1714.

(Liber D, folios 13 and 17, Oyster Bay Conveyances.) In 1710, while holding office, he was one of the Supervisors who applied to the Assembly for a central hall and jail, and for authority to sell the old hall and two jails not central, before used, which was granted on day following. (Ass. Journal 1-274.) And on 2 March, 1712, he ordered the freeholders of the town of Oyster Bay to meet in the church at that place to arrange for the sale of land to pay the expenses of the town. (Oyster Bay Recds. D, p. 12.)

On 2d Sept., 1709, he was appointed assistant Justice of the Court of Common Pleas for Queens Co., Thos. Willet, first Judge and John Jackson, second Judge. (Liber A, folio 175, Queens Co.) At a special meeting of that court, held at Jamaica, 8 March, 1709, there were present Thos. Willet, Esq., first Judge, John Jackson, Esq., second Judge, and William Hallett and Thomas Jones, assistant Justices. At this meeting the will of John Townsend, dated 3 Aug., 1709, was proved. (Liber A, p. 175, Queens Co.)

His name frequently appears as Justice in the "Minutes of Court of Common Pleas, Queens Co." After 1692 this court had power to grant marriage licenses, licenses to school masters, and in taking proof of the installation of clergymen, and had control over highways and apportioned the county tax. (See Redfield's Law and Practise of Surrogate Court.)

Many anecdotes have been handed down concerning Maj. Thos. Jones, but few of them are worthy of preservation. One of these, founded upon facts, is as follows:

Having occasion to drive across the island with his wife from Fort Neck to Cold Spring, she became very thirsty, and as they approached the latter place she noticed a small stream of water by the roadside, whereupon she insisted upon getting out to allay her thirst. He remonstrated with her for wanting such poor water, and remarked that there was much better drinking water a short distance ahead. On reaching the place mentioned, he sprang out and carried some water to her in his hat. Having allayed her thirst, his own, and that of his horse in the same manner, he resumed his journey, and remarked to his wife, "I shall give this stream to the town for a watering place forever." He kept his promise, and the place has ever since been known as a "Public Watering Place" and is now known as "The Spout."

Its location is a short distance south of where the present Long Island Railroad depot at Cold Spring Harbor is located. The highway on which they were journeying was the "Old Cart Path" between Hempstead and Huntington, "by ye head of ye Cold Spring" (so called in the early land conveyances), and was then the northerly boundary of a large tract of land in which he had considerable interest. His right to this spring of water and land was vested in a deed from the Indians under date of 2 June, 1697, to Thos. Townsend (his father-in-law) and others, who on 6 June, 1697, admitted Maj. Thos. Jones with them as "an equal partner." (Liber B, folio 363, Oyster Bay Recds.) Of this we have spoken before.

Many years after, when this "Old Cart Path" was laid out by the road commissioners, it was ordered by them that "The Spout be a public watering place" (Liber A, folio 20 of Highways, Oyster Bay), and on the 25 Nov., 1825, a confirmatory order was granted by them concerning the same. (Liber A, folio 161 of Highways, Oyster Bay.)

Another anecdote (showing the cordial relations that existed between Maj. Thos. Jones and Lord Cornbury) concerning a visit made to him by the latter, of which Mr. C. B. Moore has told us that he had seen a printed record, has come down to us from Maj. Genl. Henry Floyd-Jones, a great grandson of Maj. Thos. Jones, and is as follows:

"During the administration of Governor Cornbury, the Sheriff issued a requisition for the arrest of Maj. Thos. Jones, but the latter being forewarned of the approach of the Sheriff's posse, caused a table to be placed before the entrance of his house that completely blocked up the doorway, and had a fine luncheon arranged upon it, while upon the side next the door were placed his pistols. The Sheriff's posse upon arrival encountered the major in the doorway, who, after reading the papers served upon him, sat down and wrote a note to Gov. Cornbury. This he handed to them, remarking that he would not subject himself to arrest, and, pointing to his pistols, added that if they insisted upon arresting him he would then and there fight it out; but if Gov. Cornbury, after reading his note, would send him an answer requesting him to give himself up he would go without further resistance. After a short parley among themselves they concluded not to push matters, and at his invitation sat down and partook of his feast. This over they returned with only the note, and shortly after the Governor with his retinue visited the major, and were royally entertained by him in the 'Old Brick House.' "

On 7 Dec., 1713, he made his will, and, as tradition states, wrote it himself. It is not overburdened with the usual phraseology of the early wills of his time, but is somewhat brief and made with considerable care. It was proved in Queens Co., on 2d Feb., 1714, and is recorded in N. Y. Surrogate's Office, Liber 9, folio 259; new number Liber 8, folio 301.

By the provisions of his will his wife Freelove had the entire use and control of his estate during her widowhood, and an equal one-fourth part of £1,109, the remaining three-fourths part he gave equally between his three daughters. The principal part of his estate, including the Old Brick House and land adjoining, he devised to his eldest son David in-tail male.

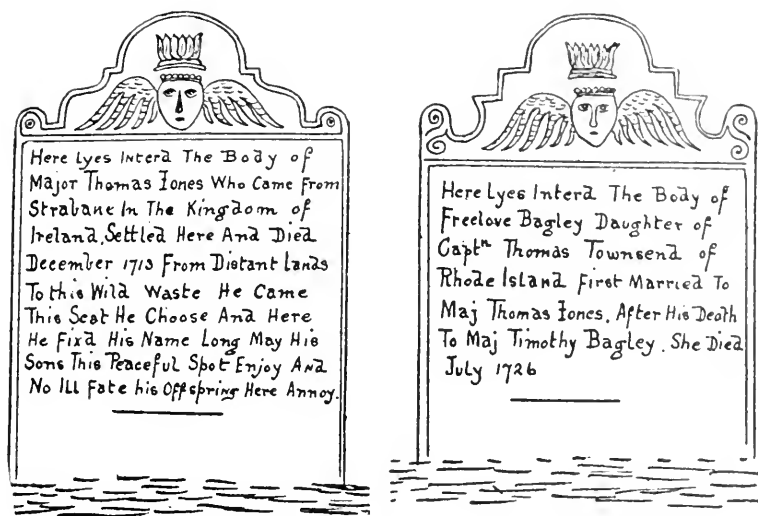

To his sons Thomas and William he gave his lands at the east end of the Great Plains, and northward of Mannetto Hill, and all his lands near Cold Spring, and land adjoining the Plains; also forty acres of salt meadow on West Neck, lying on the east side of the meadow given his son David.

He appointed as his executors his wife Freelove, and his friend the Rev. John Thomas, to whom letters of adms. were granted on 16 March, 1713.

He died in the Old Brick House on 13 Dec., 1713, and was buried a short distance south of the house on the east bank of the Massapequa River. Thirteen years after his decease his widow (who had married again) was buried at his side, and later his son David and his wife Anne (née Willet) found a resting place there.

The ancient burialplace, not larger than thirty feet square, was long kept sacred by his descendants, but serious inroads were made upon it by the tides, which in 1893 necessitated its removal. His headstone and that of his wife are of hard red sandstone, and are now (1900) in a good state of preservation.

Thompson's Hist. of L. I., speaking of his grave, states that he was interred agreeably to his own desire within one of the Indian forts on Fort Neck, near the bottom of the upland upon his farm, and Furman's Antiquities, in 1827, states his resting place was then known as the "Pirate's Grave."

For many years after his death it was the common belief that some of Maj. Jones' wealth was buried with him, and so deeply rooted had this become that his grave was opened by vandals in the quest of relics and the ancient bones left strewn upon the ground. Shortly after their reinterment it was discovered that one of his bones had been kept by some one in the hopes of getting a reward. This finally came into possession of one of his descendants, and was kept by him until 1893, when all that remained of those who were interred in the little burial spot was removed and placed in the burying ground adjoining Grace Church at South Oyster Bay—this bone with the rest. This bone, which was the upper half of the skull, was placed for a moment in the hands of the writer, nearly one hundred and eighty years after it had been first laid at rest.

The personal effects of Maj. Thos. Jones that have been preserved to us are few in number and widely scattered. A chair of his is now (1900) in the possession of Mrs. Samuel B. Romaine, and a very curious secretary is now owned by Mrs. John D. Jones. This also has a story. It was sent from Spain to some person of rank in Russia, and was captured by Maj. Thos. Jones during one of his privateering cruises. His silver, which his daughters inherited, is lost to the immediate family. An old silver tankard of his, lately in the possession of the Smith family of Centre Island, has, we are told, an ancient copper coin marked with the letters T. J. inlaid upon its cover, and is one that in the division of his estate fell to the lot of his daughter Freelove, who married Jacob Smith, and whose descendants have guarded it with religious care. Concerning its later ownership, many questions have been brought to light, and its whereabouts were but little known until the year 1893, when the will of Richard L. Parrish, of Oyster Bay, disclosed the fact that he (the then doubtful owner as claimed) had bequeathed it to an alien blood. (See under Jacob Smith and Freelove Jones.)

The date of Maj. Thos. Jones' birth is only conjectural; he died on 13 Dec., 1713, leaving six surviving children all under age. After his death his widow married (before 1716) Major Timothy Bagley, a retired British officer, by whom she had no issue. Little is known respecting her after her second marriage, but there are various traditions concerning her care for the property and her children.

Although of a Quaker family she, shortly after her marriage to Maj. Thos. Jones, was baptized into the Episcopal faith by the Rev. John Keith, at Oyster Bay, on 19 Nov., 1702 (Keith's Journal, p. 45.), and (Digest of the Records of the Soc. for the Proagation of the Gospel, p. 57.) She remained steadfast in her new faith and carefully watched over the spiritual welfare of her children, in which matter she was much aided by the Rev. John Thomas, Rector of St. George's Church, Hempstead, L. I.

WILL OF MAJOR THOMAS JONES (I. 1).

In the name of God Amen—In the seventh day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and thirteen, I, Thomas Jones, of Fort Neck, in the township of Oyster Bay, in Queens County, on the island of Nassau, in the Province of New York, Gentleman, being very weak in body but of perfect mind and memory, thanks be to God therefore, calling to mind the mortality of my body, and knowing that it is appointed for all men once to die, do make and ordain this my last will and testament. That is to say, principally and first of all I give and recommend my soul into the hands of God who gave it, and for my body, I do recommend it to the earth to be buried in a Christian like and decent manner at the discretion of my executors, nothing doubting but at the general resurrection I shall receive the same again by the mighty power of God. As to my worldly estate wherewith it hath pleased God to bless me in this life, I do give, divide and dispose of the same in the following manner and form—

Imprimus—I give and bequeath unto my well beloved son David, and his heirs legally begotten of his body, all my houses, mills, lands, and meadows except what will be hereafter occupied, situate, lying and being at the Massapequa at the South side of Oyster Bay, bounded on the West by West Neck purchase, and on the North by Powell's purchase, and East so far as my lands extend, as may at large appear by my deeds and conveyances; the said houses, mills, lands, and meadows to have and to hold to him the said David, and his heirs naturally begotten of his body for ever, and in default of issue to my said son David, to my next surviving male child, to him and his heirs naturally begotten of his body for ever. Likewise I give to my well beloved son David, and two horses, when capable of entering upon the estate aforesaid.

Then I give to my two sons Thomas and William Jones, all my lands lying and being at the East end of the Great Plains, and northward of Maunetto Hill, so called, containing in quantity more or less. Then I give unto my said two sons all my lands lying and being at or nigh to the head of Cold Spring, and all my land adjoining to the Plains, both wood land, and Plain land, all to be equally divided between my two said sons Thomas and William, freely to be enjoyed by them and their assigns forever. Also I will and ordain that my right of land, and meadow at Oak Neck, my twenty-five acres of land to be taken up in the undivided land of the "New Purchase," to be sold and disposed of at the discretion of my executors, and laid out in educating my two said sons Thomas and William.

Then it is my will and desire that my sons Thomas and William, have each of them two oxen and two horses out of my moveable estate when at the age of being capable to improve the lands willed as aforesaid.

Then I give unto my two sons aforesaid, Thomas and William, forty acres of salt meadow lying on West Neck at the South of Oyster Bay, lying on the East side of the meadow bequeathed to my son David, twenty acres to each of them, to have and to hold all and singular the said meadows unto them my two said sons; the said forty acres to be equally divided between them, freely to be enjoyed by them, their heirs and assigns forever.

That it is my will and desire, that in case of death of either of my said sons Thomas and William or default of issue, then the lands aforesaid bequeathed to them as above shall be the surviving of my said two sons, to his own proper use and behoof, freely to be enjoyed by him, his heirs and assigns forever.

Then I give unto my two sons Thomas and William Jones, all my Neck at the South of Oyster Bay, to be equally divided between them, to have and to hold to them, their heirs and assigns forever.

Then I give and bequeath unto my three sons, David, Thomas, and William Jones, swords and pistols to be equally divided between them

Then I give and bequeath to my dearly beloved wife Freelove, and to my beloved daughters Freelove, Sarah, Margaret and Elizabeth Jones, the sum of eleven hundred and nine pounds, to be equally divided between them, and in case my said daughters should die before marriage, or full age, or having lawful issue, that her or their part to be equally divided among the survivors, also it is my will and desire that whatever of my moveable estate is not valued and comprehended within the eleven hundred and nine pounds, be and remain in the hands of my beloved wife Free-love, to rear and bringing up my said daughters, and that each of them to receive their particular parts or portion of the said sum at their marriage or full age in law.

Then I give unto my beloved wife Freelove, the whole command, power and management of my whole estate, real and personal, during her widow-hood, or my aforesaid sons being under age.

Then I constitute and ordain my beloved wife Freelove, and loving friend John Thomas, executors of this my last will and testament. Lastly I do appoint my well beloved friends John Treadwell, Jim, and Walter overseers of this my last will and testament, to be aiding my beloved wife, and to see this my last will duly and truly performed.

I do hereby utterly disannul and revoke all and every other testaments, wills, legacies, executors by me, and in any ways before this time named.

Willed and bequeathed satisfying and confirming this and no other to be my last will and testament.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal the day and year above written.

THOMAS JONES [L. S.]

Signed, sealed, published and delivered by the said Thomas Jones as his last will and testament, in the presence of us the subscribers.

Proof of name and parentage of Thomas Townsend's wife.

Nassau Co.

This is to certify that I, George W. Cock, of Glen Cove, N. Y., skilled genealogist, local historian, through the grouping together of various fragments of information, having discovered that which James and Aurelia Townsend, in the "Memorial of the Townsend Brothers," assert in 1866 to have been hitherto unknown; i. e., the name and parentage of the first wife of Capt. Thomas Townsend, and the mother of Freelove, wife of Maj. Thos. Jones, Mary the wife of William McCoun, and Sarah the wife of Abraham Underhill, consider I am justified in designating as the wife of said Thomas Townsend, Sarah, youngest daughter of Robert and Mary (Hauxhurst) Coles, of Warwick, R. I.

Robert Coles died about 1654, and his estate was settled by the Town Council of Warwick; in that settlement mention is made of a daughter Sarah, and both Austin and Savage state that the widow, Mary Coles, married Matthias Harvy (as he wrote it), and with her children removed to Oyster Bay, L. I., and it would appear from the town records that Matthias Harvy with his stepsons settled on lots to the eastward of the Church Yard, probably at Ship Point, and before 1684 he removed to Flushing, N. Y.

Dr. Peter Townsend, of Oyster Bay, in company with a nephew Isaiah, about 1844 made a pilgrimage to Rhode Island in quest of historical matter concerning Townsend and allied families. They found in the house of Peleg Almy, Portsmouth, an old memorandum book of Thomas Townsend's, with a record of sundry transactions extending over a period from 1676 to 1713. The items pertinent to the matter in hand are as follows, viz.:

	1685	John Robinson.	Credit.
Sept. 16	By making my wife's coffin		05.00
	By making my child's coffin		02.06
		John Rogers.	Credit.
	By digging a grave		01.05
	By digging my child's		01.03
	By going to Flushing for father Harvy		04.00
	(doubtless on account of the funeral.)

Having seen the writings of Robert Coles, the second (now in my custody) a similar mention of father "Harvy," and believing that each of these expressions refer to Matthias Harvey, and knowing his relationship to Robert Coles was that of step-father, I feel justified in the deduction that for Thomas Townsend to have been warranted in addressing Matthias Harvy as "father," he must have been the husband of Sarah Coles, as the most diligent search showeth neither any own daughter of Matthias Harvy, nor any step-daughter other than Sarah for him to "wife." As supporting this contention I have in possession an original instrument in the hand writing of Matthias Harvy, of date of 1666, being a deed or conveyance from Marke Meggs to Nathan Burcham of Matinecock, witnessed by Matthias Harvy and Sarah Townsend. There being no record of wife or daughter of any Townsend at that period bearing the name of Sarah, and this witnessing having probably been done at the residence of Matthias Harvy, and Sarah's mother, I am prone to believe that Sarah, daughter of Robert and Mary Hauxhurst) Coles was, in 1666, the wife of Thomas Townsend, the son of John and Elizabeth. The ancient account book also shows the existence of living children, John, Mary, Free-love and Sarah.

 1713 Made his will.

MAJOR TIMOTHY BAGLEY, who m. Freelove, widow of Maj. Thomas Jones (I. 1), was a retired British officer. The date of their marriage is not known, but it probably occurred about 1716, as on the 5th of June of that year, he and his wife Freelove executed a deed to Samuel Prier, of Oyster Bay, for land in the "New Purchase" of that town that was formerly Daniel Whitehead's. (Liber 7, p. 372, Queens Co.) "Presumably he was from Ireland, as the name there was one of military fame." (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

Some papers now extant show he was in some way connected with a Thomas Bagley, of Skibbereen, County of Cork, Ireland.

Soon after his marriage he became prominent in the town of Oyster Bay, both in a civil and military way, and had many rights of land granted him. Some of these were possibly granted him for some military service rendered. (Official notice can be had of him in the N. Y. Hist. MSS. for 1664-1776, Report of N. Y. State Historian, Vol. 1, p. 449, and in the Colonial Laws of N. Y., by the Commissioners of Statutory Revision, Vol. 1, p. 756.) On 25 March, 1715, he was Capt. of a Troop of Horse of Queens Co. (See N. Y. Hist. MSS. LX., p. 54-58.)

John Johnson, who was Mayor of N. Y., in a certificate dated May 17, 1716, states that Maj. T. Bagley and other British subjects were sent over by Queen Anne in a regiment of foot for the expedition against the French in Canada, and that he was then alive. (N. Y. Hist. MSS. LX., p. 104-108.) Broadhead, in a footnote to Vol. 5, p. 984 of Doc. Rel. to Coll. Hist. of N. Y., states that he had a license dated 12 Feby, 1720, to manufacture oil from whale driven on shore on the south coast of Long Island, and a commission dated 25 June, 1723, appointing him as Ranger General on the island of Nassau, vice Hicks. "Vide Comms. III., p. 275, etc."

On 13 April, 1724, at a town meeting held in Oyster Bay, he and others were chosen Trustees of that town and given power to defend the town's rights in any court of law, with the right to sell any of the undivided lands in the "Old Purchase" of the town, etc. (Liber E, p. 164, Oyster Bay.)

He was Justice of the Peace for Queens Co., and was frequently chairman of the Grand Jury. (Minutes of Court of Genl. Sessions.)

Between the years 1716 and 1730 he purchased and sold many pieces of land in the town of Oyster Bay. During this period he became possessed of a large piece of land near Cold Spring Harbor, containing 312 acres, a large part of which in later years came into the possession of the descendants of Maj. Thomas Jones (I. 1).

This land was held by him until the 4th of Nov., 1741, when for the consideration of £375 he conveyed it to James Doughty. It embraced what is now (1899) the estate of Benjamin Schauck, the lands of Joseph and John H. Doty (descendants of James Doughty), a part of the lands of Helen Stewart and Samuel A. Jones, and all of Memorial Cemetery. The deed (not recorded) describes it as "being lands partly purchased by him, and partly taken up by him on account of his rights in the same 'Old Purchase' (of Oyster Bay), and was formerly surveyed and laid out to me by James Townsend, surveyor (now deceased) and lately to wit in the year 1736, resurveyed by Wm. Moyles, deputy surveyor."

From what proprietors he purchased this land, and what part of it was "taken up on his own rights" we are unable to state, but it is supposed that some of "his rights" were derived in some way through Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1).

The earliest matter of record respecting this is the survey made by James Townsend and recorded in Liber E, folio 17, Oyster Bay. This survey made on 28 Nov., 1729, differs somewhat from the one made by Moyles in 1736; the latter differing in some of the boundary lines and included fifty acres "purchased of ye Cooper's" (as shown by his map), apparently not included in Townsend's survey. Notwithstanding this, Townsend's survey embraced nearly the same in area, viz., 296 acres. For further particulars and a reproduction of Moyles' map see under Walter Jones (III. 13).

Later than this but little trace can be found of him on Long Island. Wm. Pinhorne, who was 2d Judge of Supreme Court of N. J., and who died in 1719, left a daughter, Elizabeth, who had married a Timothy Bagley. (Winfield's Hist. Hudson Co., N. J., p. 127.) (Do, "Land Titles, p. 131.)

Facsimile of his signature from his deed to Jas. Doughty, 4 Nov., 1741. More frequently he spells his name Bagley.

(II. 1) SARAH L. JONES, dau. of Maj. Thomas Jones (I. 1), b. probably 1695; d. Aug. 18, 1696, and was buried at Newport, R. I., in the Quaker burying ground called Clifton Grave Yard. (See records of Newport Hist. Soc.)

(II. 2) JUDGE DAVID JONES, son of Maj. Thomas (I. 1), ranking as the first judge of the family in America; b. at Fort Neck, Long Island, Sept. 16, 1699; d. at that place in the "Old Brick House," Oct. 11, 1775; m. Nov. 22, 1722, Anna, then aged 18, called the 2d dau. of Col. Wm. Willett, of Willett's Point, Westchester Co., and great granddaughter of the early settler Thomas Willett, of Bristol, Eng., who m. Sarah Cornell, at New York, in 1643 (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Soc., Vol. 10, p. 181), the latter of whom left sons, William, b. 1644, and Col. Thomas, b. 1645.

His wife, Anna, d. Jan. 31, 1750, ae 46, and as Thompson Hist. of L. I. states, m. as his second wife Margaret, widow of John Treadwell, by whom he had no issue. His first wife, Anna, was named in the will of her brother, Gilbert Willett (prob. 11 Mch., 1732), also in will of her father, Col. William (prob. 4 May, 1733). Margaret, his 2d wife, was a dau. of Col. William Willett, of West. Co., and his wife, Alice, dau. of Gov. Colden, and therefore a niece of his first wife, Anna; and may have been the widow of John Treadwell. She was named in the will of her brother, William Willett, prob. Dec. 13, 1765. Sarah Cornell, the great gr. mother of Judge David Jones' (II. 2) children, came from Essex, Eng., with her father, Thos. Cornell, and his wife, Rebecca Briggs, about 1635. (See Ancestry of Adam and Anne Mott, by Thos. Cornell.)

- +III. 1. Anna, b. 11 May, 1724.
 - 2. Sarah, b. 12 Feb., 1728; d. April, 1828.
- +3. Thomas, b. 20 April, 1731; d. 25 July, 1792.
- +4. Arabella, b. 7 Dec., 1734.
- +5. David, b. 30 April, 1737; d. 9 Sept., 1758.
- +6. Mary, b. 29 April, 1743.

The date of Judge David Jones' (II. 2) marriage, and the dates of the births of his children as above, are taken from a record of the same endorsed upon the back of a deed from Henry Lloyd to Maj. Thomas Jones (I. 1), dated May 19, 1713, and somewhat differ from those given by E. F. de Lancey in his introduction to Thos. Jones Hist of N. Y., Vol. 1, p. lviii. (See under David Jones (III. 5).)

HERE
THE BODY OF THE HONORABLE
DAVID JONES, WHO WAS BORN
SEPT. 16, 1699,
AND DIED OCT. 11, 1775,
AGED 76 YEARS AND 14 DAYS.

HERE LIES INTERED THE BODY OF ANNA JONES
FIRST WIFE OF THE HON. DAVID JONES, ESQ.
SHE WAS THE 2D DAUGHTER TO COL. WILLIAM WILLET, OF WESTCHESTER,
AND DIED 31 JANY, 1750,
AGED 46 YEARS.

They were originally interred in the old burying ground of Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1), on Fort Neck, but were re-interred later in Grace Church Yard, at South Oyster Bay. (See under Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1).)

The father of Judge David Jones (II. 2) dying when the latter was only fourteen years of age, we can suppose the boy sent to a proper preparatory teacher, and that his father's plans were probably followed by his mother and the Rev. John Thomas as his guardians. Mr. Thomas had been to England for an ordination in 1703, and must have been a man of education. He was at Hempstead, L. I., in 1704, and married, as believed, Margaret, daughter of the 2d Richard Floyd, of L. I., and Margaret Nicoll, his wife.

On Oct. 11, 1723, he gave a deed to his stepfather, Maj. Timothy Bagley, for sand on the north side of L. I., and was a witness with him to Col. John Jackson's will. Judge David Jones (II. 2) was then of age, and must have been in fair accord with the noted colonel (who had been many years in office and who had married a daughter of John Seaman), and the strong and numerous family of Seaman and Jackson (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec. 2, p. 3) doubtless increased his prestige. His father-in-law, Wm. Willett, doubtless lived in Westchester Co., and associated with but did not belong to the Quakers.

We can allow him only about ten years for pursuing the practice of the law, forming friends, but not attracting much attention. We have not the particulars of the legal studies of the young man. It is inferred that his wife was not an Episcopalian.

After Queen Anne's death in 1714, the Guelph Kings George I. and George II. favored Presbyterians and dissenters, and the high church Episcopalians soon lost political power and popular favor. His father, Maj. Thos. Jones, did not live late enough to see or be affected by it.

The next minister of Hempstead Parish after Mr. Thomas was the Rev. Henry Jenney, in 1725, who has favored us with records lately printed (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec. 9, p. 183). Before this we have no records. Before 1731 we notice none of the name of Willett or Jones, but many Cornells. Mr. Jenney's father was of Suffolk or Sussex Co., Eng., and had recently preached in a small parish in Ireland, where it is probable there were some Quakers. His father was perhaps one of the sons of George Jenney, of England.

Wm. Vesey, at Hempstead, in 1695, called the first Episcopal clergyman of N. Y. City, was of an old family settled in Ireland.

The war under Charles I. broke out in 1640, with the native Irish, called Confederate Catholics, against the Protestants, called Presbyterians, and was violently prosecuted and left irreconcilable feelings of hostility between them. The Bishops supported the King, who made terms with the Confederate Catholics, and were all overthrown. In 1650 the Catholics were subdued by Cromwell and their lands were parcelled out.

Charles II. recovered the throne in 1660 and tried to reinstate the Episcopalians, but could not keep the Papists quiet. James II., after his second marriage, favored also the anti-Cromwellians, but he and his supporters were mastered by William of Orange in 1690, and many were driven away.

Out of all this we must derive our opinions respecting those who came from Ireland to America, and we find it clear that Episcopalians and Presbyterians generally took different sides in this country.

As early as 1734 Judge David Jones (II. 2) had from Gov. Cosby (who came from Ireland) the appointment of Judge of Queens Co., sitting in its Court of Common Pleas.

In 1735 Gov. Cosby and household and Chief Justice de Lancey attended the consecration of the new Episcopal church at Hempstead, L. I., favored by the Jones family (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec. 9, p. 183). This was after the Zenger trials, and the Chief Justice, perhaps, was not long to gain favor from the neutrals which he had lost among the Presbyterians.

On June 2, 1737, at an election for Members of Assembly for Queens Co., Col. Isaac Hicks had 432 votes, David Jones (II. 2) 390, Capt. Benj. Hicks 342, and Thos. Alsop 287. As reported, the electors were treated handsomely by the two first when elected. The Quakers were divided; only freeholders were permitted to vote; two women (widows) voted as freeholders.

The Hicks family, a large one, was generally voted for and supported by the Quakers. No subsequent contest was so close as affecting our estimate of him personally. (Queens Co. in Olden Times, Onderdonk, p. 21.)

In 1738 he witnessed the will of his neighbor, the 2d Col. John Jackson, into whose large family his brother William (II. 7) had married before his election to Assembly.

From 1737 to 1758 he was Member of Assembly, and also in 1761, and for thirteen years presided as Speaker of the House; here he made a decided mark, a part of public history.

On Dec. 15, 1737, he introduced a bill in the Genl. Assembly to repeal so much of the law of this Colony concerning Quakers as required them to produce certificates.

This bill was lost, Chief Justice de Lancey dissenting. (Journals of Leg. Council of N. Y. S., 1743-1775.)

Oct. 20, 1737, he introduced a bill "to restrain tavern keepers from selling strong liquors to servants and apprentices," etc. Passed.

Sept. 14, 1738, he, with Col. Isaac Hicks and others, were appointed by the Legislature as a committee to prepare an address of condolence to his Majesty on the lamented death of her late Majesty Queen Charlotte.

Nov., 1739, a bill was introduced by him and passed, to prevent setting on fire or burning the old grass on the Hempstead Plains.

At a meeting of Genl. Ass. held on 4 Oct., 1752, at the house of Jacob Dyckman, in the Out Ward of N. Y. City, he was chosen Speaker, "a choice His Excellency the Governor was pleased to approve of." (Journal of Leg. Council, 1743-1775.)

July 4, 1753, he and John Thomas and others were appointed commissioners to examine and consider the encroachments made on this Province by the neighboring Colonies. (N. Y. Coll. Laws, pub. 1898, III., p. 912.)

Sept. 3, 1750, at an election then held, the vote for David Jones, late Speaker, was 452 votes, and for Thos. Cornell 477, elected. For Judge Hicks 293, and David Seaman 288, both defeated. (Queens Co. in Olden Times, p. 24.)

In 1752 the two late members, Jones and Cornell, "who carried the election by a great majority," were said to be opposed to the Court party, then directed, as supposed, by the English Admiral Clinton, who did not favor de Lancey.

In 1758 there was a warmly contested election for Members of Assembly. Mr. Hicks, who was called a partisan of the Gov. Admiral Clinton, and also of his colleague, Zebulon Seaman, were elected over Mr. Justice Jones and Mr. Cornell, who were termed of the Livingston party. (Queens Co. in Olden Times, p. 31.)

Judge David Jones (II. 2), although an Episcopalian, was not of the high church party that his son, Judge Thomas (III. 3), adhered to, and, we infer, inclined somewhat to the Presbyterians and other religious sects among whom, his son, Judge Thomas (III. 3), tells us, "most of his constituents were." Allied as he was to the Willett family, and being strongly endorsed by the Jackson, Seaman, and Livingston parties, we can readily understand how his son, Thomas (III. 3), was not willing to endorse him politically as against the de Lancey party.

In 1754, while Speaker of Assembly, he had much to do in procuring the charter for the College of the City of N. Y. (now Columbia). A clause in this charter provided that its president should always be a member of the Church of England. This created a furious storm of opposition, and David Jones was much abused for favoring it. His son Thomas tells us "it threw the whole Province into a ferment, and Presbyterian pulpits thundered sedition." We infer from the following article that he was not entirely in favor of this clause, but he lost much politically, as later elections for Members of Assembly proved. We refer to article published in the N. Y. Gazette and Weekly Post Boy of July 28, 1755, and although not over his signature he was probably cognizant of it and allowed its publication, viz. :

"Whereas it has been reported to the reproach and prejudice of David Jones Esq. Speaker of Gen. Assembly, that he used his endeavours for obtaining a charter for establishing the college with the exclusion of all professions (but those of the Church of England) from being President. These may serve to show that we have had great opportunities to know his sentiments in the affair, and never have observed or discovered in any one instance his application or inclination for having the charter in the form and manner it now is touching the limitation aforesaid, but on the contrary have often seen him shew his dislike thereunto, and have heard him declare his opinion against it."

Whatever his convictions may have been upon this point, he nevertheless strongly supported the College against the attacks made upon it by Presbyterians and others, based upon what they were pleased to call its "narrow Church of England basis." He was then Speaker of Assembly, and during the controversy he was the recipient of many anonymous letters, and intense excitement prevailed; but James de Lancey was Lieut. Gov., the Episcopalian or Court party were in power, and the war between Great Britain and France breaking out in 1775 the matter was dropped.

These attacks made apparently at the Church of England, were but some of the not far distant rumblings of 1776. His son, Thomas (III. 3), has much to say (in his Hist. of N. Y.) upon this affair, and from his Royalistic standpoint denounces the onslaught in most bitter terms. For integrity of purpose and adherence to the Church when it was one of the principal grievances made against the mother country (which, unfortunately, became a great factor in alienating the feelings of the people) we can but allow both father and son the highest praise. We may not endorse them politically, but both lived up to the truth of their convictions through the most trying times.—J. H. J.

Feb. 24, 1761, at an election for Members of Assembly for Queens Co. (total vote 650), David Jones received 382, Thos. Cornell 363, Thos. Hicks 342, and Zebulon Seaman 217. This was close and not satisfactory. A new election was ordered, perhaps by arrangement or compromise—de Lancey dying; Mr. Cornell and Mr. Seaman became seated as members. (Assembly Journal, 2, 648.)

“It was common for a large town to nominate and generally vote for two members, leaving other towns to vote for either or to scatter their votes, by which course sometimes both were elected. It was unfair toward the small towns, and it compelled them to unite and have caucuses.” (MSS. C. B. M.)

This election was successfully contested by Messrs. Hicks and Seaman, and the Sheriff, who returned Jones and Cornell, was reprimanded by the House for illegal behavior, and a new election was held on 20 April, 1761, when he made a double return, viz., Thos. Cornell and David Jones, and Thos. Cornell and David Seaman. On 9 June an examination of the votes was made, and a decision made in favor of Seaman. (Ass. Jour. 2-648, 687.) Onderdonk states that the poll clerks were cited before the committee, and the House decided that seven persons who had purchased freeholds within three months of the time of voting, should notwithstanding be allowed their votes, thus deciding in favor of Seaman.

The second French War occurred in 1755 and greatly affected the northern and western boundary of the Colony of N. Y. The judge's son, Lieut. David Jones (III. 5), took part in it, and suffered an "ill fate." The soldiers were poorly protected, but as natives probably fared better than strangers.

On Oct. 10, 1755, letters to Messrs. Jones and Cornell, members of Assembly, were written by Genl. Sir Wm. Johnson, expressing thanks for cheeses and sheep sent from Queens Co. for the relief of the army on the frontier. (Doc. Hist. N. Y., Vol. II., p. 702). 'These show that the Genl. had received 69 cheeses and 200 sheep, being part of the 10,000 raised in Queens Co., and further "Your cheeses were highly acceptable and reviving, for unless among some of the officers, food was scarcely known among us," etc. (N. Y. Gazette and Weekly Post Boy, Sept. 15, 1755.)

The office of judge formed in popular estimation no objection to action as a politician; nearly all of the judges were partisans, but not all the lawyers. It was an old abuse in England to promote a partisan to be judge, but it has taken the course of having the Chancellor and Chief Justice from the politicians, and the others from the lawyers. There were four judges of the Supreme Court of N. Y., ranking as first, second, third and fourth. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

Judge David Jones (II. 2) was a judge for fifteen years. He was first appointed in 1758, as fourth judge, or youngest and lowest in rank, when James de Lancey, the previous judge and Chief Justice was acting as Governor. He was re-appointed in 1761 under George III. The rule was that all went out of office on the death of a King, but Judges were generally re-appointed.

In 1762 he was re-appointed as third judge, and in 1763 as second judge, Horsmanden being chief.

This position was apparently held by Mr. Jones until 1773, when he probably resigned in favor of his son, Thomas (III. 3), no other appointment as second judge in the meantime being made.

William Smith became a junior judge in 1763, and held until 1769. Robert Livingston also became a judge in 1763. Geo. Duncan Ludlow became a junior judge in 1769, and lived in Queens Co.

We have very few accounts of their decisions. Perhaps the absence of complaints, and the general good standing which the Court attained until the war broke out are their best eulogy or defense. We infer that Wm. Smith on the Bench more often agreed with Jones than with Ludlow.

David Jones' (II. 2) position and action as Speaker was more prominent.

In 1737, when first elected, he perhaps had no occasion to act as a partisan.

Admiral George Clinton was Governor from 1743 to 1753, whose family was somewhat inclined to the Presbyterians, and who did not favor de Lancey or the Episcopalians.

In 1745 England was still at war with France, and the great grandson of James II. (called the Young Pretender) landed in Scotland and attempted to secure the crown of Great Britain. The effect in this country was to exhaust Spain and France as well as England, and make them less formidable here in the Provinces.

The strain against Admiral Clinton as Governor of N. Y. (1743-1753) while the English gained at sea turned much upon reports made in the English Privy Council respecting occurrences here, and directions made in England about affairs here were based upon such reports.

The reports had been made by the Governor, who would take care to urge his own views and interests, and would take care not to report the acts of the Colonial Legislature adverse to them, and neglecting to protect colonial interests.

The Privy Council had called for the appointment of colonial agents to reside in London and present the matters of the colony and advocate colonial interests. The Governor had before appointed these agents and they had considered themselves bound to advocate the views of the Governor. The result was the Colonial Legislature of N. Y. resolved to appoint a London agent themselves, and appointed Robert Charles their agent and directed him to correspond with their Speaker, David Jones (II. 2). The N. Y. Coll. Documents (Vol. 5) give us some opportunity of studying their acts. He died before serious fighting occurred on L. I., but not before the preparations for the war.

Lieut. Gov. Colden acted as Governor on the death of Lieut. Gov. de Lancey in 1760, and repeatedly afterwards. He was willing to disparage Judge David Jones (II. 2) when first appointed judge, and while still Speaker, and while by authority of the Colonial Assembly he was corresponding with the colony's agent residing in London.

We note a letter of Colden to his son, dated July 5, 1759

(before he was Lieut. Gov.), which has been published in the N. Y. Hist. Soc. Coll. for 1869, Vol. 2, p. 206. He was professing to comment upon Judge Wm. Smith's Hist. of N. Y., to whom in politics he was much opposed, and who had criticised very sharply and often inaccurately the character of the previous Governors of the colony. Mr. Colden reviewing Gov. Fletcher's course said "that while Col. Fletcher was Governor the inhabitants of New York carried on a trade to Madagascar while that island was frequented by pirates, and many of the pirates came and dispersed on Long Island and Delaware Bay." We notice that everyone who came was called a pirate. He proceeded: "It has often been remarked that none of the pirates made any use of their money to any real advantage to themselves except one Jones, who settled on the south side of Long Island, whose son made a remarkable figure as Speaker of the Assembly while Mr. Clinton was Governor; excepting this one no remains of the others are to be discovered."

It is plain that Mr. Colden as well as Mr. Smith spoke of occurrences before he came to this country, and of which he personally knew nothing. We have no voucher but his own for the slanderous story, as he did not tell us by whom "it had often been remarked." It is true "no remains of the others are to be discovered."

Persons named and directly accused by the blustering Irishman Coote, Earl of Bellomont, such as Gardiner of Gardiner's Island; Everett, the lawyer; Thos. Clark, of New York, and the like, who were never accused to their faces nor prosecuted so as to have a trial, shook off without difficulty the vile accusations.

This Coote blindly speaks of one Smith and Jones having a vessel which was seized or subject to seizure, but this is all we know about it. No matter how many partisan tongues were started nor how "often it has been remarked," by no one knows whom, we have to conclude that there was no truth in the story, and in fact no evidence of it deserving attention. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

Colden, who became Lieut. Gov. on the death of Chief Justice de Lancey in 1760, was soon at variance with the Assembly, which was then controlled by the Smith and Livingston party (or popular party of the day), who were Presbyterians, and therefore strongly opposed to the Royalists with their Church of England views.

The popular party were desirous of having judges independent of the Court party, while Colden, on the other hand, took opposite views, and refused to renew the commissions of the judges of the Supreme Court excepting on terms of "during pleasure."

At the death of Chief Justice de Lancey, the puisne judges on the Bench were John Chambers, Daniel Horsmanden and David Jones (II. 2), men whom the latter's son, Judge Thomas Jones (III. 3) characterized as "gentlemen of unblemished character, undoubted ability and affluent fortune." Later, speaking of his father, Judge David Jones (II. 2), he resumes, "He ever bore the character of an honest, modest, sensible man; his religion was that of the English Church, and his reputation stood fair and unblemished in the estimation of mankind."

Mr. Platt, who succeeded to the Chief Justiceship, died in 1762, and Daniel Horsmanden was appointed in his place, with David Jones (II. 2) as 2d judge, Wm. Smith as 3d, and Robert Livingston as 4th. The appointment of the last two, we are told, "was a piece of policy." Before their appointment an attempt was made by the Smith-Livingston party to have Wm. Smith appointed as 2d judge in preference to David Jones, who had been on the Bench many years. This, we are told by Judge Thomas Jones (III. 3), was done because Horsmanden was an old man and likely to die, and Smith would then succeed him, and also because David Jones was a Churchman and a friend to the established constitution.

Their petition was rejected and David Jones was appointed as 2d judge. Smith died in 1769 and Ludlow (a strong Episcopalian and Loyalist) was appointed. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

This adherence of the Court party to the Established Church caused bitter feelings and a long struggle between dissenting sects and the government. (Lodge's Eng. Colonies in America.) It had its beginning under Lord Cornbury, and what Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1) supported in its infancy in this country, his son, Judge David (II. 2), lived to be an active participator in, but died just as the thunderings of 1776 broke upon the scene.

In 1773 Judge David Jones (II. 2), built a large house on his estate at Fort Neck, which he called Tryon Hall in honor of Gov. Tryon. (See particulars under Judge Thomas Jones (III. 3).)

In 1773 Judge David Jones (II. 2), being in ill health and in the 75th year of his age, resigned his position as judge of the Supreme Court, and Gov. Tryon, with the advice of His Majesty's Council, appointed his son, Thomas Jones (III. 3), to the seat vacated by his father. He retired to his estate on Fort Neck where he died in the 77th year of his age, on Oct. 11, 1775.

"He possessed the clearness of mind and incisiveness of character which is so marked a characteristic of his race, never hesitated in doing anything he believed to be right regardless of the consequences, and always commanded the confidence of the public throughout his long career." (Ed. F. de Lancey in Thos. Jones Hist. of N. Y.)

For thirteen years he filled the office of Speaker of Assembly, and on one occasion had the firmness to order the doors of the Assembly closed against the Governor until a bill then under discussion and about to be passed, which was not acceptable to the Governor, which his Excellency had determined to prevent by an immediate prorogation. (Thompson's L. I.)

"During his whole life he was the unyielding advocate of the rights of the people against every species of royal encroachment, and no man participated more largely of the public confidence and respect." (Thompson's L. I.)

To Judge David Jones (II. 2) and his heirs in-tail was devised the greater part of his father's estate at South Oyster Bay, who by suffering a Common Recovery the life estate thus devised to him was changed into a fee, which he devised to his son Thomas (III. 3) during life, with remainder on failure of issue, to his (David (II. 2) daughter Arabella (III. 4) and her issue in-tail-male.

Common Recovery was a mode of conveying lands by matter of record through the forms of law, formerly in frequent use but now obsolete. The fee (or fee simple) being an estate of inheritance belonging to the owner, and transmissible to his heirs absolutely and simply, without condition attached to the tenure.

The entailment of the property by David Jones (II. 2) on his son Thomas saved it from being forfeited, as he adhered to the royal cause during the Revolutionary War, and on the restoration of peace was "attainted" and forced to leave the country for England, where he died without issue. The large estate thus devised him under his father's will was by a provision in that will vested in the testator's daughter Arabella (III. 4) and her heirs in-tail-male. She married Richard Floyd, who in accordance with a further provision in the will of his grandfather, David Jones (II. 2) took the surname of Jones in addition to his own, and also the entailed estate, hence the origin of the double name, Floyd-Jones.

The will of David Jones (II. 2) was a long and special one. It was dated 26 July, 1768, and proved in N. Y. City, Oct. 27, 1775. To which he later added three codicils. (See Vol. 30, pages 36-45, N. Y. City Surrogate's Office.)

ABSTRACT.

After recommending his soul into the hands of Him who gave it, he orders his body to be laid out in homespun linen, put in a plain coffin and to be buried in his own burying ground on the left side of his first wife, in a decent and Christianlike manner without pomp.

All his beaches, lands, marshes, and grounds covered with water in Queens Co., he gives his son Thomas (III. 3) for his use during his life, and after his death to the use of the first son of his said son Thomas, and the heirs male of such first son, etc., and in failure of such issue to the use of the second son, and sons of his said son Thomas during their lives, etc.

On failure of heirs male of his son Thomas, he gives all the said real estate to and for the use of the oldest daughter of his said son Thomas during life, etc. In case of a total failure of issue of his son Thomas, he gives the same to and for the use of his grandson David Richard Floyd, the oldest son of his daughter Arabella, for his life, and after his death to and for the use of the first son of his said grandson, in-tail forever, they taking the surname of Jones.

In case of total failure of issue of all his children, he gives said lands to the College of the City of N. Y., the rents and issues to be applied yearly to the maintenance of charity schools, etc., two of said schools always to be in Queens Co., one at Jamaica and the other in the town of Oyster Bay.

To his wife Margaret he gives all the money, debts, slaves, goods and chattels she had as her own estate or was due her at the time of her marriage with me, and all the increase thereof, the large silver tankard and silver teapot which have been made since our marriage and paid for with her money, my riding chair, horse, and £500, and the use of his slave Lucretia to attend upon her during her widowhood.

To his daughter Anna £1,000 for life.

To his daughter Arabella £1,500 and his slave girl Rose, with all the children she now has or may have.

To his daughter Mary £1,000 for life and his negro woman Lilly and all her children; also his secretary and all his plate and silver.

To his grandson David Richard Floyd, and the eldest son of his daughter Arabella, his gold watch, sleeve buttons, and knee and shoe buckles.

To his grandson David Jones (IV. 13) the eldest son of his daughter Mary, his lands in Ulster County on the Walkill River, etc., and his Frontenack gun, with the initial letters of my son David's name writt upon a silver plate on the stock.

To the Parish Church of Hempstead £300, the interest thereof to be used for the instruction of poor children of the town of Oyster Bay.

To his son Thomas he gives all the remainder of his estate after his funeral expenses are paid, and my wife supplied with provisions and firewood for herself and her domestics, and hay and provender for her horse as long as she shall think proper to live with my family not exceeding one year.

By a codicil dated 3 Oct., 1768, he revokes such part of his former will as relates to lands in Queens Co., given his son Thomas in-tail, and bequeaths the same to his said son Thomas for life, with remainder to William Nicoll, Jr., of Suffolk Co., and Samuel Clowes, of Queens Co., and to their heirs during the life of his said son Thomas, etc., to hold the same in-tail male, and in default of such issue, to the eldest daughter of his said son Thomas for life, with remainder to first son of said daughter, etc., with express conditions that the devisee taking the estate shall at the age of 21 years and always thereafter to take the surname of Jones in addition to his own, etc., etc.

By a codicil dated Dec. 21, 1771, he gives his daughter Mary the use of his lands in Ulster Co. and £200 to build her a house thereon, and to his grandson David all his meadows at West Neck.

By a codicil dated Jan. 9, 1772, he orders that his son Thomas shall live and dwell with my family on that part of my plantations called Fort Neck, yearly during his life for the space of three months at a time, and in case of his refusal, etc., then all his aforesaid real estate shall immediately vest in and be the property of such persons to whom it ought to go as if my said son Thomas was naturally dead.

David Jones.

Facsimile of his signature from his acknowledgment in the deed from John Townsend to Thos. Townsend, June 19, 1731.

The original will of David Jones (after its probate in 1775) was in the possession of his daughter, Arabella Floyd, the wife of Col. Richard Floyd, until 1783, when at her request and upon the advice of her brother, Thomas Jones (III. 3), then in England, it was given in charge of the wife of Genl. Nathaniel Woodhull, and deposited in her house along with the General's will for safekeeping.

The reason for this we are told was "that there was at that time reason to believe that the house of Mrs. Woodhull was not in danger of being plundered by the Americans," etc., but in the year following her house was destroyed by fire, and the wills and all Mrs. Floyd's plate entirely lost. (Thos. Jones Hist. of N. Y., Vol. II., p. 593.)

As the troubles of the Revolutionary War followed soon after Judge David Jones' death, little was done toward administering upon his estate. The executors named in his will had qualified, but owing to the death of one, Wm. Nicoll, and of the treasonable actions of the others, Thomas Jones and Richard Floyd, further execution of the will was delayed. In 1786 letters of administration were granted to Samuel Jones (III. 8), of Oyster Bay (attorney of John Gale and Anna, his wife, and of Thos. Jones (III. 10), and Mary, his wife), the said Anna and Mary being daughters and legatees of David Jones; and to Samuel Clowes, Esq., of South Hempstead. (Liber 39, folio 54, Queens Co. Adms.) As the laws concerning the care of moneys for the poor, in force at the time of his death, had later been repealed, there was no one to whom his bequest of £300 could be paid, and it remained in his administrators' hands until 24 March, 1795, when a special Act was passed authorizing the Overseers of the Poor of the town of Oyster Bay to receive the same.

Following his noble example, a grandson of his brother William (Samuel Jones (IV. 10), of Jericho, L. I., made a bequest of $30,000 (to be called the "Jones Fund"), the interest of which was to be used for the relief of the poor of that town. This was in 1836. Fourteen years later (1850) a similar bequest of $5,000 was made by another member of the family, Walter R. Jones (IV. 30) for the same purpose. The moneys thus bequeathed to the town are now under the care and management of five trustees, elected by the people, and officially known as "Trustees of the Jones Fund."

Judge David Jones (II. 2) was long a member of St. George's Episcopal Church, of Hempstead. A deed for his pew in this church (now in the possession of the family) is curious; we give it below:

The Rector and Inhabitants of the Parish of Hempstead, on Nassau Island, in communion of the Church of England as by law established—To all whom these presents shall come, greeting—Know ye that we, the said Rector and Inhabitants, &c., for and in consideration of ten pounds ten shillings New York money paid by David Jones, Esq., Thos. Cornell and Micah Smith, gents: Have given and granted and by these presents do give and grant unto the said David Jones all that the full equal third part of a certain pew in the body of St. George's Church in Hempstead aforesaid marked number eighteen. To have, use and enjoy the said third part of the said pew unto the said David Jones, and the heirs of his body, he and they cleansing, maintaining and keeping the same in good repair at his or their own proper costs and charges. Saveing and reserving unto the said Rector and Inhabitants and their successors not only the reversion thereof failing the heirs of the said David Jones, but also the free use and disposition thereof for the benefit and advantage of the said Church during his or their absence from the Parish aforesaid. In testimony whereof we have caused the seal of our corporation to be hereunto affixed. Witness, the Rev. Mr. Robert Jenny, Rector, and John Cornell, and Micah Smith, present Church Wardens of the said church this 12th day of October in the year of our Lord 1740.

(II. 4) MAJ. THOMAS JONES, son of Maj. Thomas (I 1); b. about 1702, drowned in Long Island Sound, Nov. 13, 1741, being the first of his father's family to suffer an "ill fate." He never married, and died intestate.

In 1713 he was named in his father's will and then under age. On Aug. 23, 1734, he received his father's military title, and that of his stepfather, being commissioned as Major of the Queens Co. Regt., which regt. was Colonel John Jackson's and Major Jones'.

"It was an old English fashion to call regiments by the names of the colonels, and the titles would be kept in the same families as long as possible." (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

In 1739 he was one of the incorporators of the ferry from Matinecock, Long Island, to Connecticut, "Then ranking as a public improvement." It was controlled and managed by him, and was in active operation until his death in 1741. It was known as a horse boat ferry from the fact that the motive power was derived from a movable platform worked by horses. It was much used because at that period there were no bridges across the Harlem River (excepting King's Bridge), nor across the Bronx, and other streams emptying into Long Island Sound; and until after the Revolutionary War the course of travel from New York for New England was through Queens Co. to convenient crossing places along the north shore of L. I.

By a newspaper report (copied in Queens Co. in Olden Times, p. 22) we learn that "The ferryboat of Maj. Thomas Jones, of Oyster Bay, was upset in the Sound, and himself, his negro, three men and one woman who were passengers, with six horses, were all drowned on Nov. 13, 1741."

A patent for this ferry, which later became known as "Major Jones' ferry," was granted on July 13, 1739, by His Majesty's Council to John Budd, Hachaliah Brown and Jonathan Brown, of Westchester Co., and gave the inhabitants of Oyster Bay the right to establish a ferry between Oyster Bay Harbor and a point between the Bryam and Mamaroneck rivers in Westchester Co. A "table of fees" was made by the Council on March 27, 1739, regulating the charges. (Col. N. Y. Hist. MSS., p. 534-537.) (Land Papers XII., p. 132.)

On 21 Aug., 1739, these three patentees admitted Saml. Maccoune, Thomas Jones, Penn Townsend and others of Oyster Bay as patentees with them, "as was proposed and designed by them before obtaining their patent," for the consideration of £37.10, which amount was due from them toward the expenses of procuring the patent. (Liber 10, p. 369, Queens Co.), and on 27 Oct., 1739, a confirmation of this patent was obtained by them from the town. (Liber F, p. 37, Oyster Bay.)

On Nov. 2, 1739, Maj. Thos. Jones (II. 4) purchased their interests for £31.8, with the conditions that he should at his own cost and charge keep sufficient boats of need required at some convenient landing on ye bounds of Oyster Bay, with able and skilful servants to attend said ferry from ye bounds of Oyster Bay to Rye in Connecticut. (Deed not recorded; in possession of family.)

This purchase with others (Liber 10, p. 369, Queens Co.) probably made him sole owner of the franchise, and on 12th of Nov., 1739, he purchased of Wright Frost, Daniel Underhill, John Prior, Henry Cock, Jonas Latten, Jacob Frost and Daniel Frost, the then proprietors of Fox Island in Matinecock in the town of Oyster Bay, all their interest in said island, "bounded on north by the bank, on south by the edge of the meadow, on east by the beach, and on the west by the beach, it being all woodland, three acres more or less, with privilege to build a wharf and pier for accommodating a ferry and boats, and also ye privilege of ye creek called Fox Creek, nigh unto said island; that is, to pass and repass to and from said creek with passengers and freight to said island, etc., etc. (Deed not recorded; in possession of the family.)

After his death in 1741 the ferry was abandoned, and on Sept. 4, 1770, his brothers, Judge David Jones (II. 2) and William Jones (II. 7) conveyed to Deborah Prindle, of Derby, Conn.

(wife of Enoch Prindle), "all their right in the house and lands at Matinecock Ferry lately belonging to our brother Major Thos. Jones, with the land at Fox Island, and the privilege of the ferry." (Liber 12, p. 163, Queens Co.) On Sept. 13, 1783, Enos J. Prindle, of Derby, Conn., conveyed the same to Daniel Cock. (Lib. I, folio 34, Oyster Bay.)

For the privilege of running the ferry the patentees were to pay to the town on the 25 of March (commonly called Lady's Day), a yearly rental of two shillings and sixpence. Some of the ferriage charges as fixed by the Council were as follows:

One person	£0	0	6
One man and horse.....	0	3	0
One full barrel	0	1	0
One empty barrel	0	0	4
For every twenty sheep, hogs and sows.....	0	5	0
Horned cattle, two years old and upwards....	0	2	0
Horned cattle, under one year old.....	0	1	0
For each 100 weight of gunpowder.....	0	1	6

Under his father's will he was given jointly with his brother William several pieces of land on the north and south sides of Long Island, but dying without issue the lands thus bequeathed to him reverted to his brother William. His estate does not appear to have been administered upon by any duly authorized person. Some papers preserved to us show that his brother David, "who called himself executor thereof," submitted an account on 4 Oct., 1768, to the heirs at law, placing the value of his personal estate at £768.15.0. This was divided into six equal parts, one-sixth to each of the following: David Jones, Sarah Clows, representatives of Margaret Johnson, William Jones, Thomas Smith, and Elizabeth Lawrence. From this we infer that a mutual division of his estate was to be made between his brothers and sisters, or their representatives, and that his sisters Margaret and Elizabeth had each married a second husband.

Judge David Jones (II. 2) died in 1775, and the estate (then unsettled) was cared for by the only surviving brother, William (II. 7).

The judge's son, Thomas (III. 3), in behalf of David R. Floyd (the only son of his sister Arabella (III. 4)), had already laid claim to part of the estate, and some litigation may have ensued. He evidently did not know of the deed from his father and his uncle William (II. 7), of Sept. 4, 1770, cited under this article.

(II. 6) MARGARET JONES, dau. of Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1); b. about 1706; d. before 1768; m. first, Ezekiel Smith, prob. of Stoney Brook, near Princeton, N. J., and by another account, Clark.

She m. as her 3^d husband (perhaps as her 2^d) John Hill, a strong Royalist who at the close of the Revolutionary War settled in Canada in the vicinity of Niagara Falls. In the settlement of the estate of her brother, Maj. Thos. Jones (II. 4), her share was called "the representatives of Margaret Johnson (perhaps meaning Jones), and there was charged against it a bond of John Hill for £100, and of Ezekiel Smith of £50, leaving her share in debt to the estate.

Issue by her last husband, John Hill: Margaret, who m. John Robins, of Southampton, L. I., whose son Ezekiel left a dau. Mary, b. Nov. 7, 1806, who. m. William Townsend Jones (IV. 42).

(II. 7) WILLIAM JONES, son of Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1); b. Apl 25, 1708; d. Aug. 29, 1779, on West Neck, at the south side of Long Island; m. Apl 22, 1731, Phoebe, b. Aug. 6, 1715; d. May 10, 1800, dau. of the 2d Colonel John Jackson (7), of Jerusalem South, L. I., and his wife Elizabeth, dau. of Samuel Hallett, and great grand dau. of Annie Winthrop, sister of Gov. John, of Mass.

His father-in-law, the 2d Col., was the eldest son of the 1st Col. John Jackson, whose will was made Aug. 26, 1724.

This 2d Col. John Jackson had a large family; his will, dated Feby 27, 1738, names his children, including his dau. Phoebe Jones. (Lib. 15, p. 76, N. Y. City.)

This William, alone of the sons of Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1), left descendants to perpetuate the family name, as neither of the sons of David (II. 2) left issue, and Thomas (II. 4) died unmarried. From this fact he was commonly called "the head of the family of Long Island." His family of fifteen children and ninety-five gr. children gives him a good claim upon this title.

In 1726, at his mother's death (before he was of age), he became possessed of land on West Neck under his father's will. Some letters of his preserved indicate that he learned to write very well, but his pursuits were mainly agricultural.

In 1731 (by his marriage) he became connected with the large and active Jackson family, which afterwards afforded great support to Congress.

His son Samuel (III. 8) did not fancy the same political set as Thomas (III. 3), son of David (II. 2), but studied law in an opposite office. In 1764 his son Thomas (III.), marrying a dau. of Judge David Jones (II. 2), his family became much divided in political action.

From 1764 to 1770 he was Justice of the Peace for Queens Co., and the minutes of the Court of Gen. Sessions give evidence of his frequent attendance at its sittings.

He built a house on West Neck, a little west of the "Old Brick House" of his father's, which served for his large family during his life. The house and land which later came into the possession of the Bronson family stood a short distance east of the old Conklin Vandewater Hotel and just north of the present South Side Turnpike Road. "A road north, across the island, was west of and near his house."

He was largely interested in the raising of horses and cattle with his wife's family (the Jacksons), who owned the salt meadows lying on the south side of the Great South Bay, where they jointly pastured large numbers of animals. These meadows in which he was a tenant in common, by purchase from the Jacksons in 1762, became the source of a long and bitter lawsuit between the Jacksons and the Joneses, and the town of Oyster Bay. For details, see under Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1).

The animals were carried to these meadows in boats, and while there were comparatively safe from the marauding expeditions of the British, and were easily cared for. Being the only farmer in his father's family, he was given the cattle mark that was assigned his father by the town, and on Sept. 21, 1734, the same was transferred to him on the books of the town.

For his cattle mark see under Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1).

In 1749 he was chosen assessor for the town of Oyster Bay. This was probably his earliest public office. (Liber —, p. 33, Oyster Bay.)

On April 3, 1764, he was chosen overseer of highways for the south part of the town of Oyster Bay. (Liber H, p. 4, Oyster Bay.)

In 1757 he was named as an executor in the will of John Seaman, of Jerusalem.

He adhered generally to the royal government during the war, but not in arms. His family, as we have said, was much divided politically, yet he himself, though favoring the royal cause, was at heart strongly in favor of the other party.

In 1776, before the battle of Long Island, he signed the remonstrance against driving off the cattle from the Hempstead Plains. Many of the freeholders signed this remonstrance, and was a protest on their part against an order of the Provincial Congress, "That all cattle and sheep south of the ridge of hills in Queens Co. should be removed to the east end of the Plains to prevent their falling into the hands of the British."

On 21 Oct., 1776, after the battle of Long Island, he with five of his sons (some under age) petitioned for protection. Nearly all of the male inhabitants of Queens Co. who had not left the island signed this petition. It was addressed to the King's Commissioners, and prayed that Queens Co. might be restored to royal favor. Many of the signatures were reluctantly given. (Revolutionary Incidents of Queens Co., p. 117.)

On June 12, 1778, he made his will, and on July 24, 1779, added a codicil. He named his sons John and Walter as executors, and gave them the homestead land on West Neck on conditions, paying legacies, etc.

He gave all his beaches and marshes to his nine sons equally, personal property to his wife, legacies of £100 each to his daughters, Elizabeth, Margaret, Phebe and Sarah; to Wm. Jones £100 for the use of my dau. Freelove, to Thomas £150 for use of Gilbert, and legacies to Richard and Hallett with minor directions.

It may be inferred from his will that at this time he despaired of the success of the Congressional cause, whatever may have been his wishes, and considering the dimension of the British army on L. I. and in New York City, and the little knowledge he could have in the remote interior, it may not be strange that he should so despair. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

His will was proved Jan. 17, 1781, and letters of adms. granted nearly two years after his death.

He was buried (according to the MSS. of his son Walter) on West Neck, in a new burying ground given for that purpose by his sons John and Walter, by deed of gift, "containing $\frac{1}{2}$ an acre on the south side of the highway, east of or nearly opposite his house, to be enlarged as required."

His widow survived him over twenty years, and for some time kept together the large family, with her sons John and Walter as managers.

Will prob. June 17, 1747 (Lib. 16, p. 495, N. Y. City), naming wife Elizabeth, his brother John, and Jacob Smith (husband of Freelove Jones (II. 3)), as executors ; names son Jacomiah and five daughters as above.

(III. 1) ANNA JONES, dau. of Judge David Jones (II. 2) ; b. May 11, 1744 ; m. by license, May 10, 1756, Dr. John Gale, of Goshen, N. Y., great gr. son of Edmund Gale, of Boston, Mass. Issue :

Arabella Jones, m. July 18, 1790, Sanford Clark, of Goshen.
 Anna Mary, m. John Joline, of Goshen.
 Margaret, m. John Hurtin, of Goshen.

(III. 3) JUDGE THOMAS JONES, son of Judge David (II. 2), ranking as the 2d judge of the family ; b. Apl. 20, 1731, at Fort Neck, L. I., bapt. in St. George's Epis. Church, Hempstead, Dec. 29, 1731. (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec. IX., p. 185); d. in Hoddesdon, Eng., July 25, 1792, without issue.

On Dec. 9, 1762, he m. Anne, dau. of Lieut. Gov. James de Lancey. (See Recds. Trinity Church and N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec. V., p. 111). She b. 1746, survived her husband, and d. in Hoddesdon, Eng., Dec. 1, 1817, in the 72d year of her age.

He was liberally educated. In 1746 he entered Yale College at the age of 15, when Thomas Clapp was prest., and during a part of his collegiate course Ezra Stiles (who after became prest.) was a tutor.

Among his fellow students were Richard Morris, who later became Chief Justice; Saml. Seabury, who after became Bishop; Rev. Dr. Ogilvie, Saml. Hopkins, Richard Woodhull, and Genl. Gold S. Silliman, the latter of whom, 29 years later, in 1779, being a prisoner of war in the hands of the British, was exchanged for Thomas Jones.

The discussions which led to the Rev. War early appeared there. (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec. III., p. 57.) It seems Mr. Jones disagreed with most of the other students in religion and politics, and he did not endorse even their literary acquirements. (See his (Thos. Jones) Hist. of N. Y., Vol. 1, p. 5.)

In 1750 he graduated as A. B. and very soon commenced the study of law with Joseph Murray, a lawyer of N. Y. City, and not in the law office of Wm. Smith, Sr., or Jr., where his cousin, Samuel Jones (III. 8), afterwards found a place, being about three years his junior.

Their legal preceptors and associates were of different politics; they took different lines very early. Mr. Murray was a member of the Governor's Council from 1744 to 1756, and a Governor of King's College in 1756.

Thomas Jones was admitted to practise law (Doc. Rel. Coll. Hist. N. Y., Vol. 8, p. 685), while James de Lancey was acting Governor, and soon commenced the practice in N. Y. City. We have little knowledge of what he did. Before 1769 he had transacted legal business for Saml. Rogers, of Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., who had sold out the greater part of his land at that place, and who probably became an unsuccessful merchant or vessel owner in N. Y. City. In July, 1767, Mr. Rogers confessed a judgment in his favor for £266.16.6, penalty of a bond, and £18.5.6

for costs of judgment. It is stated that the debt was for legal services. An execution was issued to the Sheriff of Suffolk Co., and some small pieces of land on the east side of Cold Spring Harbor were sold in Jan., 1768, for £39 15s. by Geo. Meurson, Sheriff of Suffolk Co., who had married into the "Tangier" Smith family. Some deeds and records yet preserved give us information respecting this.

On Feby. 8, 1757, Mr. Jones was appointed Clerk of the Court of Common Pleas of Queens Co., an office then generally filled by deputy. (N. Y. Comms., Vol. 84, p. 118.) (Doc. Rel. to Coll. Hist. N. Y., Vol. 8, p. 685.) (Lib. D, p. 213, Queens Co. Recds.) This office he held only one year, retiring when his father became a judge of the Supreme Court. His appointment was much opposed and his right was contested by Whitehead Hicks, who claimed to be such clerk, and by Benjamin Hinchman, who refused to deliver up the records. (Col. N. Y. Hist. MSS., p. 671.)

In 1758 he was named as an executor of his legal preceptor, Jos. Murray, who gave his library to the New York College, then called King's, afterwards Columbia. This introduced him favorably, and he was later attorney for King's College, and had no good words for Yale.

King's College was founded in 1756, and its charter favored the Church of England; the consequence of this was a hostile feeling which caused both political and family quarrels between the Livingstons, who were of the Presbyterian party, and the de Lanceys of the Church of England.

Mr. Jones adhered to the latter; the war was fast approaching and "these facts gave color to the larger strife to come, and determined the taking of sides."

It may be remembered that Lieut. Gov. Jas. de Lancey plumed himself upon the charter of this college, while Wm. Livingston opposed it. Mr. Jones was one of the Governors of King's College, and for several years was its attorney, his commission for the same being signed by Whitehead Hicks, Mayor, Dec. 18, 1771.

In 1762 Mr. Jones' father, Judge David (II. 2), had attained distinction as a member and Speaker of Assembly, and had become a judge; his harmony with the previous judge, Chief Justice, member of the Council and Lieut. Gov. James de Lancey, who had appointed him, can readily be traced. Mr. de Lancey was appointed Lieut. Gov. in 1753, and held until 1755. In 1757 he was acting Gov., until July 30, 1760, when he died leaving a large estate and a noted family. One of his sons, John P., of Westchester Co. (the father of Bishop de Lancey), married Elizabeth, dau. of Col. Richard Floyd (5), and his wife Arabella, a sister of this Thomas Jones.

It is fair to suppose that the marriage of the promising lawyer Thos. Jones (then aged 31) with Lieut. Gov. Jas. de Lancey's daughter Anne (then only 16 years of age) was a topic of much discussion between Judge David Jones (II. 2) and her father's eldest brother, James de Lancey, who had been a member of Genl. Assembly of N. Y. and "the head of the family and the party known by his name from his father's death to the Rev. War." (Thos. Jones Hist. of N. Y., Vol. I, p. 658.)

It seems to have been an agreeable one to the family, and as her mother, Anne de Lancey, was the daughter of Hon. Caleb Heathcote and a sister of Sir Wm. Draper's wife, Mr. Jones became connected with the families of Sir Peter Warren, of the British navy, and of Sir Wm. Johnson, the latter of whom died in 1774, and Mr. Jones (then judge of the Supreme Court) was one of his pall bearers.

Some land set off to her is shown by deeds embracing a large piece of land now bounded by Grand St., N. Y. City. Deeds respecting this recorded in 1780 and 1781 can be seen in Secy. of State Office, Liber 21, folio 37, 64, 74-75.

In 1763 her brother, Jas. de Lancey, gave her two acres of land in N. Y. City between the Bowery and the East River, where in 1765 Mr. Jones built a large house on its highest part known as Mount Pitt or Jones' Hill. During the war the Americans built a fort upon this place, called Jones' Hill Fort, which was destroyed by the British. The house, by report, remained standing until the early part of the nineteenth century.

On. Nov. 19, 1769, Mr. Jones was appointed Recorder of the City of N. Y. by Lieut. Gov. Colden, and held until 1773. This probably made him a member of the Common Council and of the City Courts. (N. Y. Comms., Vol. VI., p. 91.)

This was his first judicial appointment; two years later he was reappointed by Gov. Tryon "during pleasure," and on Oct. 13, 1773, was succeeded by Robert Livingston, Jr., who held one year, and the office was conferred upon John Watts, Jr., a cousin of Judge Thos. Jones' wife.

On Oct. 8, 1771, Judge Thos. Jones was appointed attorney or counsel for the Corporation of N. Y. City. (N. Y. Comms. VI., p. 20.) This was in the line for promotion, and on Sept. 29, 1773 (his father retiring), he was appointed a judge of the Supreme Court of the Province. (N. Y. Comms. VI., p. 91.)

This appointment, which was made by Gov. Wm. Tryon, he held until the close of the Rev. War, which with its results displaced him.

Judge Thos. Jones held the last courts under the Crown in the Province of N. Y., concerning which he gives us much information in his "Hist. of N. Y. during the Rev. War." As judge of the Supreme Court his circuit embraced a large district, including Westchester Co., and while sitting at the latter place in 1776 he discharged from custody several persons arrested for loyal sentiments; this he tells us was given as a reason for placing him on the Act of Attainder and confiscating his property. This judicial act was probably but the beginning of the end. His connections with the de Lanceys and his training made him a devoted Royalist and a far greater partisan than his father. We cannot judge this a harsh measure when we consider his political career and actions. His advice in the matter of the battle of Lexington alone was enough to brand him an enemy to the American cause. When the news of this battle reached N. Y. the whole city was thrown into a state of great excitement and confusion. His Majesty's Council was summoned at the house of the Lieut. Gov., who had requested the attendance of the judges of the Supreme Court, the Attorney General, the Mayor and the Recorder of the City. The Gov. desired their advice in the critical state of affairs; several things were proposed but to no purpose; Judge Jones, then present, proposed "that the military should be called out and the riot act read, and if the mob did not thereupon disperse, to apprehend and imprison the ringleaders."

The war was now on, and Judge Jones retired to his home on Fort Neck, L. I., where on June 27, 1776 (the year following), he was arrested by Major Abell on an order of the Provincial Congress, charged with being "an enemy to the American cause on account of his holding offices from the King, and refusing to associate with his fellow citizens." He was shortly afterwards discharged by Gov. Morris upon his parole and returned to his home "there to await the further order of said Congress." On Aug. 11th of that year he was again arrested and carried before Lord Stirling, Genl. Scott and Col. McDougal, and on an order from Genl. Washington was sent to Connecticut as a prisoner of war. On Dec. 7, 1776, he was again paroled, promising "not to give notice or intelligence to the enemy of America, not to take up arms, and to return to New York when required."

He returned to Long Island, where three years after his house was broken open (as he tells us) "and robbed of everything that could be taken," and he himself carried to Conn., where he was kept a prisoner during the years 1779 and 1780, and was then exchanged for Genl. Silliman, who some 30 years previous was his classmate in Yale College. (Sabine's Loyalists, Rev. Incidents of L. I. and Thos. Jones Hist. of N. Y.)

While a prisoner in Conn. much of his property, including his horses and cattle, was taken by the Continental Army, which, after the evacuation of L. I., fell into the hands of the British. After his return he made a demand upon the British Commissary Genl. for the value of his fat cattle, but payment was refused on the grounds that the commissary did not know "which regiment eat the cattle."

Among those taken to Conn. and retained there, besides Judge Jones, were Danl. Kissam, Jr., Adam Seabury, Benj. Hewlett and Isaac Smith, some fourteen in all.

On Oct. 23, 1779, the N. Y. Legislature passed an Act of Attainder, by which all persons mentioned therein "were attainted, their estates, real and personal, forfeited, and themselves proscribed, and each and every one of them who shall at any time hereafter be found in any part of this State shall be and are declared guilty of felony, and shall suffer death as in causes of felony without benefit of clergy."

The judge's name was included in this Act of Legislature, and on Mch. 21, 1781, he sold at auction at the house of James Dur-yea, at Fort Neck, all his working oxen, cows, and horses, most of them full blooded, etc., etc., and all his implements of farming.

In June, 1781, he sailed for England with his wife and niece, Elizabeth Floyd, in one of a fleet of six vessels.

On their departure Dr. Benj. Moore (who later became Bishop of N. Y.) presented Mrs. Jones with the following tribute:

“By the rude storms of faction blown,
 Enough of dangers you have known.
 Witness the hour when rebel bands
 A husband seized with ruthless hands,
 And dragged to vile captivity,
 From comfort far and far from thee.
 No pity touched the hardened train,
 Affection prayed and prayed in vain.”

Peace was declared in 1782, and as no treaty stipulations were made in favor of Loyalists and the Act of Attainder not repealed but became operative, Judge Jones was obliged to remain in exile, and the remainder of his life was passed in Hoddesdon, Hertfordshire, Eng., where he died.

Under the Act of Attainder all of his real estate not entailed by his father's will was confiscated, and also all his personal property, the former of which included lands in Queens, Westchester, Ulster, Orange and Tryon counties. In compensation for these losses the British Government paid him the sum of £5,447.

On 2d Aug., 1785, his real estate in N. Y. City was sold by the Commissioners of Forfeiture for £970, described as being in the Out Ward of the city, etc., and comprised about two acres of land (Liber 43, p. 36, Conveyances N. Y. City), situated on the highest part of Grand St., near the East River. It was known as Mount Pitt, and here Judge Jones had his town house. This land was given to the judge's wife Anne in 1765 by her brother, James de Lancey. Much can be read concerning his confiscated estates in the judge's Hist. of N. Y., before alluded to.

On 5 March, 1793, Simon De Witt, Surveyor General, advertised for sale at Norwich, Queens Co., L. I., “all the lands deemed to be forfeited by the attainder of Thos. Jones, viz., all the meadow, fresh and salt, lying on the south side of L. I., joining the beach between the gut called Massapage, west or thereabout, and the west gut called Merrick Gut, and the hammocks and broken meadow lying between Oyster Bay meadow and the beach, with the privilege of the beach to the salt sea. Deed given without warrantee.” (Queens Co. in Olden Times, p. 82.) Conveyed probably to Isc. Smith, who perhaps bought for the town of Oyster Bay; see lawsuit concerning meadows under Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1).

His house on Fort Neck, L. I. (then called Tryon Hall), in which he was living at the time of his arrest, was built for him by his father, Judge David (II. 2) in 1770. "It is ninety feet long, east and west, and overlooks the Great South Bay. The foundation is of free stone, and the framework is of hewn timber. The entrance hall is thirty-six feet long by twenty-three wide, floored with heavy Southern pine. The stairs of this house are a puzzle to modern architects, as they are open underneath from bottom to top and have no support except from the wall to which they are attached, and yet have never yielded a particle in the lapse of more than a century of continued use."

During the war it was commonly called the "Refugee House," from the fact that Judge Jones permitted several of His Majesty's loyal subjects to live in it.

A story recently published (1900) under the title "For a Maiden Brave," the scene of which includes the house of Judge Jones and its immediate vicinity, gives a spirited account of his capture.

Judge Thos. Jones was a man of "rare penetration and great independence. He was very kind to his family, and in his business transactions very exact. His legal papers preserved to us are models of brevity and precision."

A letter of his to his nephew, David R. Floyd, under date of 1787, well portrays the man. Quoting from this he says, "Consult your father-in-law in everything." This was Hendrick Onderdonk, whom he calls in his History "an arrant rebel." "He was a friend of your grandfather's; he was a friend to all our family; he was a friend of mine, and tho' he and I differed in politicks during the last war, I know him to be an honest man." (Thos. Jones Hist. of N. Y., Vol. I, p. lxxiv.)

Judge Thos. Jones left no issue. He adopted as his daughter Anne Charlotte de Lancey, the eldest daughter of John P. de Lancey (Mrs. Jones' brother), who later became the wife of John Loudon McAdam, of N. Y. City.

While living in England, "where he sailed for," as he mildly puts it in a letter to his sister, "on account of ill health, and that his intentions were to return after peace was declared if he could keep his neck out of the halter," he wrote his history, recently published under the title of "History of New York During the Revolutionary War." At his death the manuscript fell into the possession of his widow, who in 1817 bequeathed it (and all her property) to her adopted daughter, Mrs. McAdam. The latter gave it to her brother, Wm. Heathcote de Lancey (Bishop of N. Y.), who in 1865 bequeathed it to his son, Edward Floyd de Lancey. It remained in the latter's possession until 1879, when through the liberality of Mr. John D. Jones (V. 79), who had donated the N. Y. Hist. Society a sum of $6,000 for historical purposes, it was published by the society under the title above named, Mr. de Lancey offering the MSS. to the Society "as the first issue to be made under the terms of the endowment."

His history speaks for itself. He saw the beginning and the end of the struggle for independence, and a loyalist of the strongest kind, he closely studied the tendencies toward revolution, and had no love for the adoption of republican ideas. Historically his work is of much value, and furnishes us with a clear view of that period in our history as it appeared to those who lost all by their loyalty to the British cause.

It has been stated that "Anne de Lancey's eyes determined his politics, and was, therefore, a Tory of a savage sort." Be this as it may, he has given us a clear account of the stirring events of his day, and in a fairly impartial manner. He was, it is true, embittered by party feelings, yet he does not hesitate to expose the wrongdoings of his party. He tells us that "for resistance to the Revolution he and others were rewarded by the utter and inexcusable failure on the part of the ministry of Lord North to protect them."

Shortly after its publication a book was published under the title of "Observations on Judge Jones' Loyalist History of the American Revolution: How Far is It An Authority?" It was edited by Henry P. Johnson, and questions many of the judge's statements.

In 1785, Judge Thos. Jones made his will as follows—

I, Thomas Jones, late of the Province of New York, in North America, do make this my last will as follows: I give and devise unto my wife, Anne Jones, and to her heirs and assigns forever, my whole real and personal estate, in which I include whatever shall be owed me by government as a compensation for my losses in America. I appoint my said wife executrix of this my will. I hereby revoke all former wills. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 9th day of December, 1785.

THOMAS JONES [L. S.].

This with the attestation clause and the three witnesses names is all. He died at Hoddesdon, near London, Eng., on the 25th July, 1792, and was buried under the south aisle of Broxbourne Parish Church in Hertfordshire, where a slab recently covered over bears his name. Near it is placed a mural tablet bearing the following inscription; also one to the memory of his widow, and another to Mr. and Mrs. McAdam.

NEAR THIS PLACE
LYES INTERRED THE BODY OF

"BY STRANGERS HONOURED AND BY STRANGERS MOURNED."

Next to this mural tablet is one to the memory of his wife Anne, bearing the following inscription:

ANNE JONES

SACRED TO THE MEMORY OF MRS. ANNE JONES OF HODDLEDSON, WIDOW OF THOMAS JONES ESQ, WHO AFTER A LIFE BASED IN THE EXERCISE OF EVERY CHRISTIAN VIRTUE, DIED UNIVERSALLY LAMENTED ON THE 1ST OF DECEMBER 1817 IN THE 72^d YEAR OF HER AGE.

Between these tablets is the Jones escutcheon, having the Jones arms blazoned in full in their appropriate color.

Mrs. Jones' will, copied from the Registry of the Consistory Court of London, is as follows:

I, Anne Jones, of Hoddesdon Herts, widow, do make and ordain this to be my last will and testament, I give, devise and bequeath unto my dear and adopted daughter, Anne Charlotte de Lancey, all my personal property, of what kind it may consist of at the time of my decease, including all my property in the funds in the Bank of England, be it in any of the stocks, as also the lease of the cottage and premises I now hold for twenty-one years under Genl. John Adolphus Harris, together with all the household furniture, pictures, linen, plate, glass, china of any and every description whatsoever, and to her the said Anne Charlotte de Lancey, and to her heirs assigns absolutely for ever, and I hereby constitute, nominate and appoint the said Anne Charlotte de Lancey, my nephew, Major John de Lancey, at present on the island of Guernsey, and Capt. Walton, of the Royal Navy, executors of this, my said last will.

In witness whereof I hereunto set my hand and seal this 8th day of December in the year of our Lord 1807.

ANNE JONES [L. S.].

Signed, sealed, published and declared to be the last will and testament of the testatrix in our presence and in the presence of each other—

Edward Arthur Bush, Minister H.

W. Worthington, Surgeon, Hoddesdon Herts H.

Martha Dunn, Servant to Mrs. Jones.

Sworn under Five thousand Pounds.

This will of Anne Jones, late of Hoddesdon, in the County of Hertford, widow, deceased, was proved at London, 12th day of Dec., 1817, before the worshipful Samuel Pearce, Parson, Doctor of Laws and Surrogate, by the oaths of Anne Charlotte de Lancey, spinster, the niece of the said deceased, and Jacob Walton, Esq., a Captain in the Royal Navy, the executors to whom administration was granted having been first sworn duly to administer.

(III. 4) ARABELLA JONES, dau. of Judge David Jones (II. 2); b. Dec. 7, 1734; bapt. as an adult, Jan. 26, 1750, in St. George's Epis. Church at Hempstead, L. I.; d. May 29, 1785; m. Nov. 2, 1757. Col. Richard Floyd (5) (fourth of that name), of Brookhaven, L. I.; b. Feb. 26, 1731; d. at Halifax, N. S., Feb. 6, 1791, a son of Richard (3) and his wife Elizabeth, dau. of Benj. Hutchinson. Issue:

8. David Richard, b. Nov. 14, 1764; d. Feb. 10, 1826.

9. Elizabeth, b. Aug. 8, 1758; d. May 7, 1820.

10. Anne Willett, b. Aug. 17, 1767; d. June 8, 1813.

Of this Arabella (III.4) we have little personal history. Her husband supported the Royalists with the de Lanceys; under arms in the Rev. War, and, failing, became a refugee and died in a foreign land. He was a Qr. Master in de Lancey's 3d Battalion in 1782, and Col. of the Suffolk Co. Militia under a commission from Gov. Tryon.

It is supposed that she did not follow her husband to Halifax, but if she did she shortly returned. On the death of her brother Thomas (III. 3), in 1792, without issue, and of her husband, it appears she had not been attainted by statute, nor done anything to forfeit her title to land, and her father's will by the entailment (then valid and operative) had vested his large landed estate in her and her heirs male.

In pursuance with his will, and with her consent, and with that of her brother, Judge Thos. Jones (III. 3) (who became civilly dead by reason of the Act of Attainder), her only son, David R. Floyd (8), took the whole of the Fort Neck estate and further, in compliance with his will, took also the name of Jones, thereby becoming David Richard Floyd-Jones (1). This change of name was confirmed by Act of Legislature on 14 March, 1788.

See under David Jones (II. 2) and Thos. Jones (III. 3).

The large landed estate thus entailed by Judge David Jones (II. 2) was enjoyed by his grandson David Richard Floyd-Jones (1) until 1826, when the latter's son, Brig. Genl. Thomas Floyd-Jones (3) succeeded to it, and was its last possessor under the entail. At his death the estate was divided between his four children, the eldest of whom, David Richard Floyd-Jones (7), received the Fort Neck house, the old homestead of Judge Thomas Jones (III. 3).

Col. Richard Floyd (5), the husband of Arabella Jones, lived on his father's farm at Mastic, L. I. (a part of the manor of St. George), which was forfeited by his adherence to the British cause and sold by the commissioners of forfeited estates on 5 Aug., 1784, to his brother, Benjamin Floyd, who sold the same for £2,750.

He was a leading man in the town of Brookhaven, a strong supporter of the Crown, and suffered much at the hands of the Americans. Judge Thos. Jones (III. 3) calls him "as loyal a subject as ever the King could boast of."

In 1776, after the capture of N. Y. City by the British, he, with others, signed a petition to re-establish the civil government, but the Declaration of Independence soon following put an end to it. Among those who signed the petition we note Genl. de Lancey, Benj. Seaman and Christopher Billop, all of whom were included in the Act of Attainder of 22d Oct., 1779.

(III. 5) LIEUT. DAVID JONES, son of Judge David (II. 2); b. April 30, 1737; d. Sept. 9, 1758; bapt. in St. George Prot. Epis. Church, Hempstead, L. I., Jan. 26, 1750. Never married.

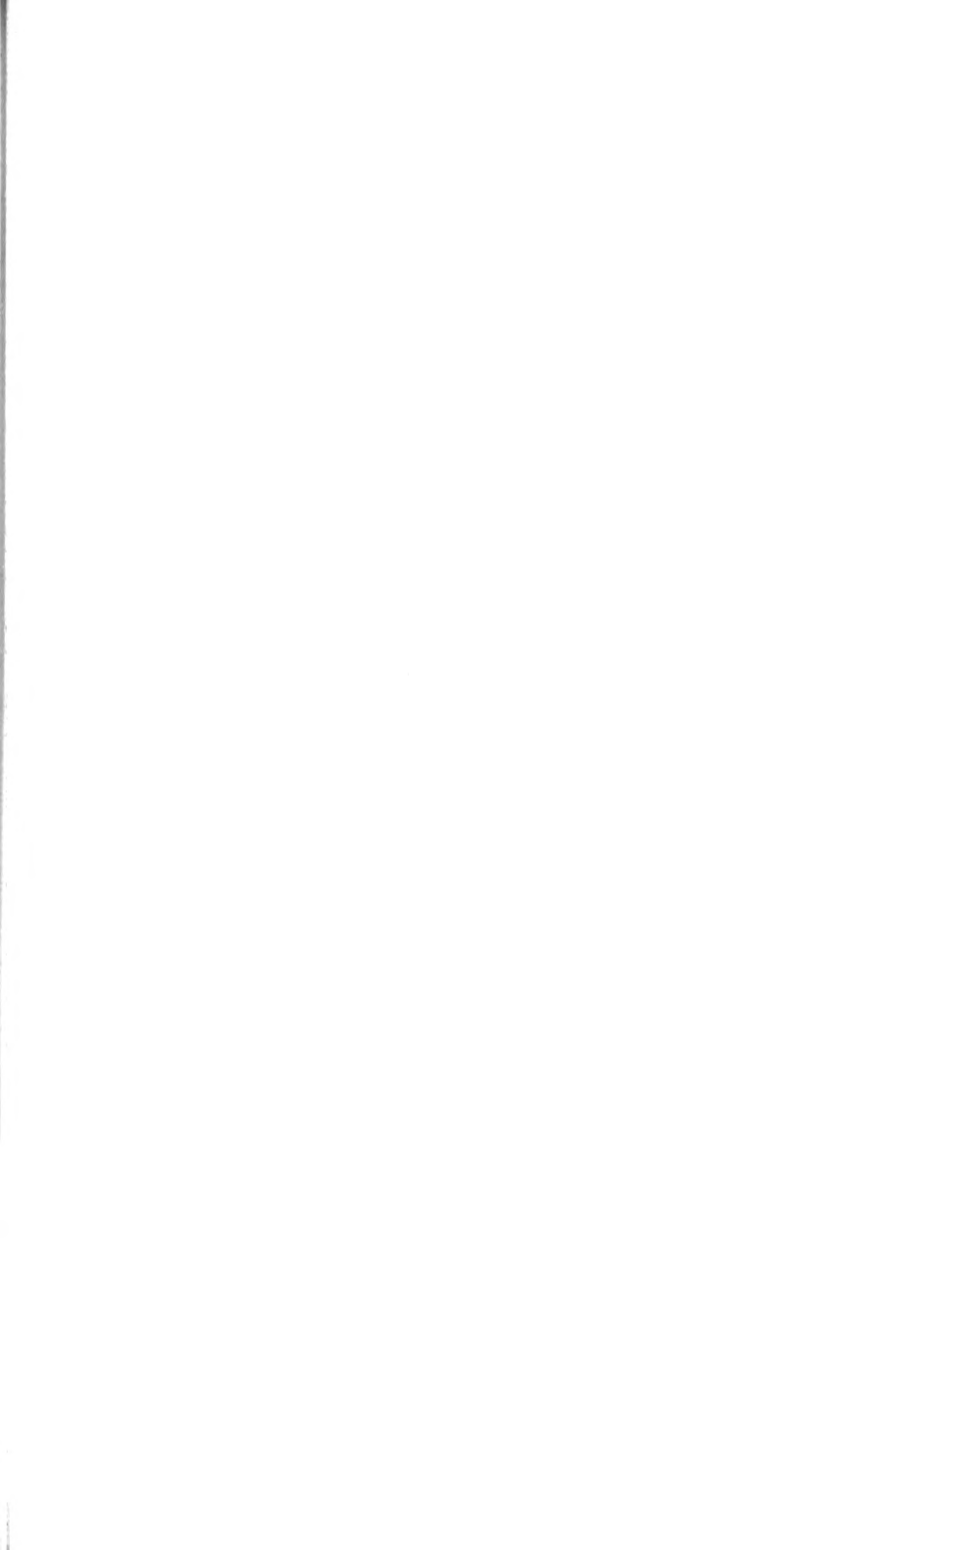

In 1754 he attended school at Hempstead, L. I., under the tuition of the Rev. Saml. Seabury, father of the Bishop. This school obtained much repute, and many of the leading families of Queens Co. sent their sons there, among whom were Wm. Lawrence, Jos. Kissam, Benj. Onderdonk (son of Hendrick), and Thos. Truxton, afterwards the Commodore.

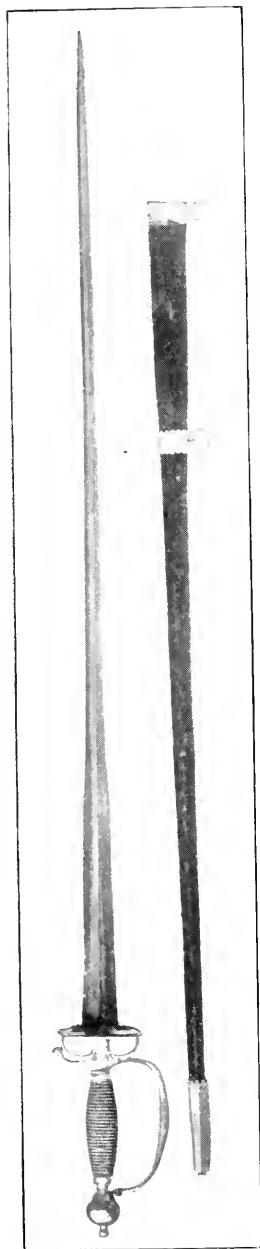

In 1758 he was appointed First Lieut. in the 3d Company of the Queens Co. Regt. in the campaign against the French in Canada.

The quota of soldiers to come from Queens Co. was fixed at 290 men, divided into three companies, and on April 18, 1758, a list of these companies then under pay of the Province was given. Of the 3d Co., Petrus Stuyvesant was Capt., and David Jones First Lieut. (See Report N. Y. State Historian, Vol. 1, p. 847.)

The 2d Co. was under the command of Capt. Richard Hewlett. (Queens Co. in Olden Times, p. 30.)

These L. I. companies with the other Provincial troops were more efficient than the "English Regulars" (so-called), who were billeted upon the inhabitants and acquired their hatred.

The Regt. fell under the command of Col. Bradstreet and Col. Chas. Clinton, and were sent to Lake Ontario.

On 27 Aug., 1758, they captured Fort Frontenack, but were obliged to endure great hardship and labor, besides being short of supplies. (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec. IX., p. 173). Lieut. David Jones was taken sick shortly after the capture and died at the "Oneida Carrying Place," near Rome, N. Y., on 9 Sept., 1758.

Among the MSS. papers of his grandfather, Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1), we find the following record concerning him. It is endorsed on the back of a deed from Henry Lloyd to Thos. Jones (I. 1), dated 19 May, 1713, viz.: "David Jones married to Anna Willet, daughter to Col. Wm. Willet, of Westchester Co., on Nov. 22, 1722. Had by her:

Anna Jones, b. Tuesday, May 11, 1724.

Sarah Jones, b. Saturday, Feb. 12, 1728; d. Apl. following.

Thomas Jones, b. Tuesday, Apl. 20, 1731.

Arrabella Jones, b. Saturday, Dec. 7, 1734.

David Jones, b. Saturday, Apl. 30, 1737.

Mary Jones, b. Friday, Apl. 29, 1743.

"David Jones died Sept. 9, 1758, at the Oneida Carrying Place, after his return from taking Fort Frontenac while under Col. Bradstreet's regiment, with whom he went a volunteer officer in that regiment, and it is said 'behaved in the action with becoming bravery.'"

Another memorandum concerning him states "he went to the north in the army, having one of the McCoons for his waiter, and died of fatigue during the march; his powder horn was brought home." (MSS. Chas. H. Jones (IV. 34)).

He was brevetted Capt., and a sword presented him by Col. Hewlett, of East Woods (now Woodbury, L. I.), is still in possession of the family, and has the following inscribed upon the hilt.

CAPT. JOHN HULOT TO DAVID JONES JUN'R

In Commissary Wilson's Orderly Book (now in the Lenox Library) relative to this expedition (pub. in 1759), no mention is made of either Lieut. Jones or Capt. Hewlett. This book has many biographical notes. This omission may, perhaps, be accounted for from the fact that "in England little notice was taken of the Colonial officers, while the English officers, seeking promotion, glorified their acts."

(III. 6) MARY JONES, dau. of Judge David Jones (II. 2); b. April 29, 1743; bapt. St. George Prot. Epis. Church, Hempstead, L. I., 26 Jan. 1750; m. by license, May 24, 1764, her cousin, Thomas Jones (III. 10), son of William (II. 7). Issue, nine children. (See under Thomas Jones (III. 10))

(III. 7) CAPTAIN DAVID JONES, son of William (II. 7); b. 1733, at West Neck, L. I.; d. Feb. 11, 1818; m. by license, Jan. 4, 1768 (then aged 35), Elizabeth, b. Nov. 19, 1749; d. March 26, 1831, dau. of Thomas Seaman, of Jerusalem, L. I. Issue:

+IV. 1. William D., b. Sept. 5, 1771; d. Sept. 2, 1845.

+2. Thomas, b. June 30, 1776; d. Jan. 13, 1847.

On 14 July, 1772, by a certificate of that date, he was an Ensign, æ 39, in Capt. John Hewlett's Company, acting in place of Lieut. Thos. Van Wyck, who refused to go after being drafted from the militia for the expedition against the French, when Fort Wm. Henry was taken by the latter. He went with the Co. until orders from the commander-in-chief directed their return. (MSS. C. H. Jones.)

In 1779 he was Capt. of a local militia force and had a swivel gun near his house, which he used more than once. (Revo. Incidents Queens Co., p. 195.)

On 25 Sept., 1781, he and Capt. Thos. Seaman attempted to capture the sloop Restoration, then driven on shore in the town of Hempstead, but were taken prisoners and soon after exchanged. (Revo. Inc. Queens Co., p. 201.)

On 12 Jan., 1782, he was ordered by Col. Upham, who was then in command of Lloyds Neck, to accompany Benj. Birdsall back to that place, as John Hewlett, Esq., in whose care Birdsall was, was obliged to go to New York. Col. Upham was then in command of the British troops, and Birdsall was a son of Col. Benjamin Birdsall, the Revolutionary patriot. (War Claims in Huntington Town Recds., Vol. 1, p. 57.) He probably parted with his interest on the south side of L. I. or had it protected by his brother Samuel (III. 8), and after the close of the Rev. War removed to Cold Spring Harbor, L. I.

He had a deed from Philip Youngs for some land at that place on 12 Feb., 1785, which was subject to mortgages. He obtained title also under the mortgages. This land was on the westerly side of the Harbor, and extended southerly to or near the head of the same. By report he rebuilt some portion of the house then standing thereon, and was living there in 1791. This house later became the homestead of John H. Jones (IV. 27), but was destroyed by fire in 1861. It was one story and a half high, covered with shingles, and had one large chimney in the centre. On its westerly end was a smaller chimney leading to a large brick oven standing upon four wooden posts.

In 1790, Sept. 14, he joined with his brothers in adjusting and releasing claims to the South Beach and meadows. (Lib. 29, p. 329, Queens Co.)

On 2d May, 1794, he received a deed from Samuel Jackson and Jemima, his wife, for 43 acres of land at Cold Spring Harbor, and woodland adjoining the pond and the fulling mill dam, on the east side of Ireland's path, surveyed by Saml. Willis on 24 June, 1767 (map professed to be copied in the town record book), called an allotment in the right of Abraham Underhill, and 28 acres on the west side of the Upper Mill Dam.

In 1801 he signed, with his brother John, a paper about the Episcopal church at Oyster Bay.

In 1806, by deed dated 15 of 5 month, he conveyed to his brother John Jones land at Cold Spring Harbor where he had resided, and released beaches. On the same day he conveyed to his cousin, Maj. Wm. Jones (IV. 4), son of his brother Samuel, land on the west side of Cold Spring Harbor north of that conveyed to John.

After these transfers were made he returned to Jerusalem South, Queens Co., where on 15 June, 1806, he made his will, naming his wife Elizabeth, and sons Thomas and William, the latter receiving the remainder of his estate on condition that he support his son Thomas for life.

Witnesses, Joseph and Freeclove Birdsall and Solomon Seaman. (Will prob. 18 May, 1815. Liber C, p. 423, Queens Co.)

Cornelia (Haring) Jones' great grandfather, Jan Louis Bogart (the first of his name in this country), came from Schoonderwold in 1663 and settled in Bedford, L. I., with his wife, Cornelia Everts, and several children, one of whom, Nicholas, b. 1668, m. 1703, Margaret Conselyea as his 2d wife. Nicholas d. Jan. 5, 1727, leaving many children, one of whom, Elizabeth, b. 1714, m. Elbert Haring (as his 2d wife) and had a dau., Cornelia, who m. Samuel Jones (III. 8).

The Haring family was a large and influential one. The ancestor, John Haring, son of Peter of Hoorn, Holland, b. 1633, m. 1662 Margaret Cozine, and d. 1683. John Haring's eldest son, Peter, m. Dec. 4, 1687, Margaret, dau. of Jan Louwrie Bogart and Cornelia Evert, his wife. Elbert, b. 1706 (son of Peter), m. 2d, his cousin Elizabeth, dau. of Nicholas Bogart (his mother's brother), by whom he had Margaret, b. 1733, m. Cornelius Roosevelt; Elbert, b. 1735; Elbert, b. 1737; Peter, b. 1738; Cornelia, b. 15 Feb., 1741, m. Samuel Jones (III. 8); Elizabeth, b. 1743, m. John de Peyster. Besides these he had other children, and a dau. Sarah, b. 1753, who m. Gardiner Jones, a descendant of Johnes family of Southampton, L. I., who by an Act of Legislature changed his name to Jones. He was named in the will of his mother-in-law, Elizabeth Herring, with his son Nicholas and dau. Elizabeth Jones.

Judge Samuel Jones' early education was rather limited; he went to school at Hempstead, L. I., and was probably instructed there by the Rev. Saml. Seabury.

He did not enter college, and when young made several voyages to Europe as a sailor in the merchant service. Shortly after this he became a clerk in the office of Judge Wm. Smith, and studied law with him or his son, Wm. Smith, the historian and Judge, with whom George Clinton also studied law.

This Wm. Smith (the judge) had been one of the counsel for Zenger in 1732, and had been ill treated, being discharged by Judge de Lancey, but afterwards restored, and in 1763 became Judge of the Supreme Court.

Judge David Jones (II. 2) was well acquainted with both, and, for aught that appears, on good terms with the senior sitting on the Bench with him for six years, but the breach between Wm. Smith and the de Lancey party or family was never made up, and political and religious parties perpetuated it.

Mr. Smith ranked as a Presbyterian (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec. 4, p. 99) and followed generally the course of the Presbyterians in N. Y. Presbyterians and Episcopalians had been at war and became political antagonists, and the studying of Saml. Jones with Wm. Smith perhaps led him to a set of opinions and action, or at least brought him into association with a set of legal and political friends very different from his cousin, Judge Thomas Jones (III. 3).

The date when Saml. Jones commenced to study law is not known. It is stated that a part of the time he devoted to legal studies was passed in the office of the old lawyer, Samuel Clowes, of Jamaica, L. I., whose son Gerardus married Sarah Jones (II. 5).

We have little account of the struggles of the young lawyer. It is inferred that he was practising law in N. Y. City before his first marriage in 1765. His father-in-law, connected with the Dutch, was a merchant in N. Y. City (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec. 13, p. 84) and his associations and intermarriage with the Dutch indicate him not an Episcopalian, and as early as 1768 there are strong indications of legal differences between the families of David Jones (II. 2) and William Jones (II. 7). His 2d marriage in 1768 was with a stronger family; the name had been spelled Haring among the Dutch, and his 2d wife's gr. father was a member of Congress with Geo. Clinton which voted the Declaration of Independence (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec 39, p. 11, 36; 12, p. 124; 13, p. 79). His father-in-law, Elbert Haring, became possessed of a large real estate in N. Y. just outside of the city. It extended on both sides of modern Broadway between Canal St. on the south and Art or Stuyvesant St. on the north, and between the Bowery on the east and 6th Ave. on the west, in the rising value of which his children participated.

The de Lancey property on which Judge Thos. Jones (III. 3) resided was southeast of this.

In 1771 Mr. Jones was in N. Y. and probably had official charge of the lawsuit prosecuted by his father and the Jacksons against the town of Oyster Bay in 1769, concerning the South Beach Meadows, and probably advised the agreement of 1769. (See under Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1.) It may be assumed that he and his cousin, Judge Thos. Jones (III. 3), taking such different sides, were soon antagonists. Their fathers living near each other in the country must be the vehicles of intercourse on topics of mutual interest. The title to the beaches and meadows, and some land of their fathers in which they and their deceased brother Thomas (II. 4) were concerned, were such topics of mutual interest. Some letters touching these are preserved. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

In 1774 the citizens of N. Y. took a decided stand against the attempt of England to tax America. Mr. Jones favored the former and on 22d of Nov. of that year he was appointed on the Committee of Correspondence (consisting of 60 members) in N. Y. City. He as a member voted in favor of the letter which invited Continental action. Col. Benj. Seaman (from the L. I. family), sitting as Member of Assembly from Staten Island, was willing to press this letter, but soon shrank from the result. Its object was to secure obedience to the Genl. Congress of 1774, and advised non-intercourse with Gt. Britain, and its members styled themselves "the guardians of the rights and liberties of the Colonies." On March 6, 1775, this committee called a meeting of the freeholders of N. Y. City and voted Phil. Livingston, James

Duane, Wm. Floyd, Phil. Schuyler and others as representatives in the Continental Congress. (Wilson's Memo. Hist. N. Y. 2, p. 443.)

In May following the committee chose another body of men known as the "Committee of One Hundred," whose object was to enforce the laws of the Continental Congress; of this body Samuel Jones was No. 47.

On the outbreak of hostilities he removed to Connecticut, and thence to Orange Co. He did not take up arms, but having considerable business requiring attention he returned with his family in 1776 to West Neck, L. I.

In a letter written by John Morin Scott, dated 15 Nov., 1775, descriptive of the general situation of the city, he says: "Every office shut up almost but Saml. Jones, who will work for 6/ a day and live accordingly." (Todd's Hist. N. Y. City, p. 292.)

In the Hist. of N. Y. by his cousin, Judge Thos. Jones (III. 3), he was taken very little notice of and was called "a clerk in the office of Wm. Smith." The judge further represents him as "claiming some land for relatives or himself when holding a mortgage upon it although confiscated and forfeited by the owner." This we are told by Mr. C. B. Moore was "put in a shape designed to blame the new government, but we understand that Mr. Jones succeeded as far as was fair and regular."

"If the land was worth more than the incumbrance, a fair mortgage was paid; if not, it was abandoned to the claims of the mortgagee. During the war little notice was taken of a mortgage unless the mortgagee got possession, nor of remote interests or remainders, the possessors being looked to as carrying the proceeds of the lands to the side they espoused. But after the war a mortgagee who had not forfeited his right would be recognized by the Commissioners of Forfeitures or other officers who sold out the title of the person attainted, and probably would be enforced by the courts against a purchaser, though no foreclosure suit was then allowed against the State or its officers." (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

"Afterwards when the State was interested in land subject to a mortgage the Attorney General was made a party, and being waited upon and paid his costs would appear and answer, and the court would decide whether the mortgage was prior, or for a just debt, and unpaid, etc.

"Many instances of foreclosures might be given. One comes to mind: In 1760 a mortgage of Alexander Colden was executed, covering lands in Brooklyn which were forfeited. In 1795 a deed was executed to Treadwell Jackson, by the Sheriff of Kings Co., on the foreclosure of Colden's mortgage and recorded in Kings Co. But receipts for valuable land foreclosures were not necessary, nor before the new Statutes of 1830 were they much used. The land was taken possession of by the mortgagee, and he could defend the title as legal owner except against a bill to redeem." C. B. M.

At the close of the war Mr. Jones came rapidly into practice, and soon required repute as an able real estate lawyer, and was well acquainted with the common law. He came upon the scene in an eventful time. With the close of the war the Legislature directed its attention to the laws of the States. Laws affecting real estate were passed, and estates tail were changed into fee simple, and the law of primogeniture was abolished.

In 1782 Mr. Jones and Richard Varick were appointed to collect and reduce into proper form for re-enactment all such statutes of Gt. Britain as were contained in force under the Constitution of 1777. The whole statute law of England was revised and the bills thus reported were generally adopted by the Legislature. The revision of Jones and Varick became authoritative and "may be regarded as the only comprehensive digest or revision of the laws of N. Y. down to 1800." (Wilson's Hist. N. Y. 2, p. 622.)

On 28 April, 1786, Mr. Jones and Saml. Clowes were appointed adms. of the est. of David Jones (II. 2), of Fort Neck.

In 1786 he was elected a Member of Assembly from Queens Co. and held until 1789.

In 1788 his political opponents treated him as an active supporter of Gov. Geo. Clinton, and the Governor's public address was referred to as naming him. (N. Y. Advertiser, Feb. 28, 1788.) Many persons who had remained quiet under the British rule and whose estates had not been forfeited now claimed protection of the Americans. This was the first question that divided the State for a long time, and the Hamilton party favored it. The Clinton party strongly upheld for State Rights and opposed the restoration of the Tories, yet though opposed to the Constitution of the U. S. agreed to accept it on condition of future amendments. The proposal was made by the Clinton party on the suggestion of Samuel Jones into an expression of "full confidence" that the amendments would be made, and the Constitution was adopted by a majority of three votes. (See Loudon Papers and Life of Genl. Lamb.)

On 27 May, 1788, at an election in Queens Co. for members of Assembly, he had 408 votes, the highest on the list.

On 30 May, 1788, at an election in Queens Co. for delegates to the State Convention to determine whether the State should adopt the Constitution of the United States, he received 517 votes, and John Schenck 518. Of the 517 votes received by Saml. Jones, 105 came from the town of Oyster Bay. In the Convention he "deferred considerably" to Mr. Clinton, who presided, but he voted in favor of the Constitution. Those who fought so strongly for the amendments now reorganized themselves under the name of Federal Republicans (see Tillinghast Papers, in N. Y. Hist. Soc. Coll.), and on Oct. 30, 1788, met at Fraunce's Tavern to further the adoption of the new constitution.

In 1789 he was appointed Recorder of the City of N. Y., a judicial office for the city (which had been filled by his cousin, Judge Thomas Jones (III. 3), and held until 1796, when he was succeeded by James Kent.

Sept. 4, 1790, he joined with his brothers in releasing claims of rights in the South Beaches and meadows, to the town, reserving small pieces. The struggle for legal rights, based upon a Royal Patent, was against a whole town; many of the voters wanted hay from the meadows. The Quakers firmly believed in Indian titles in preference to royal, and a large number of voters had no respect for royal prerogatives. We can infer that all this affected voters and injured his popularity, and the intermarriages of his brothers with families interested against him had weakened his support, even from them, but it was only local. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

In 1791 he was elected State Senator for the Southern District of N. Y. (composed of several counties), and held for six years.

A print of most of the Senators was made (See Vol. IV., Doc. Hist. N. Y. S.) including Saml. Jones, which was copied in Wilson's Memo. Hist. N. Y. III., p. 371.

In 1796 he was requested by Gov. Jay to draft a law for establishing and regulating the office of Comptroller, to which office he was appointed in 1797.

As Comptroller it became his duty to act as State canvasser, and with others report whether Geo. Clinton or John Jay was elected Governor. At the regular day the votes were counted and Clinton declared Governor, but late messengers arrived, claiming to have been delayed by storms, bringing returns of more votes from the west, and it appeared that Jay had the greatest number of votes. The canvassers were blamed for not waiting and lost reputation.

Mr. Jay submitted to defeat. (Wilson's Memo. Hist. N. Y. III., p. 81).

In 1800 he retired from the Senate, but did not resume the practice of the law. The death of his mother soon followed, and the old homestead at West Neck was broken up.

On 18 Apl., 1801, he entered into an agreement with his brother Walter to purchase the homestead. A fine was agreed to be levied (in old English style) in favor of him and his son Thomas, and the heirs of Thomas. The old house was much altered and it finally became his permanent home.

"His suburban home in 1799 was valued at £2,000." While residing here he devoted himself to farming pursuits, and his cattle mark recorded in Liber A of Highways, Oyster Bay, is as follows:

"Samuel Jones, son of William of the south, marks all his creatures with a hole in the near ear and a latch the under side of the off ear, entered 5 Dec., 1791.

"This mark is transferred to David W. Jones, of Cold Spring Harbor."

He still took much interest in public affairs, and on 10 May, 1806, was called the Federal candidate for State Senator. Queens Co. gave him 436 votes, and Benj. Coe (as Republican) 444.

In 1807 he was again voted for, receiving in Queens Co. (as a Federalist) 531 votes, while De Witt Clinton (as a Republican) received 710.

In 1818, July 1st, he made his will, calling himself "counsellor at law, then living at West Neck." Prob. 16 Dec., 1819. To his wife Cornelia he gives £411, which he received from her out of her father's estate, and all money she may have in her name. To his sons Samuel and Elbert H., his law books. His land in N. Y. City he gives to his son Samuel for life, and after to the latter's wife Catharine during widowhood, with remainder to my daughter Mary Ann Schuyler Jones in-tail-male. To his five sons he gives the remainder of his estate, with legacies to his various grandchildren. (Liber D, folio 251, Queens Co.)

His widow, Cornelia Jones, survived but a short time, leaving a will, 18 Dec., 1820, prob. 7 Aug., 1821 (Liber E, folio 4, Queens Co.), with legacies to her several grandchildren, and remainder of her estate to her daughter-in-law Keziah, wife of Wm. Jones. Executor, her son David S. Jones.

Judge Samuel Jones (III. 8) was distinguished for "great coolness and deliberation in debate," and his ability as a jurist needs no better proof than the words of the late Dr. Hosack and Chancellor Kent. "I rely (says the former) on the testimony of others when I speak of the legal talents of the late Samuel Jones; common consent has indeed assigned him the highest attainment in jurisprudence and the appellation of the 'Father of the New York Bar.' He justly ranked among the most profound and enlightened jurists of this or any other country, and acted a useful and conspicuous part in organizing our courts and the judiciary system after the Revolution."

"No one (says Chancellor Kent) surpassed him in clearness of intellect and in moderation and extreme simplicity of character; no one equalled him in his accurate knowledge of the technical rules and doctrines of real property, and in familiarity with the skillful and elaborate but now obsolete and mysterious black letter learning of the common law."

They were married by Rev. Ebenezer Prime, at Huntington, L. I., 7 Nov., 1764. (See Recds. of First Church, Huntington, L. I., p. 101.) He removed from L. I. and settled in Orange Co., about six miles back of Newburg. He was living on his father's farm in 1766 and had his cattle mark registered at that time.

His wife Mary, under her father's will in 1771, was given the use of lands on the Walkill River, Ulster Co., for life, and £200 to build her a house thereon.

June 20, 1807, he executed a deed to the town of Oyster Bay, releasing his right to the South Beach on L. I., in which he was described as now or late of Shawangunk, Ulster Co. (Liber K, p. 171, Queens Co.) (See under Thos. Jones (I. 1) and William (II. 7))

Among the MSS. papers of Charles H. Jones is a memo. written by J. J. Thorne (gr. son of this Thomas Jones) stating that "he lived in Orange Co. near the Walkill, owned a farm and mill, and removed from there a little west of Albany."

On 13 Oct., 1774, he had a deed from Israel Conkling, of Huntington South (a father of his bro.-in-law, Jacob Conkling), for a lot or share in the "Bating Place Purchase of Huntington," which his children (as above named) conveyed to Walter Jones
(III. 13), on April 18, 1818.

On 26 May, 1776, he as a member of the "Oyster Bay Committee" assisted in the capture of seven Royalists who had landed on Fort Neck. They were examined before John Ketcham and Benj. Birdsall the same day. (Rev. Inc. of Long Island, part 2, p. 27.)

Aug., 1776, he and his father signed the "remonstrance" against driving cattle of the Hempstead Parish into the woods where they could get no water, etc., (Cal. N. Y. Hist. MSS. I., p. 461.), amounting legally to a claim for compensation for the cattle if lost.

Soon after the battle of Long Island he, by report, removed to Orange Co.

In March, 1777, at Newburg, he received a permit from Genl.

McDougal (Congressional) to go to L. I. and obtain leave to remove his sister Freelove, and the family and furniture of his bro.-in-law, Col. Birdsall. (Cal. N. Y. Hist. MSS., Vol. 2, p. 55.) It seems she did not then remove.

By report he joined the American forces (probably with Col. Birdsall) and was disabled in New Jersey. He died before 1804, and his estate was administered upon by his bro.-in-law, Abraham Wood, "at the request of the widow," on 28 Oct., 1804. (Adms. Lib. C, folio 134, Orange Co.)

Hannah, his widow, survived him, and her brother, Abraham Wood, was appointed adms. of her estate, 7 Sept., 1808. (Liber D, folio 13, Orange Co.)

(III. 12) JOHN JONES, son of William (II. 7), and the head of that branch of the family whose descendants mainly settled on the north side of Long Island, was b. June 26, 1755; d. at Cold Spring Harbor, Aug. 21, 1819. Under license of March 7, 1779 (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec. XIV., p. 118) he m. on 3 May, 1779, Hannah, b. at Woodbury, L. I., Feb. 4, 1762; d. - +33. Joshua T., b. July 10, 1801; d. Sept. 14, 1854.
- +34. Charles H., b. Nov. 6, 1804; d. Jan. 23, 1882.

In Aug., 1776, he signed with his father and brother Gilbert the "Remonstrance" before the battle of Long Island, and in October following the "Petition" asking for Royal protection. (See under Wm. Jones (II. 7)) He was then just of age and was residing with his father on West Neck at the South Side of L. I.

On 30 Aug., 1779 (just after his father's death) he signed with his brother Walter an agreement with their brothers and sisters (children of William (II. 7)) that one acre of land on West Neck be set aside for a burying ground for all the children of William (II. 7) and their descendants. (See under William (II. 7)).

In 1779, remaining on Long Island and marrying, he was enrolled in a troop of horse (local militia to keep the peace), of which Israel Youngs, a connection of his wife, was captain.

His father-in-law, John Hewlett, a large landholder at East Woods (now Woodbury), in the town of Oyster Bay, near the Suffolk Co. line, was a justice of the peace, and, having sworn allegiance to the King, and being forty-five years of age, refused to take arms on either side. This was treated by the supporters of Congress as excusable, and he was not harshly dealt with, nor were the Quakers, which some members of the family joined. There were many Quakers in the town located between the Royalists on the west, and the supporters of Congress on the east.

The Hewlett family was numerous; an early George on L. I. in 1668 had four sons, who all left descendants, including George and the first John, living in 1683, whose son John, b. 1703, m. Hannah, dau. of 2d Col. John Jackson, and was the father of the third John Hewlett, the justice above mentioned. The mother of the justice being a Jackson, he doubtless was befriended by that large family.

Capt. Richard Hewlett, son of Daniel, who had served in the French war, supported the English government. He became Colonel, Qr. Master, and Commissary, was active on L. I. during the war, and assumed the right to order the local militia or English subordinates. He or his captn. gave some orders to this John Jones (III. 12) which required acts that were unpopular, such as collecting assessments of hay. Some of the hay collected and stacked was burned by the Continentals. Although not accused of any misconduct, the fact of losing the hay may have deprived his troop of reward from the British, who occupied the place in force during the winter.

The justice of the peace, by order, took charge of collecting the assessment imposed as they would a tax. The Judge George Duncan Ludlow (called a "Superintendent of Police") took charge of them and their local action. The native officers probably acted with more moderation than the foreigners.

Until 1784 John Jones (III. 12) and his brother Walter resided at the homestead on West Neck, and carried on the business together as farmers. John then agreed to sell out his right in the homestead to his brother Walter on April 1, 1784, and removed to "The Hill," on the west side of the river at Cold Spring Harbor, where he later built a "house with a deep well," and resided there during his life.

The fact of his settling upon the hill at that place gave rise to the appellation of the "Hill Folks," in order to designate in a general way his family from those of his son John H., who settled at the foot of the hill near the head of the harbor.

On 14 July, 1791, he and his wife received a deed from her father for large pieces of land at Cold Spring Harbor, and one-third of the mills and ponds, and in company with two of her brothers they entered largely into the business of furnishing flour at high prices, then affected by the foreign wars.

On 30 May, 1794 he, with his brothers-in-law, received a further confirmatory deed for the mills and mill dams.

On 6 May, 1799, he and his wife executed a deed to their son William H. (soon after his marriage), of a farm at East Woods (probably derived from her father), expressing as a consideration "divers good causes and love, etc., etc." William H. had a house and farm buildings erected there, and resided there during his life.

In 1801 he signed with his brother David a claim about the Episcopal Church at Oyster Bay.

His father-in-law, Justice John Hewlett, lived until 4 April, 1812, and was buried on a hill near his home at East Woods called "Mount Nebo." The justice divided his large landed estate among some of his children by deeds in 1791, etc. His daughter Mary married Isaac Youngs; his eldest son, Townsend, married a sister of this John Jones. His second son, Isaac Hewlett, married Rhoda Van Wyck, and his son Divine married Ann, dau. of Jac. Coles, of Duck Pond. His dau. Elizabeth married Samuel Jones, son of William.

It will be noticed how strongly the members of the family were tied together; living near the boundary line between Queens and Suffolk Co., through a long civil war, the hostilities and jealousies which convulsed the whole country doubtless taught them to adhere firmly to each other and avoid giving offence. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

The East Woods extended across L. I., east of the Hempstead Plains and near the county line, embracing what is now Woodbury.

Several grantees of these deeds may be noticed; one, his son Isaac Hewlett, had land in Suffolk Co. on the high ground east of the mill ponds at Cold Spring Harbor, on which Isaac lived; one, his son Divine had land also in Suffolk Co., bounding Isaac's on the north, on which Divine lived; and another his dau. Hannah, whom this John Jones had married, had land in Queens Co. on the west side of the mill ponds, near which John and Hannah Jones had fixed their residence.

The deeds to these parties embraced the mills, mill ponds, mill dams and water rights at Cold Spring Harbor, $\frac{1}{3}$ to each as tenants in common.

On 30th of 3 mo., 1804, this John Jones received from Divine Hewlett and his wife, for his son John H. (IV. 27), then under age, a deed for two small pieces of land on the east side of Cold Spring Harbor (cons. $175), which in 1807 he conveyed to his son John H. Here commenced the large general store and whaling business carried on by the latter for many years, and here was his first dwelling house.

In 1807 he conveyed to his son, John H. Jones, land on the west side of Cold Spring Harbor, which had been conveyed to him by his cousin, David Jones (III. 7) and in 1810 conveyed to him a share in the "Lower Mill" property (grist mill, dams, etc.).

In 1812 the second war with Gt. Britain broke out, a great expense was incurred at a time of high war prices upon a new and large grist mill, and in starting also a woollen factory. Grain was purchased at the mill, ground and barrelled up for sale, and sent to New York. Divine Hewlett and Wm. H. Jones (IV. 25) undertook to keep a store at New York for the sale of flour. The war ended in 1815 before expensive arrangements could be recompensed, and prices fell with flour on hand. Some losses also occurred by seizures of shipments by the French; John Jones and Divine Hewlett had to suspend payments, bargain with their creditors for time, and raise money on their lands to settle with their creditors. Mr. Jones' health failed and he soon became disabled. On 21 Aug., 1814, he made his will giving the use of his property to his wife for life to bring up and educate his minor children, and appointed his three eldest sons executors with a large power of sale. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

Hannah Hewlett, the wife of this John Jones, was a woman of strong personal character and of untiring energy. She inherited that strong religious feeling and love of family so marked in her ancestors, and we are told "her will was a law in the land." Her few letters preserved to us are well and neatly written, and indicate a woman of no small learning for her day. Of these the following strongly marks the woman:

Cold Spring, 4th day, 5th mo., 1812.

Dear Brother and Sister.

These will inform you that we have experienced great changes in our family since you left the island. On the 22d of the 2d mo. our son John, in returning from New York in a severe gale of wind, was thrown overboard by the jib sheet cleut giving way, he having at that instant the mainsail halliards in his hand, which proved an instrument in the hands of God to save him, to the astonishment of all the beholders. He was much strained in the breast and arms by the vessel carrying him with such velocity, and so far through the water before the hands on board could get him in, but through the mercy of God he is in prospect of recovery.

On the 4th of the 4th mo., our aged parent departed this life, being but two days confined to his bed; nine days after, our brother John departed this life, being confined from the day our father was buried.

On the first day of this month our little granddaughter, Anne (William's daughter), who lived with us, departed this life after four days' illness.

Physicians do not agree what disorder prevails, but certain it is there is a great mortality prevailing here, many depart this life from a few hours to one day. There have been several of the family attacked with, we believe, the same complaint. Divine has been slightly, those of brother John's children more severe, brother Townsend, and Isaac Hewlett, . . . but we are in hopes they are all in prospect of recovery, but when the malady will cease or the cause be known, God only knows. The season is very much against health, the snow is now several inches deep, and is still falling.

We have been much disappointed in not receiving a letter from you since you left the island after having a promise from so many sincere friends, and so near relations. I still flatter myself with the pleasing hope of once more reading a letter from some of you, but especially from thee, my dear sister, who is near and dear to me, although at so great a distance from each other; if not, I shall still indulge the pleasing hope through the mercy of that good God, and meritorious suffering of a blessed Saviour Jesus Christ, when time to us shall be no more we shall meet on the happy shores of eternal blessedness, never more to be separated, is the prayer of thy sister, and not only us, but my desire and prayer to God is that thy dear partner and all thy family, as well as my own, with all the heritage of God, may so walk in this world that when time shall be no more, that they may enjoy that happy . . . of eternal rest which God has in store for all those that love him. Tell . . . and . . . I often think of the pleasing hours we spent when they were here, and hope they will pursue the path of kindness with unimpaired faith, love and charity to their life's end, that they may receive the reward of well doing. Tell them to kiss the dear babe for me. Our particular family, through the mercy of God, are enjoying health at present, thanks be to Him for the same, and all other blessings we enjoy, and my prayer to Him is that you and all yours may enjoy the same blessing.

My family all join with me in unfeigned love to you and all the family and friends, and remain your sister and well wisher, farewell.

HANNAH JONES.

(III. 13) MAJOR WALTER JONES, son of William (II. 7); b. Feb. 14, 1757; d. May 7, 1828; m. 1784, Esther (his first wife), b. Sept. 21, 1762; d. June 2, 1800, dau. of William Willis, b. 1721, of Cedar Swamp, L. I., and his wife Mary, dau. of Ruenmourn Townsend; m., 2d, Phebe, b. 1 Apl, 1779; d. June 22, 1863, dau. of Samuel Hewlett, of Gt. Neck, and his wife Ruth, dau. of William Willis, of Cedar Swamp, L. I., by whom he had no issue. She was a niece of his first wife, Esther. Issue by first wife, Esther Willis:

- +IV. 35. John Jackson, b. Sept. 6, 1785; d. Oct. 12, 1824.
- 36. Mary Willis, b. Sept. 17, 1787; d. Sept. 22, 1872, unnm.
- 37. Sarah Willis, b. Jan. 16, 1789; d. Nov. 22, 1855, unnm.

- +42. William Townsend, b. Nov. 9, 1789, twin.

This Walter Jones was not of age at the commencement of the Rev. War, and, according with the Quakers, avoided taking arms. It appears he had a good education.

In 1779 the farm at West Neck, on the south side of L. I. being left to him and his brother John, charged with debts and legacies, some to be paid at their father's death, some at their mother's, and younger children to be educated and apprenticed, he remained on the place and carried on the farm with John until 1784. They delayed proving the will until 1781.

The agreement in 1779 about the burying plot has been described under John (III. 12), and the sale by John to Walter and John's removal to the north side of L. I.

The name of his eldest son, after the war ended, indicates that he (Walter Jones) looked to the Jackson family, then powerful under the new government. The 4th John Jackson was at this date the head of that family and had married Charity Treadwell, of a strong family supporting Congress.

In Nov., 1786, he was appointed first Major of the Queens Co. Regiment, then commanded by Col. Samuel Youngs, with Nathaniel Coles, Jr., as 2d Major. (See Council of Appointment of State of N. Y., by Hastings, Vol. 1, p. 74.)

A letter preserved to us concerning his appointment may be of interest:

Sir.

Col. Samuel Youngs, who is commissioned on the new establishment of the militia has requested me to inform you that he has received a letter from M. Clarkson, Brig. Genl., enclosing an extract from General Orders, and a list of the officers appointed, in which you are appointed first Major, also the Adjutant General's orders for the regiments or the companies to be paraded this fall, he therefore in concurrence with the other officers appointed this way has concluded to meet all the officers appointed in this regiment on Tuesday next at the house of Daniel Dodges, in Jericho, at one o'clock in the afternoon. Inclosed you have a roll of your officers in the 2d Battn, and he requests you will give them which are on the South speedy notice of the day which they are to meet to accept or refuse their commissions, which acceptance or refusal must absolutely be done in a few days, according to law.

I am, with respect,

Your most obedient servant,

WIL TOWNSEND.

On 26th March, 1787, he was commissioned by Gov. Clinton as "Salvor or Wrecker," to aid vessels in distress on the coasts of Queens Co. This office was created by an Act of Legislature passed Feb. 16, 1787. He was the first to be appointed under this act, and was to hold office "during pleasure." (See Comms., Vol. 6-D, 1770-1789, folio 407, Secy. of State office.) Under this commission he was obliged to keep all vessels or merchandise cast up by the sea and cause the same to be appraised, so that any person within a year who could prove ownership might have his goods restored to him on his paying the expenses of saving, etc. His pay was a "reasonable allowance out of the goods so saved." (Laws of N. Y., Vol. 1.)

On 9 Aug., 1786, there was a release executed to him by Jacob Conkling (his brother-in-law) of rights in the "Bating Place Purchase" of the town of Huntington, near modern Amityville.

He became the active representative of his father and mother and the scattered family. On 30 of 7 mo., 1788, John and Walter, with their wives Hannah and Esther, conveyed to their brother William meadow land at Oyster Bay South, cons. £210. On 30 Aug., 1790, receiving a deed from John, he conveyed the homestead to his brother Samuel (the Judge and Senator) who at that time was a strong and important man, and who rebuilt the old house. Walter remained still in charge. On 4 Sept., 1790, he united with his brothers in releasing to the town, the large claim to the South Beach and Meadows, reserving some by agreement. (Liber 69, p. 329, Queens Co.) He signed as attorney for Gilbert (III. 11), and it is stated he acted for and with Samuel (III. 8) and was in fair accord with him.

On 16 Apl., 1801, he signed a formal covenant with his brother Samuel, and the latter's son Thomas, for levying and acknowledging a Fine and Recovery for the West Neck homestead and land (to give Samuel a formal title and bar all entails and limitations). A Fine was levied. He still agreed to remain on the farm, and to board the carpenters while repairing the house.

On 28 May, 1802, he received a further release of land from Jacob Conkling and Elizabeth, his wife, for land in the Bating Place Purchase.

Shortly after this date he removed to the north side of L. I. and settled on land he bought of Garret Van Cott, Mch. 12, 1802. This land was situated next west of his brother John, and was separated from it by the highway leading from Cold Spring Harbor to Syosset, then called Ireland's Path, and contained 120 acres. After their removal the family resided in a very old house then standing on the westerly side of Ireland's Path, and directly in front of the residence now (1900) owned by Mrs. Oliver L. Jones. This old house, of which only the foundation stones (and an old well still used) now remain, was by report built by John Worden (or Worden) who owned land there as early as 1736.

In May, 1806, he received a deed from his brother David and his wife Elizabeth for 43 acres of land joining this purchase (of 12 March, 1802) on the south.

These two pieces of land, with several smaller pieces purchased later, comprised his homestead of 180 acres, on which he erected a new house, the cornerstone of which bears the mark W. J. 1810. Later he erected two stone walls marked with the dates 1819 and 1822, forming, with his barns, an enclosure for his cattle.

One of these barns, of which no vestige remains, contained a curious and crude machine used for threshing grain, and must have been made at a very early period. It consisted of a circular depression in the earth lined with stones set in mortar, with a post erected in its centre, around which a large stone drawn by horses moved freely. Tradition tells us it was sometimes used as a cider mill and was probably made or used by John Wooden before mentioned.

On 7 Feb., 1820, he and his 2d wife, Phebe, united in a conveyance of his real estate to his son, John Jackson Jones, who had advanced money to build and improve the place, and who, in 1822, conveyed the same to his four sisters.

On 25 Jan., 1850, Sarah and Mary Jones, two of the four sisters just named, who had become possessed of the entire real estate of their father, Walter Jones, conveyed the same to Samuel A. Jones (V. 81), who had married a granddaughter of this Walter Jones (III. 13).

Walter Jones preserved many old memoranda about the family, and it is to him we are indebted for many facts concerning it. He took much interest in public affairs, and was instrumental in having a public highway laid out across the island, following generally an old route called Ireland's Path, which on the north side of the island ran between his house and his brother John's, passing through Syosset and east of Hicksville. On the south side of the island it passed near his father's house, terminating at the highway running east and west across the various necks of meadow land on that part of the island.

Milestones were set up on this road throughout its entire extent. One of these, still standing, is on the westerly side of the highway a short distance south of his old homestead, and near the southeast corner of the land he purchased of David Jones in 1806. It is marked W. J. XIII., and indicates that number of miles from the south side of the island.

His will, dated 28 April, 1828, was proved on 9 June following. He bequeathed to his wife Phebe everything that belonged to her at the time of "our marriage." To Mary Esther Mott, daughter of James and Abigail Mott, a set of silver plate of the value of $150. To his daughters, Mary, Phebe, Sarah, and Abigail, all his furniture and cattle and implements of husbandry. To William H. Jones and John H. Jones (his brother John's children) a piece of Plains Lands near the island of Trees, bequeathed him by his father William. To his son Townsend, a piece of salt meadow called the "Bating Place Purchase," being all the land I own in Suffolk Co. Residue of his real estate to his daughters Mary and Sarah Jones, and wife Phebe. To his wife Phebe his Bank of America stock. His son, Wm. Townsend Jones, and David W. Jones, executors.

All of his homestead at Cold Spring Harbor (excepting perhaps the piece he bought of his brother David in 1806) and much of the adjoining land, all of which is still in possession of the Jones family, was between the years 1716 and 1740 owned by Maj. Timothy Bagley, who married the widow of Maj. Thomas Jones (I. 1), much of which (as we have formerly stated) possibly belonged to the latter at an earlier date.

The original map embracing this land of Maj. Timothy Bagley is now (1895) in the possession of John H. Doty, of Cold Spring Harbor.

The highway or "Ireland's Path," as indicated by dotted lines, is not in the original map, but has been added by me to show approximately the location of the land with reference to the present time.

Esther, his first wife, was interred in the West Neck burying ground at South Oyster Bay, and Phebe, his 2d wife, in the Episcopal Church Yard at Manhasset, L. I.

(III. 14) RICHARD JONES, son of William (II. 7); b. July 10, 1760; d. Oct. 10, 1844; m. Ruth, dau. of John Mott (by one account of Uister Co., and called by Walter Jones (III. 13) as "late of Long Island"). She b. Jan. 11, 1775; m. as above, Oct. 30, 1794; d. Aug. 22, 1834. He settled in Michigan about 1837. Issue:

+IV. 43. Phebe, b. Aug. 10, 1795; d. Dec. 31, 1849; m. 21 Feb., 1840.

John Hammond, no issue.

44. Abigail, b. Jan. 31, 1798; d. Aug. 4, 1830; not m.

+45. Gideon M., b. Oct. 10, 1799; d. Sept. 11, 1876.

+46. James, b. Nov. 21, 1801; d. 1863.

+47. Lydia Mott, b. Feb. 28, 1803; d. Aug. 3, 1861.

+48. William R., b. April 21, 1805; d. Feb. 13, 1880.

+49. Esther, b. Oct. 20, 1806; d. June 24, 1888.

+50. John Mott, b. Nov. 4, 1808; d. 1867.

+51. Thomas Elwood, b. Oct. 3, 1813; d. Dec. 7, 1869.

By report he removed from L. I. to Dutchess Co., thence to Jonesville, near Rochester, and from there he went to Michigan, where he died at the home of his son Gideon, in Litchfield, Hillsdale Co. In 1778, under his father's will, he was spoken of as under age and directed to be brought up at some trade.

Walter A. Scott, the son of his daughter Esther, states that his grandmother, Ruth Jones, was the daughter of John and Lydia Mott, and that she came from L. I. to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where she died before her husband's removal to Michigan.

(III.15) JACKSON HALLETT JONES, son of William (II.7), commonly called Hallett Jones, b. 1761; d. Feb. 29, 1836; m. 8 mo. 31st, 1784, Keziah, d. Dec. 13, 1837, dau. of Daniel Aldrich, of Suffolk Co., who by report was living in Newburg during the Rev. War. Issue:

IV. 52. David, b. July 19, 1785; d. July 15, 1809; unm.

53. Gilbert, b. Jan. 1, 1788; d. Oct. 14, 1813.

54. Richard, b. Oct. 30, 1790; d. Oct. 27, 1796; unm.

+55. Hallett, b. Oct. 18, 1792; d. April 1, 1847.

+56. Richard Restored, b. April 21, 1797.

57. Mary, b. April 1, 1798; d. April 26, 1826; unm.

+58. Daniel, b. Jan. 8, 1801.

+59. Elizabeth, b. March 1, 1803; d. Jan. 10, 1882.

He took an active part in the Rev. War against the British, and in 1779 seized a gunboat (the crew of which had gone on shore) and by firing a gun drew a company of militia to the spot who captured the crew. (Onderdonk's Queens Co., p. 203.)

He studied medicine but did not follow the profession. In 1785 he was living in Newburg but soon returned to L. I. and lived on his place at Cold Spring Harbor, on the easterly side of what is known as "Turkey Lane."

(III. 16) FREELOVE JONES, dau. of William (II. 7); b. 1742; d. Oct. 21, 1821; m., Jan. 5, 1763 (by license Dec. 30, 1762), Lieut. Col. Benjamin Birdsall, b. 1736; d. 20 July, 1798 son of Capt. John of Jerusalem South, L. I. In Thompson's L. I. 2, p. 492, he was called a son of Thomas Birdsall, which we must treat as an error. Issue, eight children.

(See under Birdsall family.)

Her will, dated 28 of 7 mo., 1821, prob. at Rocky Hill (near Flushing), Dec. 19, 1821, names son-in-law James Jackson, gr. daus. Margaret Elizabeth and Deborah Ann Jackson, daus. Margaret Tredwell, Mary Wright, and Elizabeth Althouse. Ex. my dau. Margaret Tredwell.

Margaret Tredwell died before the probate of the will, and Wm. Wright, Jr., of Flushing (a gr. son of Freelove Jones Birdsall) was appointed adms. Dec. 19, 1821. (Liber E, p. 34, Queens Co.)

Lieut. Col. Benj. Birdsall was of an old Queens Co. family, and of a branch that intermarried with the Seamans and Jacksons of the north side of L. I. He was called a "drover farmer," one who raised cattle on the Hempstead Plains, and fed them in winter on the wild meadow grass. He lived on the south side of L. I. a short distance west of his father-in-law, Wm. Jones. He took an active part in the Rev. War. His colonel was John Sands, an active supporter of Congress. In 1777-1783 was Member of Assembly. In 1776 he mustered 60 volunteers and aided Gen. Putnam in erecting intrenchments on Brooklyn Heights. He was captured by the British and imprisoned in the "Provost," at which time Genl. Washington had his wife and children conveyed to Dover, in Dutchess Co., where they remained during the war. In 1794 he disposed of his property and settled in Jerusalem, where he died. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

(III. 17) ELIZABETH JONES, dau. of William (II. 7). By license of Jan. 28, 1757, m. Jacob Conkling, son of Israel, of Huntington, Suffolk Co., L. I. By report he survived her and married a 2d wife. Issue, nine children.

(See under Conkling family.)

Israel Conkling, the father of Jacob, lived in the town of Huntington, on the south side of L. I. He was a son of Jacob, who was a son of the 2d Timothy, a son of the first Timothy, who was a younger son of the first John, of Southold and Huntington. In 1775 he signed to support Congress and was a soldier in Capt. Rogers' Company.

On 6 Aug., 1778, he made his will, naming eight children, including Jacob. Prob. 4 July, 1780. (Lib. 32, p. 476, N. Y. City.)

In 1774, Oct. 13, the deed from Israel Conkling to Gilbert Jones (III. 11) has been noticed, whose children conveyed to Walter Jones (III. 13), 18 April, 1818.

(III. 18) SARAH JONES, dau. of William (II. 7);⁴ b. 1756; d. Sept. 16, 1841; m. John Willis; d. 1837, son of John, of Cedar Swamp, L. I., and his wife Margaret, dau. of Caleb Cornwell and Elizabeth Hayner, his wife. Issue, five children
(See under Willis family.)

(III. 19) PHEBE JONES, dau. of William (II. 7); b. 1758; d. 1841; m. by license of 6 March, 1775, Benjamin Rowland, of Flushing, L. I., son of Jonathan. (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec. XIV., p. 71.) Issue:

- +9. Mary Ann S., d. Feb. 6, 1890.
- +10. Catharine C., d. Nov. 4, 1893.
- +11. Catharine, d. Aug. 9, 1853.

+12. Sarah.
Cornelia (doubtful).

He practiced law and during his father's lifetime was known as Saml. Jones, Jr. He resided in N. Y. City, and from 1809 to 1817 was Alderman.

In ——— was Corporation Counsel.

He prepared the draft of the long statute relating to the City of N. Y. contained in the Revised Laws of 1813.

In 1811 he was one of the original members of the Committee of Defense, appointed by the Common Council, which consisted of four Aldermen and three Assistant Aldermen. (Wilson's Memo. Hist. N. Y. 3, p. 239.)

He was the last surviving member of the "Drone," a literary society founded in 1792. (See Francis "Old New York"), and also a member of the Kent Club.

His mother's family (Herring) brought him into familiarity with the real estate of the city. The Kip family employed him in the partition and conveyancing of a farm on Kip's Bay. Before the regular streets were laid out by law, the owners had laid out roads and lots, which were intersected and injured by the new streets. A great deal of conveyancing and law was the result, in which he had a large share.

In 1812-1814 he was a Member of Assembly from N. Y. City, sitting during the principal part of the period of the 2d war with Great Britain, and generally sustaining De Witt Clinton and the war.

In 1812 his brother William became a member, and in 1813 to 1815 his brother Elbert H. was in the Senate.

His wife's father was only a few years his elder, born in 1768. Mr. Schuyler married first Sarah Rutsen, connected with the De Witts, and 2d Phebe Carman, probably from the L. I. family. He was a son of Genl. Phil. Schuyler, and he became a member of Congress from Dutchess Co. in 1817-1818. These items may be sufficient to indicate the political position and standing of Mr. Jones.

As a lawyer he had a general practice, and was counsel for several insurance companies (most of which were crippled by the war), and particularly for the United States Ins. Co., after his cousin, Walter R. Jones (IV. 30), was connected with it. This compelled him to study maritime law, and many cases argued by him are scattered through the books. (See Johns Report 15, 523; 14, 227; 16, 128; 17, 23, etc.) His mother dying in 1821, he with his brothers became interested in the Herring farm, above Canal St., N. Y. City.

In 1823-4, he was Recorder of N. Y. City, following the career of Judge Thos. Jones (III. 3), and of his father, Judge Samuel Jones (III. 8).

On 24 June, 1825, he was nominated by Gov. De Witt Clinton, and confirmed by the Senate, as Chancellor of the State of N. Y. (the highest law office in the State) in the place of Nathan Sanford chosen as U. S. Senator, who had presided over the constitution that framed the new constitution of 1821. Both were from L. I., and on no other occasion had the island filled such high places, both at once.

The appointment of Mr. Jones was treated by many as emanating especially from the personal estimate of him by De Witt Clinton, who was sure of his knowledge, fairness, and industry, and no one denied his general competence. He was recognized as "very learned in the law."

He had counselled patiently and examined the cases argued before him with great thoroughness. After writing an opinion he would hear a further argument, if an error was strongly urged, and be very ready to correct an error if he discovered one. His written opinions reviewed the disputed questions of law and fact in various aspects, answering objections, and perhaps with too great minuteness. As Chancellor Mr. Jones was a member of the Court for the correction of Errors to decide upon writs of error returned from the Supreme Court. He was near sixty years of age, the new limit appointed by the new constitution in hostility to his friends Kent and Spencer. He must have found the office laborious and more than any man could master. His patron, De Witt Clinton, who had been elected Governor in opposition to the party of the new constitution, died on 11 Feb., 1828. The Lieut. Gov. was not unfriendly, and Mr. Jones resigned the office of Chancellor in April, 1828, sitting three years, and took the office of Chief Justice of the Superior Court in the City of N. Y., a new court of common law, called local and inferior, to which the limited term of sixty years of age was held not to apply, and he was succeeded in the office of Chancellor by Judge Walworth.

Mr. Jones filled the office of Chief Justice of the Superior Court from the first organization in 1828 until by the new third constitution of 1846 judges were made elective, and the limited term of sixty years of age was changed. In 1848 he was elected Judge of the Supreme Court of the City of N. Y. for the short term, and held only for two years. He was then nearly seventy-seven years of age.

About 1833 he entered into an arrangement with Jas. Lorimer Graham (then an active lawyer) for Mr. Graham to attend to all the work (and have about one-quarter), while the judgment of both would be consulted in purchasing city lots, relying upon the growth of the city for a rise of prices. They bought largely, and gave many mortgages, but the political warfare about currency and fall of prices overtook them and they fell, mortgages were foreclosed, property lost, and no profits realized, and he met with disaster. He bore all courageously, he abandoned house and home and lived at boarding houses. He lost his library, but was permitted to use it, and, laboring until the last, went to his brother William's in the country to bear his illness. He lamented for his family, and was anxious at the very last to have a long report engrossed on opening a street in time to have his signature to it, so that the pay for it might be fully earned and his son might secure it. But all in vain. After all we are obliged to lament that his long life so worthily spent had so poor an appreciation of it by those he benefited.

He attended the Church of the Annunciation in N. Y. City (Rev. Dr. Seabury) and became one of its wardens. He had decided religious opinions, but made little show of them. His family seemed to have acquired a strong religious disposition, but not in the line he favored or desired to lead them. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

At his death in 1853 a meeting of the New York Bar was held (Hon. Judge Duer presiding), and resolutions were passed eulogistic of his high public and private character. Quoting from one of these resolutions, "his profound learning, his astute discernment, and great powers of endurance, his close reasoning, and skilful logic, placed him in the first rank of that Bar of which his honored parent was called 'the father.' He brought to the Bench a vast professional experience, great learning, sound judgment, spotless integrity, and a pure love of justice. Before a Bench which reflected high honor upon our State, our late venerable brother maintained his high standing until 1826, when Gov. Clinton appointed him Chancellor of the State of N. Y. He performed the duties of this office with great dignity and firmness until 1828, when he was appointed Chief Justice of the Superior Court of N. Y. City. The duties of this important office at the head of the Court which had been more occupied with important questions of commercial law than any other tribunal in our country, were discharged with unbending integrity, unsullied purity, and gentlemanly courtesy for a period of twenty years."

(IV. 4) MAJOR WILLIAM JONES, son of Judge Samuel (III. 8); b. Oct. 4, 1771; d. at Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., Sept. 16, 1853; m. Oct. 4, 1790, Keziah, b. Feb. 12, 1773; d. May 1, 1847, dau. of Capt. Daniel Youngs, of Oyster Bay, L. I., and his wife Susanna, dau. of Timothy Kelsey, of Huntington, L. I. Issue:

- +V. 13. Samuel W., b. July 6, 1791; d. Dec. 1, 1855.
- +14. David W., b. May 3, 1793; d. July 6, 1877.
- +15. Cornelia H., b. April 22, 1796; d. Dec. 29, 1839.
- +16. Susan M., b. April 20, 1802.

- +19. Hannah A., b. June 10, 1807; d. Sept. 18, 1852.
- +20. Daniel Y., b. July 9, 1809.

He was educated at the Academy in Oyster Bay, of which he later, in 1802, became one of its trustees. He was baptized in the New Dutch Church, N. Y. City, Elbert and Elizabeth Haring being his sponsors (his maternal grandparents); at an early age he was sent to live with Townsend Hewlett and his wife Martha, at Buckram, L. I.

He was married by Rev. Andrew Fowler, of the Episcopal Church, at Oyster Bay, and settled at South Oyster Bay, residing there until 1793, when they removed to Cold Spring Harbor, where, in 1806, he built a large house on the westerly side of the Harbor at the foot of a beach called "Major Jones' Beach."

In 1796, before his removal to Cold Spring Harbor, he was appointed Captn. of a troop of horse formed from the Queens Co. Regt. commanded by Lieut. Col. Nathaniel Coles (see Council of Appointment, Vol. 1, p. 326), and in 1807 (after his removal) he was appointed Major of a company of cavalry (Council of Appointment, Vol. 1, p. 937). In 1814, the cavalry being transformed into horse artillery, he was appointed as Lieut. Col. of 2d Regt. of Horse of Queens Co. (Council of Appointment, Vol. 2, p. 1491.)

In 1815 he was elected to the Assembly by 1,057 votes as a Federalist, the Republican vote being about 750, and from 1816 to 1825 he was regularly re-elected (except in 1818, 1820 and 1822). In 1817 the previous members, Carman, Jones and Kissam, were elected without opposition. In that year an Agricultural Society was formed for Queens Co., which he favored, assisting on the Committee of Arrangements.

In 1818 two of the old members of Assembly, Kissam and Carman, were elected from the other towns, and John A. King (son of Rufus, the U. S. Senator) was chosen from Jamaica as a new member. There were five towns in the county, and this probably was an alternation claimed by that town. In 1819 Wm. Jones, from Oyster Bay; John A. King, from Jamaica, and Thos. Tredwell, from Hempstead, were elected by 752 votes over 483.

In 1819 Mr. Jones was Vice Pres. of the Agricultural Society. In 1820 Kissam, Jones and Tredwell were defeated by John A. King, and others; King, 972 and Jones, 866 votes. In 1821, Jones, Tredwell and Nostrand were elected; Jones, 1,378, and King, 1,018; a large vote, indicating a sharp contest.

In 1822 (under the new constitution, two members for the county) there was much disaffection, and he was defeated; Jones, 653 votes; for others 715 and 703.

In 1823 he was elected with Tredwell by 669 and 616 votes, others having only 499 and 446.

In 1824 he was elected by a larger vote, viz., 923 and 985, over 708 and 649.

In 1825 he was again elected with the same associate by 965 and 895 votes over 767 and 723.

He was not again a candidate; the brother of his son-in-law, viz., Henry Floyd-Jones (5), became the representative of the family from the town of Oyster Bay.

"He was noted for his fondness for thoroughbred horses, with which his stables were well filled, which brought him in close association with turfmen of high and honorable repute." (Gen. of Youngs family.) His house was known as "an open house, where always was to be had good brandy and Holland Gin," and from his great love for horses it was commonly said of him "that next to his family he loved his horse." Directly in front of his house was the long, sandy beach that divides Cold Spring Harbor into two bodies of water. This beach, called Maj. Jones' Beach, is about half a mile in length, and was used by him as a training ground for his horses.

His daughter Eleanor (who married William Sidney Smith) in her "Golden Wedding Mementos" of herself and husband, writes of him thus: "While a member of the State Legislature, Mr. Jones exhibited those marked traits of character for which he was so eminently distinguished and which rendered him one of the most popular and useful members of that body."

His wife Keziah was a woman of strong religious principles, and inherited all of the estimable qualities of her mother and grandmother, the latter of whom was Hannah, dau. of Peter Underhill.

Throughout her whole life she was devoted to the Church, and a mural tablet was erected to her memory in St. John's Prot. Epis. Church at Cold Spring Harbor, with the following inscription:

SACRED TO THE MEMORY OF KEZIAH, WIFE OF WILLIAM JONES, A DEVOTED COMMUNICANT, AND CONSTANT WORSHIPPER IN THIS CHURCH.
BORN FEB. 12, 1773; DIED MAY 1, 1847. IN GRATEFUL REMEMBRANCE OF THEIR MOTHER
THIS TABLET IS ERECTED BY HER CHILDREN.

"Her strong religious principles and personal traits are strongly marked in her four daughters and their descendants, all of whom are Church members and, with few exceptions, communicants. Of her daughters all were eminently qualified by inherent virtues and early training for wives and mothers; all of them attained this state." ("Gen. of Youngs Family," by D. K. Youngs.)

In May, 1812, he was a candidate for the State Senate as a Federalist and received in Queens Co. 791 votes, and Maj. Robert Moore, of Newtown, 153 votes as a Republican.

From 1812 to 1815 he was a member of the State Senate, supporting De Witt Clinton. He resigned his seat in the Senate on 6 March, 1815, on account of ill health.

In June, 1821, he was elected a member of the convention to revise the State Constitution, Rufus King receiving 1,138 votes and he 814.

He lived with his brother, William Jones, until his marriage in 1825. He was then 52 years of age, and removed to Oyster Bay Cove, where he settled upon lands formerly in the possession of Billop Seaman, whose granddaughter, Catharine Howard, married Townsend Jones (VI. 80).

Judge David S. Jones was a graduate of Columbia College, class of 1796. Soon after leaving he was appointed by Gov. Jay as his private secretary, which position he held for three years.

He then returned to New York and was soon admitted to the Bar. From 1813 to 1816 he was Corporation Counsel of the City of New York; 1833 to 1848, trustee of Columbia College; 1840 to 1843, County Judge of Queens Co., L. I.

In the quasi war with France he was First Lieut. in a volunteer Co., commanded by Peter A. Jay. (MSS. William Alfred Jones, his son.)

Mr. Jones was a churchman and was at the time of his death senior warden of St. Saviour's Church, Maspeth, L. I., which church he greatly aided in organizing.

From 1821 to 1829 he was Lay Delegate from St. Mark's Church, N. Y. City, and in 1822 trustee of the General Theological Seminary.

In 1836 he relinquished his practice in N. Y. and retired to his place at Massapequa, South Oyster Bay, L. I., where he erected a handsome residence, but owing to financial troubles was forced to give up his property and return to the Bar.

The last five years of his life were spent at his residence at Maspeth, L. I. (the former country seat of De Witt Clinton). His remains were interred in St. Mark's Church Yard Vault, at that place.

Chief Justice Duer speaking of him said, "He had few superiors in our profession," and further adds, "as one of the oldest of his friends, no one had a deeper sense of the responsibility which the relation of lawyer and client creates—none more faithful in discharging the duties which the relation imposes."

Mr. Jones became a large land owner, some of which probably included the homestead of his father, whereon he resided, a little south of the village of Syosset.

He left a remarkable will (Liber 1, p. 213, Queens Co.) creating the "Jones Fund," for the support of the poor in the towns of Oyster Bay and North Hempstead, for which purpose he bequeathed the sum of $30,000, to be put in charge of five trustees, who were to be appointed by the Legislature and to be known as the "Trustees of the Jones Fund," the income of which sum he directed to be used for the support of the said poor, who were to be kept in some suitable place where they may be engaged in some manual employment. Other small legacies were given to friends. To his wife he gave $175 yearly during widowhood, and in case of her remarriage she was to receive only $50 yearly for life. The probate of his will in 1836 was objected to by his widow, on the ground that he was not of sound mind, but proof was allowed by the Surrogate.

In pursuance of this bequest the Legislature in 1838 passed an act naming three of the inhabitants of the town of Oyster Bay, and two of the town of North Hempstead as such trustees, to hold for two years, whose successors were to be chosen by the inhabitants of said towns at their annual meetings. This "Fund" was later augmented by a bequest from Walter R. Jones of $5,000.

Lived on his farm at East Woods (Syosset) that was conveyed to him by his parents on May 6, 1799 (before he was of age). He became interested in the management of the mills at Cold Spring Harbor with his father and others, and with Divine Hewlett opened a store in New York for the purpose of selling flour made in the mills; see under John Jones (III. 12).

In 1828 he was elected Justice of the Peace in Queens Co.

He was named for his grandfather, John Hewlett, and when a boy went to live with him in his old age and assist in taking care of him, but returned to Cold Spring Harbor before the death of the aged man.

In 1804 Mr. Jones' father-in-law, Judge Divine Hewlett, conveyed to Mr. Jones' father two small pieces of land just north of the grist mill on Cold Spring Harbor, and on the west side of the highway on which were afterwards built the first dwelling house and store of John H. Jones.

On June 10, 1807, Mr. Jones received from his father a deed for these two pieces of land, including also land on the west side of Cold Spring Harbor which his father had received from David Jones (III. 7). The store became the place of his first business enterprise and the centre of a widespread business, embracing a large whaling industry and grist and woolen mills. The grist mill first mentioned was built in 1809. He enlarged and improved the house on the west side of the Harbor (which had been built by his uncle, David Jones (III. 7)), and removing there made it his home for the rest of his life, building around it at different dates houses, factories and shops, and improving the place, which was much dilapidated.

The title to that portion of the David Jones (III. 7) purchase (about ten acres), on which stood the old house of John H. Jones, is interesting. On 2d July, 1810, he received from his father and mother a deed for one-half of the Lower Mills, north of the Lower Mill Dam, with the canal down to the Harbor, and the grist mill and its site, and one-half of the Cooper's Shop, land, shore and Harbor as conveyed in 1791 and 1794 to his father, and to Isaac and Divine Hewlett, in equal thirds. (Liber D, p. 316, Suffolk Co., May, 1814.) (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

On 20 Oct., 1819, a deed was executed by Wm. M. Hewlett to John H. Jones and Walter R. Jones (his brother) to give them color of title, for the site of the Lower Factory building just west of the house of John H. Jones, extending westerly one hundred and eighty feet on the highway (one-quarter to Walter R. Jones) : this, it is understood, was before the death of their father. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

In 1820 he and his brother, Walter R., having erected buildings and obtained machinery, commenced the prosecution of the Woolen Factory. Their advertisement may be deemed of interest, viz. :

COLD SPRING HARBOR WOOLEN FACTORY.

Wool will be received and manufactured into Broadcloth, Kerseymeres, Satinets, Flannels, Blankets and Carpetings. Cloth will be given in exchange for wool. Fulling, dressing and coloring cloth at any season of the year. Extra machines having been put into operation for the purpose of carding only, it can be done with dispatch, and in the best manner. Persons in haste by taking their wool to the factory can have it carded immediately. Wool for manufacturing and carding, and cloth for dressing will be received and forwarded by Jacob Smith at the turnpike gate, Brooklyn; Skidmore Hendrickson, on the Plains; David Seely, at the Court House, Long Island, or by Wm. R. Hitchcock & Co., corner of Peck Slip and South St., N. Y.

JOHN H. and WALTER R. JONES.

Cold Spring, 29 May, 1820.

In Oct., 1821, they exhibited their manufactures at a fair held in N. Y. City, and were awarded premiums for cassimeres, cloths, and blaukets, and in 1823 for flannels and blankets.

The woolen mills were kept running until the death of Walter R. Jones in 1855, but business dwindled until in later years the coarse flannels and thick cloth (which were used by the whale men of that place) became the principal productions.

In 1823 Isaac Hewlett and wife conveyed to John H. Jones one-sixth of four pieces of land, comprising the Upper Factory, with machinery and fixtures in the mill, and Woolen Factory ($\frac{1}{6}$ was conveyed by Mr. Hewlett to Walter R. Jones, and $\frac{1}{6}$ to Wm. H. Jones). In 1825, Jan. 12, Wm. H. Jones conveyed to John H. Jones $\frac{1}{6}$ of the four pieces comprising the Upper Factory property, and John H. conveyed to Walter R. Jones 1-12 of the Lower Factory property.

On 1827, Mch. 10, Mr. Jones and his brother Walter R. applied to the Legislature to incorporate the Cold Spring Steam Boat Company. They had to buy or hire land and build a dock in the lower Harbor. The steamboat American Eagle (Capt. Peck), made daily trips from there to New York.

In July, 1827, he was secretary of a meeting held at the Court House of "Friends of the American System," so-called, favoring a protective tariff, and was appointed delegate to a State Convention held in Albany. The tariff failing to protect manufacturers he turned his attention to the whaling business (an incorporated Co.), of which he was the managing agent. This for a while was a profitable business, but a scarcity of whales, the loss of several ships and the outbreak of the Civil War caused a dissolution of the company.

Mr. Jones was always a leading spirit in his native place, and during the last years of his life was actively engaged in building an extension of the Long Island Railroad from Hicksville to Syosset.

Regarding this Mr. C. B. Moore tells us: "The L. I. R. R. Co. (incorporated in 1832) consumed its stock and all the money it could borrow in getting as far as Hicksville, and then, turning, took a route through the middle of the island via Farmingdale to Greenport.

"It forfeited stock not paid for, and gave its bonds to contractors in such a way that its apparent cost to stockholders was over $50,000 a mile from Jamaica to Hicksville, and over $30,000 a mile from Hicksville to Greenport. It needed branches, and had power to build them, but had neither money nor credit sufficient. It was deemed important to show that the cost in money need not be so great, and also desirable to approach Cold Spring much nearer with the road. So he (Mr. Jones) and his sons and his brother Walter, and some friends, obtaining a charter of the Hicksville and Cold Spring Branch R. R. Co., chose him its president and built a branch from Hicksville to Syosset (four miles) at a cost of less than $11,000 a mile, under an agreement with the L. I. R. R. Co. to run their cars on the road and to pay seven per cent. interest on the cost, and the taxes imposed on the road, being allowed to superintend the building and permitted to purchase the road at cost when they choose.

"It was successful and much increased the number of passengers. It was used about ten years, when the L. I. R. R. Co. wanted it built further east, and Mr. Jones had his hopes strongly enlisted. The work of extension was commenced under his superintendence, but he died and war prices occurred, and about 1863, after his death, the L. I. R. R. Co. professed to elect to purchase and pay the cost in greenbacks (then worth much less than the money by which the branch road had been built); when this was ready to be accepted and deed executed the L. I. R. R. Co. made objections and tried to keep the road without paying either the purchase money or the rent for its use. Oliver Charlick was then the Co.'s president, but after a sharp litigation (Horace F. Clark assisting Charlick) this plan failed, and its officers paid principal and interest and costs, and, building a continuance of the branch road less convenient for Cold Spring, borrowing funds by bonds payable ahead when money would be more valuable, it succeeded in making a much more costly road and in crowding aside from public view the injustice committed." (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

Mr. Jones' early education was derived in the public schools near his home, and was eminently a self-made man. He was a churchman and warden of St. John's Epis. Church at Cold Spring Harbor from its organization in 1835 until his death in 1859.

He made his will Aug. 15, 1851, and on 31 Oct., 1857, he added a codicil. His will was in favor of his children. Prob. Jan. 23, 1860, Queens Co.

(IV. 28) SARAH H. JONES, dau. of John (III. 12); b. 22 July, 1787; d. July 26, 1871. She did not marry, and lived at home. As her parents grew infirm (and her brothers had left home) she became the active head of the family. She was a woman of great mental activity and was familiarly known as "Lawyer Sarah." In 1851 her brother Walter R. made her one of his executors. She left a long and curious will, generally in favor of her younger brother Charles H., and her sister Phebe, who had lived at home with her. (Prob. Nov. 3, 1871, Queens Co.)

(IV. 29) MARY TOWNSEND JONES, dau. of John (III. 12); b. June 4, 1790, d. Oct. 12, 1858. She never married, and when young went to live with her cousin, Samuel Jones (IV. 10), and remained there until his death. She had some legacies by his will. Her religious calling was that of the Friends. Will prob. Dec. 13, 1858.

(IV. 30) WALTER RESTORED JONES, son of John (III. 12); b. April 15, 1793; d. April 7, 1855. Mr. Jones never married; his middle name of "Restored" was added to his original Christian name at the request of his mother. His eldest brother Walter having been killed in an accident, it was her wish to preserve the name, hence the epithet "Restored."

When only eleven years old his elder brother, Wm. H. Jones, employed him in his flour business in N. Y. City. While here he devoted all his spare time to school and studies. The embargo of 1807 destroyed the business, and his gr. father, John Hewlett, sent him to Fresh Meadows, where he stayed for a short time. He later became associated with his brother, John H., in the general store business at Cold Spring Harbor, and in 1820 in the management of the woolen factory (see advt. under John H. (IV. 27)). He kept an interest in the latter during his life, and in several of the enterprises conducted by John H. Jones (IV. 27).

In 1809 he returned to New York and became a clerk in the United States Insurance Co., favored by his cousin, John Jackson Jones (IV. 35), which situation he held until the losses by the French decrees against commerce and the subsequent war with England injured the marine insurance business. This company was one of the first if not the first marine insurance company in this country, and in it Mr. Jones laid the foundation for his later high standing in marine insurance.

In 1816 he was appointed Secy. of the Co., but its diminished capital induced the directors to close the business. In 1817 a new company was formed called the Pacific Ins. Co., of which Mr. Sands was Vice Prest. and John Jackson Jones Secy.

Mr. Jones became a clerk in that company, and later they being promoted he became secretary, which office he held until 1824. During that year he became connected with the Niagara Ins. Co. (then incorporated) and soon with the first Atlantic Insurance Co. (chartered in 1824) as Vice Prest., of which Archibald Gracie was Prest., holding until 1828, when its capital was divided and paid off and a new company was chartered.

From 1829 to 1842 Mr. Jones was Vice Prest. of the second Atlantic Insurance Co., with Josiah L. Hale as Prest. Mr. Hale had procured a majority of the stock to be subscribed in Boston on account of the difficulty of obtaining subscriptions in New York in consequence of the large losses of marine insurance companies; the new company was a very successful one. It did a large business on a small capital, and its dividends of profits were large. Its most successful competitors were mutual companies. The great fire of 1835 demonstrated that it needed a larger capital for safety.

On 11th April, 1842, a charter was obtained from the Legislature for a mutual Co., and in May following the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Co. was organized and it was resolved to transfer the business to that company, of which Walter R. Jones was elected Prest. and Mr. Hale, Vice Prest., and in 1843 John D. Jones (V. 79) became Secretary.

In 1849 Mr. Hale retiring, John D. Jones was elected Vice Prest. This company became one of the largest insurance companies in the world, and Walter R. Jones remained at its head until his death in 1858. The great success which had attended the company's work on the mutual plan was largely attained by the judicious management of its president. It may be stated here that from 1844 to 1854 an actual dividend of 35% had been declared annually by this company.

Mr. Jones was one of the incorporators of the "Life Saving Benevolent Association of N. Y.," incorporated under an Act of Legislature passed March 26, 1849, and it is principally owing to his labor and zeal that this institution was formulated. He was chosen its first Prest. and John D. Jones its Secy.

At the time of his death he also held the following offices: Prest. of Board of Directors of the American Exchange Bank, which office he held for ten years; director of the Leather Manufacturers' Bank; director of the Screw Dock Company; member of the Chamber of Commerce; director of the N. Y. Life and Fire Insurance Co.; president of the Board of Underwriters.

In 1850 he received a deed for six acres of land near the old homestead of his father, on which he commenced the erection of a large mansion house that was barely completed when his death occurred. The mansion later became the residence of Charles H. Jones (IV. 34).

On 22 Nov., 1853, a complimentary dinner was given Mr. Jones by the trustees of the Atlantic Mutual Ins. Co. and other merchants of N. Y. City. It was held in the Astor House, and a handsome silver dinner service was presented him. Toasts and speeches were made which were published in the papers of the day, and an account published in the U. S. Insurance Gazette, Vol. 1, No. 11, June, 1855. At this dinner there were present all of the directors of the Co. and many other distinguished persons.

The then directors were: Walter R. Jones, Josiah L. Hale, Thos. Tileston, Henry Coit, E. D. Hurlburt, Wm. S. Wetmore, Elisha Riggs, Leroy M. Wiley, Henry W. Hicks, Danl. S. Miller, S. T. Nicoll, Jos. Gaillard, Jr., Robt. C. Goodhue, Augustine Averill, John D. Jones, Lovell Holbrook, Benj. F. Nash, P. A. Hargous, Lewis Curtis, J. H. Bugy, Jas. Brice, Cornelius Grinnell, David Lane, Joshua J. Henry, Wm. E. Dodge, Hamilton McCall, E. H. Gillian, M. Gans, Wm. C. Pickersgill, Ramsay Crooks, Caleb Barstow, A. P. Pillot, L. S. Suarez, Wm. Sturges, Jr., Henry K. Bogart, A. A. Low, Dennis Perkins, Mortimer Livingston, and Wm. Wood.

Thos. Tileston acted as Prest., and Henry Coit, Ramsay Crooks, J. J. Henry, Jas. Brice and Wm. E. Dodge, Vice Prests.

On the left of the Prest. sat Mr. Jones; on his right the Rev. Mr. Osgood; elsewhere sat Hon. F. B. Cutting, ex-Mayor Kingsland and others.

On a table parallel with this one was arranged the presentation plate, consisting of the following articles, viz.: Eight large dishes, four vegetable dishes with covers, two gravy tureens, two large salvers, six covers for dishes, two large pitchers, one large waiter, two large scup tureens, and one magnificent epergne with branching candelabra, the base surmounted by a cover worked in imitation of a sea shell, upon which stood a figure of Neptune with his trident, all except the epergne bearing the inscription:

WALTER R. JONES
FROM THE TRUSTEES OF THE
1853.

On 26 July, 1851, he made his will, appointing his brother, Charles H. Jones, and his three sisters as executors. He gave legacies to the amount of $150,000, and life interests to five of his brothers and sisters, with remainders to the children of his brother Charles H., and sister Elizabeth. He left also a legacy of $1,000 to St. John's Prot. Epis. Church, at Cold Spring Harbor, and another of $1,000 to the trustees of a school to be erected within 100 rods of the said church. To the Trustees of the "Jones Fund" as founded by Samuel Jones, he gave $5,000.

He died April 7, 1855, and his funeral service was held in Trinity Church, N. Y. City, the Rev. Drs. Higbee, Seabury and Hale, Prest. of Geneva College, officiating.

His remains were deposited in the family vault at Cold Spring Harbor, toward the erection of which he bequeathed the sum of $500.

Jacob C. Hewlett resided at Cold Spring Harbor on a farm which his father had conveyed to him. He deeded to his wife a lot on this farm on which she built a house, and which by will she gave to her son, John Divine Hewlett.

He held several public offices and for several years was Surveyor of the Port of that place under a special statute passed to favor the whaling industry established there.

- +90. Mary Elizabeth, b. July 5, 1854; m. Oliver L. Jones (VI. 65).

Mr. Jones, the youngest of the ten children of John Jones (III. 12), was born at Cold Spring Harbor in the house built there by his father in 1783-4. The house, still (1900) well preserved, stands on the easterly side of the highway and near the one built by Walter Jones (III. 13) on the westerly side of the highway in 1810.

His early education was obtained at the public schools of his native place. His two elder brothers, Wm. H. and John H., having settled in their respective homes on lands given them by their father, he remained at home with his parents, and at his father's death in 1819 succeeded to the old homestead. This was the nucleus of what later became, under his care, the largest agricultural interest in the possession of any one person in that part of L. I.

During his younger days he greatly aided his father in his agricultural pursuits, and later was interested with him in his woolen and flouring mills at that place.

On the death of his uncle, Walter R. Jones (IV. 30), he fell heir to the large mansion he (Walter R. Jones) had just completed in 1855, very near the old home of John Jones (III. 12), and shortly after removed there with his family, and in it he died, having survived all of his children excepting his daughter, Mary E., who became the wife of Dr. Oliver L. Jones (VI. 65). His new home has since been known as "Jones Manor House."

On the death of Mr. Jones' only son, John G., without issue, his descendants in the male line became extinct, but through his daughter, Mary E. (who married as above stated), the male line was restored.

In later life Mr. Jones owned and conducted large brick yards at Cold Spring Harbor, and also at Haverstraw, the latter of which he purchased of his brother, Joshua T.

In 1870 he was elected Prest. of the Queens Co. Agricultural Soc., a position of honor, to which he was re-elected for several years.

As a churchman he was devout and sincere. In the organization of St. John's Church, of his native place, in 1835, he bore a prominent part, and from that time until his death he was its senior warden, a period of forty-seven years.

He was a man of great firmness of character and deliberation, and commanded the respect of all who knew him. His varied business interests brought him in close touch with the leading men of his day, and also afforded employment to a large number of laboring men, whose friend, it can be truly said, he was. "His hospitality to the poor was unbounded, and no applicant, either for charity or work, who was in any way deserving was ever turned away unaided."

(IV. 35) JOHN JACKSON JONES, son of Major Walter (III. 13); b. Sept. 6, 1785; d. Oct. 12, 1824. He never married.

A curious certificate now in possession of the family recites that "he first entered school March ye 28th, A. D., 1790, being then but four years, seven months, and nine days old."

He was sent to New York at an early age and became a clerk in the Pacific Insurance Co. His advancement there was rapid, becoming its Secy. in 1823, and in the year following its Vice Prest.

Mr. Jones was the first one of the Jones family to engage in the insurance business, and it was through his influence that his cousin, Walter R. Jones (IV. 30), was introduced into the office of the United States Ins. Co. as a clerk.

He greatly aided his father in keeping up the old homestead and perhaps advanced him money for that purpose.

On 7 Feb., 1820, he received a deed from his father for the farm and homestead at Cold Spring Harbor, and in 1822 conveyed the same to his four sisters. (See under Walter Jones (III. 13)).

Graduate of Columbia College, class of 1836, and from 1851 to 1865 was librarian of that college. He was educated as a lawyer, but turned his attention to literary pursuits. He was in charge of the literary department of the Churchman under the editorship of the Rev. Samuel Seabury, and in 1841 he wrote for the Church Record a series of articles on the great divines of the Church of England. Besides many articles for periodicals he was the author of several books, viz., the Analyst, Literary Studies, Essays on Authors and Books, and Characters and Criticisms. Mr. Duyckinck, editor of the Literary World, said of him in 1847, "No man has done more through the American periodicals to introduce among unprofessional readers a knowledge of the great minds of the literature of the Church of England than Mr. Jones."

He also published two valuable pamphlets, "The First Century of Columbia College," and "The Library of Columbia College."

(See under Moore family.)

Mr. Moore was born in Southold, L. I., and was a lineal descendant of the first Thomas Moore, who settled there in 1651.

Though brought up as a Presbyterian he never sought to enforce his religious views upon his family, preferring to remain a passive agent and allowing them to follow in that faith so strongly adhered to by his wife and her ancestors, viz., the Prot. Epis. Church.

He came to N. Y. when quite young, and was soon admitted to the Bar. In 1834 he became the law partner of Mr. C. G. Havens, and in 1844 he was associated with Francis B. Cutting, under the firm name of Cutting, Moore & Havens, which finally merged into the firm of Moore, Hand and Bonney, in which firm he remained an active partner until his death in 1893. In his later years he became an indefatigable genealogist, and was a charter member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society. In 1872 he was its corresponding secy., and for the first ten years of its existence "his pen yielded more for its Quarterly Record than any other man." His labors in this line closed only with his death, and it is to him we are indebted for much of this Jones genealogy (see under preface). He was a warm and trusted friend of this family, and especially so of that branch to which his wife belonged. For many years he was their sole legal adviser, and his death was a great loss to them as well as others.

Politically he was a strong Jeffersonian Democrat, but in the struggle for the Union he was a warm supporter of Pres. Lincoln.

No more fitting tribute to his memory can be paid than to quote from the resolutions passed upon at his death by the Havens Relief Fund Society, viz., "His private life was pure, unselfish and irreproachable. As friend and adviser he was loyal and sympathetic, and every trust undertaken by him was discharged as a sacred duty."

(V. 79) JOHN DIVINE JONES, son of John H. (IV. 27); b. Aug. 15, 1814; d. Sept. 22, 1895, at his home in South Oyster Bay, L. I.; m. June 9, 1852, Josephine Katharine, dau. of Maj. General Henry Floyd-Jones, by whom he had no issue.

Mr. Jones was born in the old homestead of his father at Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., built upon land that was at one time in the possession of Maj. Thomas Jones (I. 1), the first ancestor of the family in this country.

His early education was obtained from the public schools of his native place. In 1829, at the age of fifteen years, he went to

N. Y. City and accepted a clerkship in the Atlantic Insurance Co. (commonly designated as the 2d Atlantic Co.), of which his uncle, Walter R. Jones (IV. 30), was then vice-prest. Here was laid the foundation of his future high standing in the mercantile world; here was the beginning of a good and exemplary career.

For several years he lived with his brother-in-law, Mr. C. B. Moore (who later became his legal adviser), employing much of his spare time in attending night schools, and in study. His advancement was rapid. His early letters to his father and the various members of the latter's family are examples of neatness and precision, and from the Christian-like spirit and fairness as evidenced by them in his dealings with the younger members of the family we can readily portray the character of the rising man.

At the death of his father in 1859 the old homestead descended to Mr. Jones, who greatly improved the place and made it his country residence until it was destroyed by fire in 1861. This occurred during the excitement of the Civil War, and as Mr. Jones had many negroes in his employ (descendants of slaves once owned by his father) the destruction of his house was supposed to have been the outcome of various threats of a similar character directed against him and other members of the family. Mr. Jones and his brothers were strong supporters of the Union and had no love for slavery and secession.

Soon after this Mr. Jones made his country residence at South Oyster Bay, L. I., in the house formerly owned by his wife's father, Maj. Genl. Henry Floyd-Jones. Here he continued to reside during the summer months and in it he died.

In 1842 the business of the 2d Atlantic Insurance Co. was transferred to a new company organized on the mutual plan, and in the year following Mr. Jones was chosen its secy., with Walter R. Jones (of the old Atlantic) as prest., and Josiah L. Hale, vice prest. In 1849 Mr. Hale retired, and John D. Jones was elected as 2d vice prest. of the new company (organized under the name of the Atlantic Mutual Ins. Co.), and on 15 Feb., 1854, he became its vice prest.

In 1859, after the death of Walter R. Jones, Mr. Jones became prest., and continued in that office by annual elections until his death in 1895, at which time his relations with the two Atlantic companies embraced a period of sixty-six years. The success of this company was phenomenal, and its officers under Mr. Jones' long administration as president were men of ability and sound business principles.

Mr. Jones died Sept. 22, 1895, widely lamented and mourned, and it is for other pen than mine to speak of his personal characteristics and private life. His funeral took place from old Trinity Church, N. Y. City. The services were conducted by Bishop Littlejohn, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Dix and others. The buildings in Wall St. displayed their flags at half mast, and the U. S. Sub-Treasury lowered its flag during the services. He was interred in Memorial Cemetery, at Cold Spring Harbor, L. I.

We quote from a beautiful tribute to his memory written by C. A. Hand, a personal friend of Mr. Jones:

"The record of the company has, from the beginning, been a proud one, not only by reason of its extraordinary material prosperity, but for the better reason that in its department of national and international commerce it has uniformly upheld the highest standards of equitable and honorable dealing and administration. While the foundations were well laid by Josiah L. Hale and Walter R. Jones, yet the carrying up and maintenance of the superstructure was, to a greater degree, under the wise direction and fostering care of John D. Jones. His policy was broad and enlightened, his sense of justice was clear and unequivocal, his judgment was far-sighted and well balanced, his devotion to trust duty was unflinching, his integrity was unassailable, and his zeal was indefatigable. It was intended that no honest merchant need appeal, beyond the president, to an outside tribunal. No deserving claimant could hope to win favor through underhanded diplomacy. In the light of these salient characteristics of management, so steadily and resolutely upheld for so many years by Mr. Jones and the officers associated with him and the employees selected and disciplined by them, the remarkable success of the company is but the natural result of obvious and adequate causes.

"Beyond the daily routine of business there were, moreover, exceptional emergencies which tested the institution and its control. A notable instance was that of the Civil War, adding, as it did, critical peril of the nation to the ordinary perils of its commerce. The "Atlantic" was a prompt subscriber to the first issue of government bonds for replenishing an empty treasury to enable President Lincoln to meet his extraordinary expenditures. Soon arose the grave and delicate responsibility of so dealing with the hazards of privateers as, consistently with other rights and interests, to shield, in so far as might be, the American merchant marine, not merely from physical destruction but from total disuse occasioned by fear of such destruction. The majority of the underwriting organizations betrayed an inclination to stand aloof from this hazard. Not so with the 'Atlantic.' In company with Capt. Chas. H. Marshall, then one of the trustees, Mr. Jones visited Washington and had full and frank conferences with Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Seward, who welcomed his explanations of the co-relations of American credit and war resources with American commerce. Ascertaining from them that not a single cruiser was, at that moment, available to patrol the main commercial highways, he obtained assurances that this need would be supplied as soon as practicable, and a further assurance that the administration would receive and duly represent claims upon England, for losses inflicted by cruisers issuing from her ports, and for which, as he contended, she ought to be held responsible. Upon the faith of these assurances, Mr. Jones promised that his company would do its full part in sustaining the government by undertaking the risks in question. How faithfully and amply the promise was fulfilled is best shown by the company's record of war risks freely assumed, and of losses promptly paid throughout the period of devastation wrought by the 'Alabama' and 'Shenandoah' and their comrades. How faithfully Mr. Lincoln and his Secy. of State performed their part of the mutual understanding was testified by the receipt of claims and proofs (supplied to a large extent by the company) and by the presentment of and insistence upon them at London. It needs not to be said that these great statesmen were in no wise blamable for the ultimate diversion of proceeds of the claims, long after they had passed from the stage, through misinformation and evil influences prevailing with Congress in its disposition of the fund. And in this connection it would be interesting to trace the substantial although unproclaimed services of Mr. Jones in promoting the final settlement of post-bellum disputes between the two kindred nations, a settlement of infinitely greater consequence than the collection of a sum of money, in that it was a grand precedent for a peaceful arbitrament and in that it established rules of neutral duty and obligation of incalculable benefit to ocean commerce."

While the attention of Mr. Jones to the interests under his immediate care was never relaxed, yet it was not limited to them. He was a member of the Chamber of Commerce, and president of the N. Y. Board of Underwriters for twenty-five years.

The pilot, the wrecking, and the coast life-saving systems are among the affairs of public concern which owe him a heavy debt of gratitude. To the pilots in particular, as a reliable licensed and disciplined force, he was a life long bulwark against adverse legislation as well as against errors of policy on their own part. So with the merchant marine; it is indebted to his foresight and humanity for the nautical school, and its tendency to gradually lift the sailor out of his degradation and to make his calling skilled and properly trained and self respecting.

In all things and always Mr. Jones proved himself to be one of nature's noblemen, true as steel, incorruptible, unselfish and magnanimous, modest and retiring, gentle as a woman, yet inflexible for the right. In the expressive language of Mr. George Bliss (one of the members of the Board of Directors), "He was one of those pure men who always inspired confidence, and of that child-like nature that those who really knew him could not but love him."

In his annual address to the Convention of the Diocese of L. I., May 19, 1896, Bishop Littlejohn paid the following tribute to Mr. Jones:

"The Church at large and the Church in this diocese have suffered less by death than in previous years. Only one of our bishops, and comparatively few leaders among the clergy or laity, have been taken. In the death of the late John D. Jones, and Wm. Floyd-Jones, this diocese has lost two of its most prominent and useful laymen. They belonged to the same parish, Grace Church, Massapequa, and were members of its vestry for more than a generation. For many years John D. Jones was a trustee and the treasurer of our Episcopal Fund. He cared for this fund as he would have cared for a private interest. His constant and most generous gifts to the Archdeaconry of Queens Co. will be sadly missed. To me he was most helpful in emergencies that demanded the ready will and the open hand. He was as much respected and beloved in the business world as in the Church.

Everywhere his name was a sign and pledge of integrity and sagacity that no man ever doubted. He was a man whose strict regard for duty in all the relations of life proved how thoroughly his religion was wrought into his character. His faith, at once simple and sincere, was so much in his life that no one had occasion to ask what he believed. Without question he now dwells in God's holy hill, for he walked uprightly, worked righteousness, spoke the truth from his heart, and did no evil to his neighbor."

Mr. Jones was a member of the Church of the Annunciation of N. Y. City and one of its vestry during the rectorship of the Rev. Dr. Samuel Seabury. He was Junior Warden of the parish from 1853 to 1871, and from that time until his death in 1895 its Senior Warden. He greatly aided in the maintenance of this parish, and was, in fact, its principal supporter. Touching this we quote from an entry made upon the minutes of its vestry at a meeting called by its Rector in regard to the decease of Mr. Jones. "It is natural that those who have had the care of the maintenance of a parish struggling against vicissitudes and burdensome want of means should recur particularly to the bounty of one who was in this respect their chief helper. It would, in the judgment of this vestry, be an injustice to Mr. Jones not to commemorate at this time the fact that without his munificence they would have been unable to maintain the services of the church so long as they were maintained, and they think it only due to say that without his aid the vestry would have been obliged to close its doors thirty years ago."

Of the many positions of trust held by Mr. Jones we can but briefly note: He was one of the founders of the Atlantic Trust Co., and a director of the Citizens' Insurance Co. for twenty-five years. He was also a director of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the U. S. for twenty years, and one of the trustees of the Metropolitan Throat Hospital, an institution that owes its existence mainly to his bounty, and of which he was its first president. He was one of the Board of Managers of the Prot. Epis. Church Missionary Society for Seaman in the City of N. Y., and "liberally contributed to its treasury," his connection with that society as manager covering a period of twenty-seven years.

He alone of all the children of John H. Jones remained at home, and at an early age was taken as a clerk in his father's business at Cold Spring Hbr. His younger brother, William E., returning from N. Y. City, later became a partner with Mr. Jones in their father's business under the name of John H. Jones & Sons. After their father's death in 1859 they continued on the business for many years, but the whaling industry and the woolen mills formerly carried on by them and their father not remaining profitable, the business resolved itself into a large general country store. This proved successful for a while, but the large and extended credits they were forced to give (many of which were never collected) on account of many new competitors in the neighboring villages, caused them to discontinue it in 1867.

Mr. Jones retired to his farm at that place, where he spent the remainder of his life, and his brother, Wm. E., formed a new partnership with his brother-in-law, Walter R. Hewlett. This co-partnership existed for several years, when Mr. Hewlett withdrew, and Mr. Wm. E. Jones was left the last manager of what was once the largest and most extended enterprise in that part of Long Island. At the latter's death, in 1890, the business became a thing of the past, and shortly after the old store of John H. Jones, once the centre of many large industries, was destroyed by fire.

Mr. Jones (the subject of this sketch) was much interested in the affairs of his native place. For several years he was one of the trustees of the Public School, and at the outbreak of the Civil War he was engaged in enlisting men for the army, for the advancement of which he was authorized at a special meeting of the inhabitants of the town of Oyster Bay to borrow certain funds, or to use his own, if necessary, for which the town further agreed to hold itself responsible.

He was a Republican in politics, and for many years was postmaster of his native place. He was a Churchman, and from 1850 until his death in 1898 was one of the vestry of St. John's Prot. Epis. Church.

He went to N. Y. City when a boy as a clerk in the auction house of John Rudderow & Co. This business was originally established by John Broome previous to 1800. Broome was Lieut. Gov. in 1804, and his daughter married in 1806 James Boggs, of Phila., who in 1808 established the house of Boggs & Livingston (Livingston was his brother-in-law), who in 1815 were succeeded by Boggs, Livingston & Thompson, then Boggs, Thompson & Samson, then Thompson & Samson, then Joseph Samson & Co., then John Rudderow & Co., then Rudderow, Jones & Co., then Jones, Underhill & Scudder, then Jones & Underhill, then again Jones, Underhill & Scudder, and finally Underhill & Scudder. It is worthy of note that throughout this long period of successive partnerships, at each change thereof one of the old firm continued in the new.

Mr. Jones became an associate in the business under the firm of John Rudderow & Co., and during his day was considered one of the ablest auctioneers of the city.

He resided at Cold Spring Harbor, and was vestryman of St. John's Church from 1858 to 1869, when he was elected Junior Warden. At the death of Mr. Chas. H. Jones, in 1882, Mr. Jones succeeded him as Senior Warden, and held successively until his death in 1891.

In politics he was a Republican, and at the outbreak of the Civil War was one of a committee of five persons appointed by the town of Huntington to raise the sum of $30,000 for the expenses of procuring its quota of soldiers, and was chairman of the financial committee that controlled the disbursement of the funds so raised. He was one of sixty-two persons who pledged their credit to the amount of $500 each to this fund. (Huntington Town Recds., Vol. 3, p. 474.)

(V. 85) WALTER R. T. JONES was long prominent in American underwriting circles as the leading marine insurance adjuster of the country, whose ancestors settled at South Oyster Bay, now Massapequa, where some of the land acquired by them is still in the hands of their descendants, the country seat of W. R. T. Jones being on this ground. He received his rudimentary education in the Jamaica schools, subsequently taking a course at Columbia College, from which he was graduated in 1850, being a classmate and close friend of F. R. Coudert, afterward destined to attain high eminence as a lawyer, the intimacy thus established continuing throughout his entire life.

It was Mr. Jones' original purpose to adopt the legal profession, with which end in view he prepared himself for the bar, but he never practiced and took up the interests in which he achieved distinction, although it must be conceded that his knowledge of law proved of the fullest value to him in his other field of effort. Making a special study of admiralty law in all its phases, he became the authority on everything pertaining thereto, and had no superior as an expert adjuster of averages in marine losses. He founded the firm of Jones & Whitlock, with offices on Wall street, in New York, and the concern was unquestionably the most representative enterprise of its class in the United States, enjoying a standing, influence and support that placed it foremost among the undertakings of like type. Mr. Jones possessed a natural ability that peculiarly fitted him for the adjusting business, and the accuracy of his findings won him a wide repute as one of the ablest men ever allied with the marine insurance calling. He was a Republican in his political affiliations, but never active as a politician. He was noteworthy as the only man not a practicing lawyer who held membership in the New York Bar Association. He was also a member of the Union League, the University Club, the St. Nicholas Society, the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club, the Downtown Club, the New York Chamber of Commerce, the Shipmasters' Association, the Association of Average Adjusters, and the American Bureau of Shipping. He was treasurer of the American Geographical Society, and governor of the Wawepex Society at Cold Spring Harbor, which was founded by his brother, John D. Jones. He was an attendant at the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Incarnation, New York, and was a gentleman of upright, moral character, richly endowed with intellectual strength, and well deserving of the general regard in which he was so widely held. He visited Europe frequently, and it was one of his pleasant recollections that he had been in London on the occasion of the America winning the Queen's Cup in the first of the international contests for that trophy. He was married in 1854 to Anna Pierson Bailey, daughter of Rear Admiral Theodorus Bailey, of the United States Navy, a gallant officer, whose place in the history of his country is assured by his famous achievement in leading Admiral Farragut's fleet past Fort Jackson and Fort St. Philip during the Civil War. To this marriage were born two children, a son and a daughter, namely, Theodorus B., who was educated at St. Paul's School at Concord, N. H., and who died there in 1879, before he completed his sixteenth year, and Josephine Katherine, who became the wife of Major Charles William Whipple, of the United States Army, an officer well and favorably known for his efficient services in connection with the ordnance department, but who is now retired, five children being the resulting issue as follows: Walter Jones, William, Sherburne, a second lieutenant in the regular service, Annette Bailey, and Eleanor Sherburne. Mr. Jones died at his home in New York City, March 26, 1906.

The Bulletin of the American Geographical Society in an obituary says:

"Mr. Jones possessed rare qualities of mind and heart, yet modesty and simplicity were his chief characteristics. He was wise in counsel and of unswerving integrity; strong in attachments, generous and considerate with his adversaries."

The Association of American Adjusters of the U. S. pay the following high tribute to Mr. Jones in resolutions adopted at the time of his decease:

"The members of this association will miss our friend's sturdy form and kindly personality at their meetings, where he was wont to take part in discussions, and by his large experience and ripe judgement, frequently aided in the solution of difficult questions.

from 1855 until his death in 1890, twenty years of which period he was its secy. and collector.

He resided in the old homestead of his father at Woodbury, L. I., and for several years was Commissioner of Highways. In — he was elected Supervisor of the town of Oyster Bay.

(VI. 76) JOHN HENRY JONES, son of Samuel A. (V. 81); b. Dec. 27, 1851; m. first, Oct. 2, 1879, Nora Jarvis Scudder, b. March 30, 1854; d. June 7, 1886, dau. of Henry G. Scudder, of Huntington, L. I., and his first wife, Eleanor E. Murray, of New Jersey; no issue. (See Scudder family.)

M. 2d, June 18, 1890, Helen Folsom Baker, b. Feb. 4, 1868, dau. of Rev. E. Folsom Baker and his 2d wife, Sarah A. Watson, of Unadilla, N. Y. (See Baker family), by whom he also had no issue.

He received his early education at the schools of his native place (Cold Spring Harbor, L. I.) and in 1866 was sent to Col. Marlborough Churchill's Military Academy at Sing Sing (now Ossining), N. Y., where he remained until 1869, when he went to N. Y. City as a clerk in the office of his uncle, Townsend Jones (V. 82), then of the firm of Jones, Underhill & Scudder, and remained in their employ and in that of their successor, Underhill & Scudder, until the latter's dissolution in 1902, when a new firm was formed under the name of Ladd, Burling & Co., with John H. Jones as a member of the company. In 1904 Mr. Jones withdrew and settled upon his father's place at Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., where he finished the compilation of this Jones genealogy. (See preface.)

(VI. 77) WALTER MOTT JONES, son of Samuel A. (V. 81); b. Sept. 6, 1854; d. Feb. 7, 1902; m. Dec. 4, 1886, Ellen Shepherd Van Cleef, dau. of James Spencer Van Cleef, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and his wife, Harriet Mulford Howell, of Easthampton, L. I. Issue:

VII. 34. Walter Rysam, b. Oct. 7, 1887.

35. Elizabeth Van Cleef, b. June 22, 1889.

36. Esther Mott, b. June 6, 1893.

37. Harriet Howell, b. Dec. 4, 1894; d. June 15, 1896.

His early education was derived from the same schools as that of his brother, John H. In 1872 he accepted a clerkship in the Atlantic Mutual Ins. Co., of N. Y. City, of which his uncle, John D. Jones (V. 79), was then prest. Under the latter's guidance he arose from one official position to another and was finally appointed by him as assistant secy. The duties of this office were faithfully and conscientiously carried out by Mr. Jones, and during the last three years of his life he was, by reason of the illness of the secretary, discharging the duties of that office also. It was the wish of the prest. and of those under him that Mr. Jones might succeed to the secretaryship, but he did not live to see his wishes fulfilled. In 1902 the secy. resigned, and Mr. A. A. Raven, who had in the meantime succeeded Mr. John D. Jones as prest., not favoring the latter's nephew as secretary, handed in to the Board of Directors the name of another, who confirmed the same. This was a terrible disappointment to Mr. Jones and had much to do with the latter's illness and subsequent death. Thus were the wishes of one undone by those of another who had been most befriended by him.

Throughout his long career in the employ of the company Mr. Jones faithfully and honorably discharged the duties incumbent upon him, but an early death cut short a career of untiring energy and devotion in all his business and family relations.

(VI. 80) TOWNSEND JONES, son of Townsend (V. 82); b. May 14, 1854; m. April 30, 1879, Catharine, b. May 21, 1858, dau. of Rev. Robert T. Howard, of Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., formerly of Charleston, S. C., and his wife, Hester M., dau. of Billop Seaman. Issue:

40. Elise Howard, b. Nov. 26, 1886.

41. Marguerite Howard, b. Dec. 31, 1890.

Mr. Jones is a graduate of Columbia College, class of 1876. He studied law in the office of Moore, Hand & Bonney, of N. Y. City, and was soon admitted to the Bar. In 1882, Mr. C. B. Moore withdrawing, he was admitted as the junior partner. Mr. C. A. Hand dying later, his nephew, Augustus N. Hand, took his place, and the business continued under the firm name of Hand, Bonney & Jones.

(VI. 81) JOSHUA THOMAS JONES, son of Townsend (V. 82); b. Sept. 8, 1855; d. Oct. 5, 1905; m. June 16, 1886, Alethea Augusta, dau. of Isaac Labagh, of N. Y. City. No issue.

In 1872 he was in the employ of the Atlantic Mutual Ins. Co. of N. Y. City. In 1879 he was engaged in the manufacture of chemicals in Burlington, Vt., but returned to N. Y. City, where in 1885 he was connected with the Ship Masters' Association. In 1886-1889 he was again connected with the Atlantic Mutl. Ins. Co., but in 1890 resigned and returned to Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., and resided in the homestead of his father.

(VI. 86) WILLIAM EDWARD JONES, son of William E. (V. 83); b. Nov. 10, 1869; d. Nov. 30, 1906. Resided in the old homestead of his father at Cold Spring Harbor, L. I., and was engaged in the real estate business in N. Y. City. At the time of his death he was Warden and Treasurer of St. John's Church, and held several other offices of responsibility and trust in the town in which he resided.

(VI. 88) THEODORUS BAILEY JONES, only son of Walter R. T. (V. 85) ; b. Oct. 10, 1863, and d. at St. Paul's School, Concord, N. H., March 27, 1879, from the effects of a violent fever caused by overexertion in gymnastic exercises. He was an exceptionally bright and promising young man, and his early death was a great loss to the family. He was a great favorite with both teachers and scholars, and stood high in his class, ranking first or second among thirty-three members. His teachers spoke of him as "a young man of pure and tender feeling, and left a high record for one dying on the threshold of life." We quote from a tribute to his memory by the members of his class: "We testify to the honorable and conscientious conduct of our fellow scholar, to his perfect truthfulness, to his pure and unstained life and conversation, and to his loyalty and manliness in all his relations to the school and to his classmates."

FLOYD-JONES FAMILY

OF LONG ISLAND.

David Richard Floyd (8), son of Col. Richard Floyd (5) and his wife, Arabella Jones (III. 4), in pursuance with the will of his grandfather, Judge David Jones (II. 2), and an Act of the Legislature of March 14, 1788, took in addition to his own surname that of Jones, and thereby became known as David Richard Floyd-Jones, the first of the family bearing that double name on Long Island.

(1) DAVID RICHARD FLOYD-JONES, formerly David Richard Floyd (8), b. Nov. 14, 1764; d. Feb. 10, 1826; m. Sept. 20, 1785, Sarah, b. March 26, 1758; d. Feb. 29, 1844, dau. of Hendrick Onderdonk and his wife Phebe, dau. of Col. Benjamin Tredwell. Issue:

2. David Thomas, b. April 25, 1787; d. June 12, 1787.
- +3. Thomas, b. July 23, 1788; d. Aug. 23, 1851; Brig. Genl.
4. Arabella, b. Feb. 6, 1790; d. May 5, 1790.
- +5. Henry Onderdonk, b. Jan. 3, 1792; d. Dec. 20, 1862; Maj. Genl.
6. Andrew Onderdonk, b. Jan. 9, 1794; d. Feb. 11, 1794.

Hendrick Onderdonk, his father-in-law, was of the 3d generation of America, being a son of Andries and his wife, Gertrude Lott. Some of his family supported the American side. He was b. Dec. 11, 1724; d. March 31, 1809. His wife Phebe, whom he m. May 20, 1750, was b. July 12, 1730; d. Dec. 19, 1801.

As David Richard Floyd-Jones' grandfather, Judge David Jones (II. 2), by his will entailed his Fort Neck property in-tail male upon his only son, Judge Thomas Jones (III. 3), and in default of such issue, to his daughter Arabella in tail-male, this David Richard Floyd-Jones (1), by reason of such default, and being the only son of Arabella, became possessed of the large landed estate and enjoyed it during his life.

Shortly after his succeeding to the estate he was admonished by his uncle, Judge Thomas Jones (III. 3) in the following words: "Behave with caution and prudence, and let me beg of you by your conduct never to disgrace the families of your two grandfathers. Always remember, one was first in Queens, the other in Suffolk." That he regarded this advice and lived with probity and honor there is every evidence. He was a faithful churchman, never failing on Sunday mornings to drive ten miles to St. George's Church, at Hempstead, which was his nearest parish church.

(3) BRIG. GENL. THOMAS FLOYD-JONES, son of David R. (1); b. July 23, 1788; d. Aug. 23, 1851; m. Jan. 28, 1812. Cornelia H. Jones, b. April 22, 1796; d. Dec. 29, 1839, dau. of Maj. William Jones (IV. 4). Issue:

- +7. David Richard, b. April 6, 1813; d. Jan. 8, 1871 (the Lieut. Gov.).
- +8. William, b. March 10, 1815; d. Feb. 7, 1896.
- +9. Elbert, b. Feb. 7, 1817; d. Feb. 17, 1901.
- +10. Sarah Maria, b. Dec. 10, 1818; d. Jan. 2, 1892.

He succeeded to the Fort Neck estate on his father's death in 1826, and was the last possessor under the entail created by his great-grandfather, Judge David Jones (II. 2), in 1768. In 1830 the law of entail was abolished, and he became possessed of the whole estate in fee simple. He died in 1851, intestate, and the estate was divided between his four children above named, each one receiving about 1,200 acres of land.

(5) MAJ. GENL. HENRY O. FLOYD-JONES, son of David R. (1); b. Jan. 3, 1792; d. Dec. 20, 1862; m. Helen, b. Nov. 24, 1792; d. July 18, 1872, dau. of Charles Watts, of South Carolina. Issue:

- 11. Sarah, b. Oct. 1, 1818; d. Aug. 10, 1900; unm.
- 12. Henry, b. March 10, 1820; d. Feb. 20, 1849; unm.
- +13. Charles, d. 1874.
- +14. Josephine K., m. John D. Jones (V. 79).
- +15. Edward, b. Jan. 26, 1823; d. Jan. 23, 1901.
- +16. De Lancey, b. Jan. 23, 1826; d. Jan. 19, 1902.
- 17. Helen Watts, b. Dec. 9, 1827; d. July 25, 1855; unm.

In 1829 and 1830 was Member of Assembly from Queens Co., and from 1836 to 1840 was Senator for First District, comprising Long Island, Staten Island, and the City of New York.

(7) LIEUT. GOV. DAVID RICHARD FLOYD-JONES, son of Brig. Genl. Thomas (3); b. at Fort Neck, L. I., April 6, 1813; d. Jan. 8, 1871; m. June 25, 1845, Mary Louisa, b. Aug. 14, 1818, dau. of George W. Stanton, of Albany, N. Y., and his wife Sally, dau. of Theophilus Morgan, of Killingworth, Conn. Issue:

18. Stanton, b. June 11, 1846; d. Feb. 17, 1848.
- +19. George Stanton, b. Dec. 25, 1848.
20. Thomas Richard, b. Dec. 15, 1851; d. Feb. 4, 1857.
21. Mary Louisa, b. Sept. 29, 1853.
22. Henrietta, b. Oct. 22, 1855; d. Nov. 13, 1897.
- +23. Sarah Hall, b. Sept. 18, 1857.
24. Thomas Langley, b. Oct. 7, 1859; d. Aug. 30, 1861.

His early education was obtained at a public school near his father's homestead on Fort Neck. He commenced his classical studies in Christ Church School, Manhasset, L. I., and entered the sophomore class in Union College, Schenectady, where he graduated in 1832. He studied law in the office of Judge Samuel W. Jones (V. 13), of Schenectady, and in 1835 commenced practice in N. Y. City with Jas. P. Howard. In 1840 he began his political career in N. Y. City and prominently identified himself with the Democratic party.

In 1840 to 1842 he was a Member of Assembly from N. Y. City, and from 1844 to 1846 was a member of the State Senate. In 1847 he was appointed Clerk of the Superior Court of N. Y. City by Chief Justice Oakley, which office he held until 1852, when he retired from public life.

In 1857 he again entered public life and represented his native county of Queens in the Assembly. In 1859 he was nominated for the office of Secy. of State, and after being unanimously ratified by the State Convention at Utica was elected to that office.

At the outbreak of the Civil War he took a decided stand against the Southern States, and in a speech made by him on July 4, 1862 (then printed), he set forth his views upon the crisis in strong and unmistakable words.

State of N. Y., "The duties of which he discharged with unswerving devotion to the Union."

One who had known him intimately in public life, and was a political opponent, spoke of him in the following manner in the House shortly after his death: "He passed through life from the beginning to the end of it, I believe, without a single blemish upon his reputation or standing before the entire community of this State. No man in the heat of party strife or conflict, no man in the heat of debate upon the floor in either branch of the Legislature, was ever heard to say aught against his pure and upright character, and no man who watched him can say aught than that he worked with his whole heart and soul for the benefit of those who had placed him in position."

He was a devout churchman, and, quoting from an article in the Church Journal of 1871, "His influence and usefulness in the councils of the Church need no other record than the important positions which he filled in the Diocese of N. Y. previous to its recent division, and subsequently in the Diocese of Long Island. In the new diocese his important services were immediately recognized and acknowledged at its Primary Convention by his being elected a member of the Standing Committee, a deputy to the General Convention, and also a deputy to the Federal Council. He was appointed on the Special Committees on Canons, and on the Revision of the Constitution and Canons. in both of which he served with marked ability.

"As a churchman he has left his record, 'read and known of men.'"

Every early settler of Long Island should have on record a full and authentic account of himself and family. His descendants will take especial interest in it. By intermarriages these may extend into many families and be very numerous. His account may largely aid others, and will be read by many students, and all combined are needed to make out a thorough and reliable general history. The family origin of each in the old country aids to a correct general view, but is remote and cannot be expected with certainty nor in much detail.

The Jones family emanating from Wales was numerous in England before the emigration to America. The Welsh origin and English cultivation, which bore their own marks in the Long Island family, need no other verification. The Welsh retain personal types and training with local and family customs fully as long as any other race. A similar mode of reasoning justifies us in taking some notice of prominent persons of Welsh descent and English training bearing the same name in England.

Those of the legal profession, viz., one named William and one named Thomas, are most attractive for an introduction to the history of several American lawyers and judges. The lawyer, Thomas Jones, who became an M. P., sergeant-at-law, Knight, Judge of K. B. and C. J. of C. P., deserves notice historically, though he may not have been the immediate ancestor of any early settler of Long Island. He was rather the cotemporary of the earliest settlers of New England. Born about 1614, in the reign of King James, he lived through an exciting and eventful period until May, 1692. As reported, he was the second son of Edward Jones, of Sandford in Shropshire, adjoining Wales, by his wife Mary, daughter of Robert Powell, Esq., of that county. His descent was traced by the Welsh Heralds from a period earlier than the Conquest, but upon that we need not rely.

Of the Powell family we may read a little in the life of Milton. It was numerous, and from Wales, and it was early on Long Island.

Roger Jones became an alderman of London, and was wealthy in the time of King James, and, attaining property in Ireland, he sent his son Thomas to flourish there. We suspect him a relative.

In 1629 (at the age of 15) Thos. Jones entered college, and at the same time had his name entered at Lincoln's Inn, in London, as a law student, then a common course with the ambitious to secure a precedence. The early care taken of him is noteworthy. He had profited by a free school at Shrewsbury to prepare for this, and probably the success of Judge William enticed him. In 1632 he graduated as A. B. In 1634 he was called to the Bar, and then for some years we have no account of him. But of the "ill-fated" period embracing the agitations, etc., which preceded the evil war and the convulsions of it, we can read. His brother (not named), as reported, was Recorder of Shrewsbury, and from the Bench declared him "well affected" to the Parliament, and was chosen "Town Clerk" by the Parliamentary party, from which office he was dismissed before the Restoration. The first distinct account we have of the future judge is that he was elected to fill up the old House of Commons dispersed by Cromwell, just before the return of Charles II. to England. and it is further stated that Sir Edward Hyde, son of Judge Nicholas Hyde, a lawyer, afterwards the first Earl of Clarendon, wrote letters from abroad, where he was the advisor of Charles II., to his friends in England, requesting them to get elected, of which letters this Thomas Jones received one. In 1669 he was Knighted and made a serjeant-at-law. In 1671 he was prosecuting officer for the King. He is not supposed related to Col. John, the regicide. In 1676 he was appointed associate Judge of the King's Bench. In 1680 he was impeached with Scroggs for irregularly stopping a prosecution of Duke James by dismissing a grand jury, etc., but Parliament was soon prorogued and the proceedings were not renewed.

In 1685 he would not declare to James II. in favor of his kingly claim of a general power to dispense with statute law or to dispense with the law as settled by the courts.

In 1686 he was dismissed and retired to private life.

In 1689, under William of Orange, it was apprehended that he was using his influence in favor of James II. against William of Orange, and was committed to prison by the House of Commons. He died in 1692 and was buried in St. Alkmund's Church, Shrewsbury.

Foss, in his "Lives of the Judges," gives only a slight account of his family and states that he married Jane, dau. of Daniel Bernard, of Chester. In Le Neve's Knights, p. 269 (which may be doubtful), he states that of his sons, the first, William,* married 1st, a daughter of Andrew Floyd, of Ashton, Co. Silop, and 2d. Grace, daughter of Peter Pindar, and that he had a daughter Mary (not traced), and a son Thomas, who was living in 1705, but no marriage nor children of this Thomas were mentioned. If he was abroad that would be a good excuse for not reporting his family. The 2d son, Thomas, married Jane, daughter of Wilkinson, of Kirkbred, Yorkshire, and had issue: Charles (not the Earl of Ranelagh), Grace, Jane and Elizabeth. Capt. Daniel, the third son, was Capt. of Windsor Castle, but no marriage nor children are mentioned. Edward, the 4th son, was Prebendary of Windsor, and Sub-Dean. He married a daughter of the Rev. Dr. Fulham, and as Foss says, "From this Edward descended Catharine, daughter of Rev. John Jones, who married Capt. John Tyrwhett." (See 1 Burke's Commoners.)

Another (or possibly the same) clergyman, Edward Jones, attracts attention in another line. He was appointed Bishop of Cloyne, in Ireland, and in 1692, when William of Orange would soon reach and disturb the prelates of James, was translated from Cloyne to be Bishop of St. Asaph's, in England, to succeed Bishop Wm. Lloyd. The diocese of St. Asaph's was in Wales. Bishop Jones was tried on charges in 1699. Burnett says that the Bishop of that diocese generally named the clergyman for parishes. The charge against Jones related to his receiving rewards from clergymen for promoting them. It was a time of great struggling for places between different sets of clergy. The old Bishops were required to swear allegiance to William and Mary, and upon refusal, excluded. In Ireland the Bishops had received a share of the tithes or other payments collected in a parish; he might say,

*See letter in appendix concerning Sir Wm. Jones, by Sarah Van Deusen Merritt.

"why not in Wales?" We have little of his history. It seems he left issue. If he left a son or relative Thomas, in Ireland, would not the latter, of course, resist William of Orange? These accounts do not mention daughters of the Judge (Thomas Jones), nor have we trace of any. But one of the twelve sons of Sir Thos. Littleton (member of Parliament in 1642), by report married a daughter of Judge Jones, and died in America. (1. . . . Bar. 322.) If his wife was a daughter of this Judge, the movements of the Lyttletons would aid in an understanding of the Judge's family. (MSS. C. B. Moore.)

Constantine Lyttleton, son of Sir Thomas, died in Jamaica in the West Indies, Dec. 31, 1662. (See 7 Coll. Peer, 445 and 450.)

Sir Charles, another son, early took arms and was in Colchester when it surrendered. He escaped to France and returned to England in 1659. He was praised by Sir Ed. Hyde, and was sent to Jamaica (and succeeded Lord Windsor as Governor), where he rebuilt the town of Port Royal after its destruction. We note that Major Thomas Jones (I. 1) was, by report, in Port Royal at the time of its destruction. (J. H. J., VI. 76).

Letter of Sara A. Van Deusen Merritt relative to Sir William Jones of London.

Mr. J. H. Jones,

Dear Sir: I greatly regret that I cannot give you any information concerning the Joneses excepting that my grandmother, Arabella Jones Gale, was distinctly related to Sir Wm. Jones, of London, Eng., and to some of the Joneses of Babylon, Long Island.

An engraving fac-simile of the statue erected to Sir William, in St. Paul's Cathedral, London, was sent to some of those in America who were "related by blood" was the wording. My grandmother received one. I am exceedingly desirous of ascertaining how I am related to Sir William, and I hope you will be able to inform me. My cousin, Arabella Clark Bucklin, now in her eighty-sixth year, told me that a Gale or a Jones married a De Lancey. She thought he was a brother of the De Lancey who was Provincial Governor of New York. I will just add that I am the only surviving one of fourteen children of my parents, Dr. and Mrs. Jacob Lansing Van Deusen.

Yours sincerely,

SARAH VAN DEUSEN MERRITT.

273 Clinton Ave.

Arabella Jones Gale, above named, was a granddaughter of Judge David Jones (II. 2), through his daughter Anna, the wife of Dr. John Gale.

A D D E N D A

Since the untimely and lamented death of Mr. John H. Jones, the undersigned has had correspondence with Mrs. Sara A. Van Deusen Merritt, and has received from her a dainty little volume from the Knickerbocker Press, written by her for private circulation entitled, "My Mother's Girlhood."

From this, and from her letters to me, I have taken what relates to Sir William Jones.

Had Mr. Jones lived longer, he might have found here a clue to the relationship of Sir William, with the Jones family; and with his energy and untiring perservance he might have traced the parentage and early history of Maj. Thomas Jones (1).

A few words about Mr. John H. Jones seem to be due to him, and may be of interest to those members of the family who did not know him.

An acquaintance with him of more than twenty years, and during the last ten years of his life an intimate acquaintance with him, gave me the opportunity of knowing him well.

He was in the first place a man of strict integrity, and independence of thought and action, and religiously conscientious, and he was a man of fine literary tastes. He was a friend to those in the humble stations of life, generous to a fault, sympathetic, just, and fearless.

It was characteristic of him, when he once said: "I would like to be rich enough to give a man ten dollars when he asked for one."

His last illness was induced, probably, by his unselfish work for others, by which his strength was overtaxed.

For several years he had been an active and useful vestryman in the parish of his father and forefathers; and he had the same love and loyalty for that church which he has chronicled as a peculiar trait of his ancestors.

Requiescat In Pace.

At an early age the mother of Sara A. Van Deusen, and the daughter of Sanford and Arabella (Jones) Clark, was sent to the classical school at Goshen, N. Y., of which at one time Noah Webster, the lexicographer, was the preceptor.

In this place she had "kinsfolk living," with whom she spent Saturdays and Sundays.

In the little book of her "girlhood" she says: "One great source of pleasure to me, on Saturdays, was reading and re-reading old letters of wh' my kinsfolk had several packets, many of them more than a hundred years old." * * * * *
 "I was especially interested in the ones wh' had been written by the DeLanceys, who were kinsfolk of my mother's family, the Jones." * * * * * "My kinsfolk had also a small packet of letters written by Sir William Jones, letters he had written to his kinsfolk during the time he was Judge of the Supreme Court in Bengal, India. He was a very intelligent man, and also a great linguist, speaking and writing in more than twenty languages. For translating Hindu and Mohammedan law, morals, religion, etc., he was knighted by King George III. He was not only distinguished for learning, my kinsfolk told me, but also for his sincere piety." * * * * * "The Most Honorable East India Company erected a life-size statue to his memory in St. Paul's Cathedral, London; and a monument in Bengal where he died." * * * * "A facsimile of the statue erected in St. Paul's Cathedral had been sent to 'those living in America who were related to Sir William by blood,' was the wording. My kinsfolk at Goshen received one, and also my mother. That engraving was burned in a fire which destroyed the house and nearly all its contents. In the house at the time there was an old mahogany desk, wherein in a secret drawer were valuable legal documents, old letters, and the engraving of the statue of Sir William."

In this little book from which these quotations are taken, Dinah, the old family servant, is made to say to the mother of the writer of it: 'You are a good child Miss Nancy, and so is Miss Katherine, but neither of you will ever be just like your mother in this wide world.' * * * * "But your blessed mother! Why I heard Aaron Burr say that your mother, 'Madam Clark' he called her, was the most queenly mannered lady he had ever known. I heard him say that with my own ears."

INSCRIPTION ON THE STATUE IN ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.

"To the memory of Sir William Jones, Knight. One of the Judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature at Port William in Bengal.

This statue was erected by the Most Hon. East India Company in testimony of their grateful sense of his public services, their admiration of his genius and learning, and their respect for his character and virtues.

He died in Bengal, Apr. 27th, 1774, aged 47. (John Bacon, R. A. Sculpture in 1777)." (Sic.)

In one hand of the statue is a book, and on it is:

"Translations of Die.
Institutes of Menu."

In the other hand, hanging by his side, is a map, which has on it:

"Plans of the Asiatic Society."

It is unfortunate that the letter which came with the engravings has been lost.

Mrs. Merritt writes that none of her "kinsfolk" at Goshen are now living.

It is evident that the one who wrote the letter accompanying the engraving of the statue knew the relationship between Sir William Jones and Maj. Thomas Jones.

Why these engravings were sent to the "kinsfolk" living in Albany and Goshen, and none to those living on Long Island is a mystery which will probably never be solved.

WILLETT FAMILY OF RHODE ISLAND

(1) CAPT. THOMAS WILLETT, of Plymouth, Mass., later the first Mayor of New York City, came to this country

* Mary, wife of (1) Richard Willetts, according to Bunker L. I. Genealogies, was dau. of Wm. and Jane Washburn. (See also Ancestry of Adam and Anne Mott, p. 238.)

earlier than any of his name. Born in 1610, he was in Plymouth, Mass., in 1632, where in 1633 he m. Mary, dau. of John Brown, of Leyden.

It is not possible to connect him with any of the variously spelled families of that name.

He was one of the Commissioners who represented the Dutch in the Hartford Treaty of 1650, between the English and Dutch on L. I. (See under Maj. Thos. Jones (I. 1.) He d. 4 Aug., 1674, leaving issue thirteen children by his first wife, Mary. (Carpenter Genealogy, p. 63), and (Ancestry of Adam and Anne Mott.)

(2) ANDREW WILLETT, son of Capt. Thomas (1); b. 5. Oct., 1655; d. 6 April, 1712. Settled in R. I. He m. 30 May, 1682, Ann, b. 1663, dau. of Gov. Wm. Coddington, of R. I. Issue:

3. Francis, m. Mary, dau. of Francis Taylor, of Jamaica, L. I.

4. Thomas, b. 1696; d. 1725.

5. Martha, m. Simon Pearse, of R. I.

6. Ann, m. Joseph Carpenter, son of Joseph, of Oyster Bay, L. I. No issue.

7. Mary, b. 21 Feb., 1690; m. 1711, Joseph Carpenter (who had married her sister Ann) and had issue nine children, one of whom, Ann, b. 24 Sept., 1716; d. 1803. m. 1737, Samuel Underhill (grandson of Capt. John and his wife Helena), and had with other issue, a dau. Mary, b. 31 Jan., 1745, who m. 1765, James Mott.

(8) SAMUEL WILLETT, youngest child of Capt. Thomas (1); b. 22 Oct., 1658. Sheriff of Queens Co.

(9) EDWARD WILLETT, eldest son of Samuel (8); b. 1701; d. 1794; m. Aletta, dau. Samuel Clowes, of Jamaica, L. I.

(10) COL. MARINUS WILLETT, son of Edward (9); b. 31 July, 1740, in Jamaica, L. I. Mayor of N. Y. City, 1807.

This descent (through Edward (9), Samuel (8), Capt. Thomas (1), has been questioned by some (see Mail & Express inquiries Nos. 225, 282, 398, etc.), but his son, Wm. M. Willett, who in 1831 wrote a "Narrative of His Father's Military Operations," gives the descent as above.

VAN WYCK FAMILY

(1) CORNELIUS BARENTSE VAN WYCK emigrated to this country from Wyck, near Teck, Holland, in 1660, and settled in Flat Lands, L. I.; m. Anna, dau. of Rev. Theodorus Polhemus and Catharine Van Werven. Riker claims that he m. a second wife, Jannetje, in 1684, which we must treat as an error, as the baptismal records of his two youngest daughters read "dau. of Anna." Issue:

In 1855 he was appointed Captn., and a little later commissioned as Commodore. In 1862 he was in command of the Gulf blockading squadron with the rank of Acting Rear Admiral, and was second in command at New Orleans under Admiral Farragut, when he was sent to demand the surrender of New Orleans. In his official report of that victory he wrote, "It was a contest of iron hearts in wooden vessels against iron clads with iron beaks; and the iron hearts won." On 25 July, 1866, he received his commission as Rear Admiral, and in 1876 was placed upon the retired list, his death occurring soon after.

On 5 Dec., 1899, at the launching of the torpedo boat destroyer named the "Bailey," in honor of the Admiral, his family presented that boat with a loving cup bearing the following inscription:

"In honor of Rear Admiral Theodorus Bailey, born 1805, died 1877, who in peace or war for fifty-nine years so gallantly served in the navy of our land, this cup is dedicated.

"In the U. S. S. Cayuga he led the fleet of Admiral Farragut through the fire of forts Jackson and St. Philip and opposing vessels, April 24, 1862."

(Then follows his memorable words quoted above.)

RYSAM FAMILY

(1) CAPT. WILLIAM JOHNSON RYSAM, b. 1734, d. in Sag Harbor, L. I., 1806. It is not known when he first came to this country. His earliest identification here is found in the records of the Fourth Church, of Portsmouth, N. H., where on 26 Dec., 1773, three of his daughters, viz., Mary, Nancy and Phanny, were baptized by the Rev. Samuel Haven.

During the Rev. War he was in command of a privateer named the "British Queen," and by report made his headquarters at Norfolk, Va., where his two youngest daughters, Hanna Frippe, and Sophia, were born. His first wife, the mother of his children, was Ursula, dau. of Thomas Pierce, of Portsmouth, N. H. On 8 Oct., 1777, Mrs. Rysam, then in Portsmouth, was permitted "under a flag of truce" to go with her husband to Rhode Island, and in the following year his name was included in an Act of Legislature of N. H.. "as one who had left the State and joined the enemy." In 1780 his property in Portsmouth was "sett off" or confiscated. (See N. H. State Papers, VIII., p. 703-850.)

He was a strong Tory, and at the burning of Norfolk, Va., by the British in 1779, he, his wife and five daughters (the youngest, Sophia, being then eight months old) were forced to leave. He made his escape on his vessel, but was intercepted by the Americans who, finding nothing contraband on board, allowed them to depart.

He landed in Rhode Island, and soon after left for East Hampton, L. I., where he arrived in 1780, when by report his youngest daughter, Sophia, was fifteen months old, and his eldest daughter, Mary, was fifteen years of age. It is supposed he crossed L. I. Sound and landed on Lloyds Neck, where the British had their headquarters under Col. Oliver De Lancey, and proceeded overland to his destination. This seems evident from the fact that during his journey there his wife died from exposure and was buried in the "Old Cemetery" at Huntington, L. I. He married in Easthampton, L. I., as his 2d wife "the widow Mulford," by whom he had no issue. He died there in 1806 leaving five daughters who, as tradition says, "not being pleased with their father's will, burned it up." Issue:

2. Mary, b. 1765; m. Col. Abraham Miller; no issue.
3. Nancy, m. first, Jabez Peck; issue, a daughter, Fanny R., b. 1792, d. 12 April, 1849; m. Jonathan Gardiner, of Eatons Neck, L. I. (his 2d wife), who had with others a dau., Eliza Gardiner, b. 1815, m. Charles H. Jones (IV. 34). She, Nancy (3), m. 2d, Archibald Gracie, of N. Y., and had issue, Mary, William and Archibald.
4. Fanny, m. Edward Mulford.
5. Hannah, m. Cornelius Sleight
6. Sophia, b. 1778; m. — Sayre.

HEWLETT FAMILY

CREST:—An owl's head erased and affronté arg. ducally gorged or.

Family tradition states that "George Hewlett, the first of his name in America, was a judge of the Court under Cromwell's Commonwealth who refused allegiance to Charles II. and fled to America with his four sons, Daniel, George, Lewis and John. They settled at Merrick, on the south side of L. I., where Daniel, the eldest son, succeeded to the homestead and left five sons and three daughters. George settled on Great Neck, L. I., and left three sons and two daughters. Lewis settled on Cow Neck, and left two sons and five daughters, and John settled at Rockaway and left two sons and four daughters, and from this John are descended all the Hewletts of L. I."

Another tradition recites that "George Hewlett came to L. I. with his brothers John and Lewis, and settled on Riker's Island, but were driven away by the Indians to L. I., where, excepting George, all died without issue." Thompson's L. I. states he "married the widow of Guisbert Riker," but of this we can find no proof.

There were many Hewletts in the New England Colonies at any early period. One Thomas went to Ipswich, Mass., with John Winthrop, Jr., in 1633. (Shurtliff's Mass. Hist. Recds. 1, p. 103). Another, one William, came to Virginia in 1635, æ 19, from London. (Hotton's Original Lists.)

In 1664 Gov. Wm. Coddington came from Rhode Island to Monmouth Co., N. J., bringing with him George Hulate, "then in his employ." Gov. Coddington returned to R. I., and Hulate became one of the early settlers of Monmouth Co., N. J. In 1675 warrants were issued to the proprietors for the location of their lands, and George Hewlett and his wife's share was 240 acres. (Salter's Monmouth Co.)

Austin's Gene. Dictionary of R. I. states that his wife was Mary, b. 1647, dau. of Robert Taylor of R. I. The N. J. Archives, Vol. 1, p. 51, name him on 27 Feb., 1667, as then living in Navesink. By one account he had a dau. Elizabeth, who in 1694 m. Geo. Allen, of Shrewsbury.

We cannot identify him as the first George Hewlett, of L. I., but believe him to be a near relative.

An early Louis Hewlett (claimed by the compiler of the Peters Gene. to have been the ancestor of the Long Island family) came to New Amsterdam from Buckinghamshire, Eng. In 1644 he was ordered by the Dutch to prove that one Jas. Bier was his servant. (Trans. Dutch MSS., Albany, Vol. IV., Part 1, p. 199.) On 15 Aug., 1646, he m. Helena Appelgate, widow of Thos. Farrington. (N. Y. Gene. & Biog. Rec. 6, p. 37. Reeds. New Amsterdam, Vol. 1, p. 235.) This was his 2d wife. He m. 3d, 1648 (according to Peters Gene., p. 9) — Marwyn, of Eng., and had issue: Jane, m. Adam Mott; John, Lewis and George, the latter of whom by the same authority is identified as the first George Hewlett, of Hempstead, L. I., who m. Mary Bayles. This we must regard as an error, as the first George of Hempstead was born in 1634 and could not have been a son of Louis, at least by his 3d marriage.

JENNE HULET, of Buckingham, Eng. (prob. dau. of Louis, above named), m. 28 July, 1647, Adam Maet (so spelled), meaning Mott of Essex, Eng. (N. Y. Gene. & Biog. Rec. 6, p. 37.) (See under Lieut. Adam Mott (1).)

(1) GEORGE HEWLETT, of Hempstead, L. I., ancestor of the Long Island Hewletts, b. 1634, d. 1722; m. 1680, Mary b. 1654 d. 1733, dau. of John and Rebecca Bayles, of Jamaica, L. I. She is named in her father's will dated 18 Oct. 1682, Liber 1, p. 451. N. Y. City. (See N. Y. Gene. & Biog. Rec. 4, p. 199.)

He and his wife Mary were buried in the "Old Town Burying Ground" at Hempstead. Their headstones are simply marked G. H. 1722. M. H. 1733, æ. 78.

MOTT FAMILY

The ancestors of the Mott family in this country came over at a very early period, and many bearing that name are to be found in the early New England records.

John Mott, the ancestor of the family in England, came with the "Conqueror" from La Motte in Normandie, and his descendants settled in Essex and Cambridge, Eng. From them we are told "came the ancestors of all the Motts in this country." (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec., Vol. XX., p. 34.) Talcott's Gen. Notes of New England cites an early John Mott of England and many descendants, but no particulars.

Gov. Winthrop, of Massachusetts, in a letter to his son John (then living in England), dated 9 Oct., 1629, writes: "I have sent down all the late news from New Eng. I would have some of you read it to your mother, and let forth out the observations, and all that follows the ~~rest~~ and the letter in the end and show it Mr. Mott." (See Chronicles of the First Planters of Col. of Mass., by Alden Young, p. 264; Savages Ed. of Winthrop's New Eng., Vol. I., p. 361.)

In another letter of his, to his wife, under date of 16 July, 1630, he writes: "Commend me heartily to all our friends . . . remember me to them at Codenham Hall . . . Mr. Alston, Mr. Mott and their wives." etc. (Savage's Ed. of 1825 of Winthrop's New Eng., Vol. I., p. 373.)

The Mr. Mott alluded to was probably Thomas Mott, who was one of the 42 adventurers who signed the agreement with Isaac Allerton (the agent of the Mass. Bay Colony) on 15 Nov., 1626, whereby the sum of £1,800 was advanced the Colonists with conditions. (Bradford's Letter Book in First Mass. Hist. Coll., Vol. III., p. 48.)

It is inferred that he did not come to this country, but was instrumental in the immigration of and closely related to Adam Mott, who came in the ship "Defense" on 2 July, 1635, and in 1636 was freeman in Ipswich, Mass. This Adam Mott was probably one of the twelve men who founded the plantation of Agawan (after called Ipswich) under Gov. Winthrop's brother John. Of these twelve men nine are mentioned by Winthrop, viz.: Robert Coles, clerk, John Briggs, John Sage, Thomas Hewlett, Thomas Hardy, Wm. Perkins, — Thorn-dike, Wm. Sargeant. (Winthrop's New Eng., Ed. 1852, Vol. I., p. 101.)

Of these, Robert Coles was the ancestor of the Coles family of Long Island, and Thomas Hewlett, was probably a near relative of the early George Hewlett of Long Island, and we think a brother to Jane Hewlett (of Essex, Eng.), the first wife of Adam Mott ("the first") of Hempstead, L. I.

Following closely upon the Puritan exodus from Great Britain to New England, came the ship "Defense" on 2 July, 1635, with Thos. Bostwick as master, having among its passengers Adam Mott (the one just alluded to) and Sarah, his wife, with five children; or in the words of the ship's manifest—"a taylor Adam Mott, 39 years old; uxor, Sarah Mott, 31 years, Jo., 14 years, Adam, 12 years, Jonathan, 9 years, Elizabeth, 6 years, and Mary, 4 years."

He landed in New England, and "bro't testimony from the justices and ministers of Cambridge that he had taken the oaths of allegiance, and had also acknowledged his conformity to the discipline and orders of the Church of England." (Hotton's Original Lists, p. 99.)

In 1636 he had land granted him in Hingham, Mass. (New Eng. Hist. & Gen. Reg., Vol. II., p. 251), and in the latter part of that year he and his wife were members of the first church at Roxbury. His Church of England views soon got him into trouble, and in 1683 he was ordered to be brought before the Governor, in charge of the constable of Hingham. (Mass. Col. Rec., Vol. I., p. 241.) Two years later he removed to Portsmouth, R. I., where on 2^d of 11 mo., 1638, he was admitted as a freeholder (Col. Rec., R. I., Vol. I., p. 63) at a meeting then held by the General Assembly of the Colony. There were eleven members present besides Adam Mott, and rules were enacted for their government, one of which was "that the judge with the elders shall rule and govern according to the general rule of the word of God, and when they have no particular rule from God's word; by the body proscribed as a direction unto them in the case." Roger Williams sought refuge here two years previous. Quakers were tolerated, and one might have whatever religious views he saw fit.

Even here he seems to have hesitated about settling, for he was soon ordered to build on land granted him in 1638 within six months, or the land would be disposed of by the company. (Col. Rec., R. I., Vol. I., p. 59.)

In 1638 he and his eldest son John were admitted "to be inhabitants of the island of Aqueedneck (now Rhode Island). He seems now to have fully determined to settle in Portsmouth, R. I., and on 12 of 1 mo., 1640, at a session of General Court of Newport, he desired to be reunited to that body and "was readily embraced by it."

In 1665 he, and his sons Adam, Jr., John and Jonathan, appear on a roll of freeman at Portsmouth.

Austin in his Gen. Dict. of R. I., has given us an account of some of Adam Mott's descendants for several generations.

This Adam Mott left a son Adam, 2d, whom Austin says m. 1647 Mary Lott, and d in Portsmouth in 1673.

Many conflicting statements have been made concerning this Adam Mott, 2d. Thompson's L. I., Vol. II., p. 57, says his first wife was Phebe, and that he removed to Hempstead, L. I., in 1665. Savage, Vol. III., p. 247, states his wife was Mary, but does not claim he removed to Long Island. Bolton's Westchester Co. copies Thompson, while Scharf in his Hist. of West. Co., Vol. I., p. 830, inserts an article written by Wm. S. Pelletreau of L. I., wherein it is claimed that both Adam the 1st, and his son Adam 2d, of Rhode Island, settled and died upon Long Island.

All this we must treat as an error, as no records can be found to show that the first Adam Mott of Hempstead was in any way connected with the Motts of Rhode Island, and furthermore the late Thos. C. Cornell of Yonkers, N. Y., in his "Ancestry of Adam and Anne Mott," states "that neither Adam, 1st, or his son Adam, 2d, ever came to Hempstead, and that they and their marriages and children can be traced in Massachusetts and Rhode Island till long after the Adam Mott of Hempstead settled there."

LIEUT. ADAM MOTT (1).

Ancestor of the Long Island family of that name, came from Essex, Eng., and is probably the Adam who emigrated in the ship "Bevis" in 1638, then aged 19 years, and by profession a taylor. As a possible relative of the Motts of New England, he may have followed them there and perhaps was in Rhode Island where the Indian wars not suiting his fancy, he returned to New Amsterdam where under Gov. Kieft's administration lands were granted to many of the New England immigrants.

In 1644 and 1645 he was a witness in the Shepens and Burgomasters Court in New Amsterdam. (See trans. of Dutch Mss. Vol. II., pp. 236-270; Vol. III., pp. 24-265, Albany, N. Y.)

On 23 Aug., 1646, Gov. Kieft granted him a patent for 25 morgans of land (50 acres) on the west side of Mespatches Kills (now Newtown Creek, L. I.), opposite the plantation of Richard Brundel. (Doc. Rel. to Col. Hist., N. Y., Vol. XIV., p. 66.)

In the year following this grant, he m. on 28 July, 1647, in the Dutch Church of New Amsterdam, Jane, dau. of Lewis Hulett of Buckingham, Eng., which record recites that neither had been previously married. (N. Y. Gen. & Biog. Rec., Vol. VI., p. 37.) See under Lewis Hewlett.

This grant of land he soon conveyed to one Wm. Golding, but continued to reside in New Amsterdam where he was engaged in trading, and also as an agent for Richard Smith, as late as 1651. (See Trans. Dutch Mss., Albany, N. Y.)

In 1656, he removed to town of Hempstead, L. I., and settled in the village of that name, where he was probably living when chosen townsman on 17 March, 1657. Feb. 4, 1663, he was one of the commissioners who signed the agreement between John Scott, president of the English towns of Long Island, and Gov. Stuyvesant to provide for the free intercourse between the inhabitants under the Dutch and the English. (Doc. Rel. to Col. Hist., N. Y., Vol. XIV., p. 544.)

April 22, 1665, he was commissioned by Gov. Richard Nicolls as Lient. of the Hempstead Militia. (Liber. 2, p. 26, Conveyances, Sec'y of State's Office, Albany.)

He m. 2d about 1667, Elizabeth, dau. of Ann Parsons, wife of John Richbell of Westchester Co., by her first husband, — Redman. (Descendants of Adam Mott by E. D. Harris.)

On 23 April, 1669, John Richbell conveyed to John Ryder of N. Y. City, certain lands in Mamaroneck for the support of his present wife Anne, after his decease, etc. It recites that his marriage with her had long since been solomenized. (Liber., 4, p. 1, Deeds, Office of Sec'y of State, Albany.)

Adam Mott's will, dated 12 March, 1681, prob. at Queens Co., April 8, 1690. On 5 April, 1690, his estate was inventoried and valued at £182.9.6. This will was recorded in N. Y. City, Liber., 3 & 4, p. 129, and as no executor was named, the widow, Elizabeth was appointed administratrix by Gov. Leisler, May 12, 1690.

On Sept. 25, 1691, Adam Mott (the oldest son) was also appointed administrator on the estate, his petition reciting that his father had died intestate. (See Calendar Hist. Mss., part II., p. 217; Liber. 3 & 4, p. 285, N. Y. City.) Then on p. 292, Letters of Administration were granted to Elizabeth Mott, widow, and Adam Mott, eldest son of Adam Mott of Hempstead, reciting "that since Adam Mott appeared for administration and same was granted him, the said Elizabeth has produced a codicil of the same, and the witnesses being present, etc., etc., do grant to said Adam and Elizabeth administration, and any grant formerly made to said Adam to the contrary notwithstanding," dated at Fort Wm. Henry, 30 Oct., 1691. Then on p. 294 is recorded the codicil (so called) which in all respects is same as the one recorded on p. 129, and was again proved before Richard Ingolsby, 30 Oct., 1691.

Lieut. Adam Mott in his will describes himself as "about sixty years of age," this places the date of his birth in 1620, which coincides with the birth of Adam Mott of the ship "Bevis." In 1670, Jan. 28, he purchased land of Henry Disbrowe on Madnans Neck (Great Neck), L. I., that was formerly in the possession of Capt. John Seaman, and settled there soon after.

He d. prior to April, 1690, and his widow Elizabeth m. in 1691, Robert Hubbs of Mad Nans Neck.

Much controversy arose between Elizabeth Hubbs and her "son-in-law Adam Mott, Jr.," as she calls him, concerning her late husband's will, but on 5 Nov., 1691, an agreement was entered into which recites that "the will of her deceased husband Adam Mott shall stand good, etc., etc., in all particulars hereinafter mentioned, etc., etc." This was signed by Elizabeth Hubbs, and her son Richbell Mott (Mott Family Mss.). This agreement gave Adam Mott, "the elder" son, lands on Mad Nans Neck not bequeathed him under the will, which he conveyed on 12 April, 1694, to "the children his deceased father had by his last wife Elizabeth being six in number." (Queens Co. Conveyances, Liber., B, p. 114.)

On 28 June, 1696, Mary Anna Mott, one of the six children named ("then being of full age"), released her rights under the will to her brothers Richbell, William, Charles and Adam "the younger."

On 29 Oct., 1703, Elizabeth, another of the six children, and her husband John Okeson, released their rights to same children for £82.

In 1707, April 2, a final agreement was made between the four brothers by which Adam, "the younger," William and Richbell received lands on Great Neck, and Charles land on Cow Neck and Rockaway, each one settling on their respective lands excepting Adam, "the younger," who settled on Cow Neck. The latter in 1715 conveyed his land on Great Neck to his brother William, whose descendants retained the same until 1870, when the old homestead of seven generations passed into the hands of Wm. R. Grace.

Lieut. Adam Mott, and his neighbor Henry Disbrowe, and Cornelius Mott of Hempstead (whom we cannot trace) were engaged in the growing of tobacco, and between 1660 and 1670 each one had during that time tobacco houses on Mad Nans Neck. (B, p. 19, Wills, N. Y. City; Hemp. Records, B, p. 156.) The translations of the Dutch Mss., Albany, N. Y., show him as engaged in some enterprise in the South River (now the Delaware). This was in 1651, and he was in all probability then buying tobacco which at that period was sold in large quantities by the Long Island traders to the neighboring Dutch plantations. Adam Mott was then living in New Amsterdam, and occupied with Randel Hunt a house owned by Richard Smith, Jr., son of Richard of Conn. (See Trans. Dutch Mss., part 3, p. 265, N. Y. State Library.) He was commissioned by Gov. Rich'd Nicolls as Lieutenant of the Hempstead Militia on 22 April, 1665. The commission is recorded in Liber., 2, folio 26 of Deeds in Sec'y of State Office, Albany, and also name John Symons (Seaman) as Capt., and John Rushmore as Ensign.

The old homestead on Mad Nans Neck, where he finally settled and died, and which later became the home of his son William, was purchased on 28 Jan., 1670, of Henry Disbrowe (120 acres, cons. £61). This was formerly laid out to Capt. John Seaman, who conveyed it to Thos. Seabrooke, 29 Aug., 1669, and from him it passed to Disbrowe (original deeds in possession of Mott family).

Y., he petitioned to be forgiven for selling liquor to the Indians (Col. Hist. Mss., p. 77), and in April of that year he was given a home lot in the town of Hempstead.

On July 14, 1690, then calling himself of Mamaroneck, he conveyed to his brother Joseph of Hempstead, land at Rockaway, which the latter sold in 1692 to his brother Adam (Hemp. Rec., 1898, Vol. I., p. 54). He appears to have left Long Island about this time and settled in Mamaroneck, where he was captain of a company of militia, and on 10 Feb., 1690, was commissioned as Justice (Col. Hist. Mss., p. 194). He m. (according to Bolton) in 1670, Mary, step-dau. of John Richbell. On 20 Dec., 1670, John and Ann Richbell conveyed to their "son-in-law James Mott, and our daughter Mary, his wife" land in Mamaroneck. There is on file in Albany a marriage license dated 5 Sept., 1670, whereby James Mott is licensed to marry "Mary Redman, daughter-in-law of John Richbell." (See under Lieut. Adam Mott (1).)
